[९ - उच्छिष्ट-ब्रह्म-सूक्त]

[अमित्र जब हमें कमजोर देखते हैं , तो हानि पहुँचाने के लिए आक्रामक हो उठते हैं । सामर्थ्य को देखकर वे मर्यादा में बने रहते हैं । ऋषि का भाव है कि आततायी हमारी सामर्थ्य देखकर ही शांत रहें ; ताकि भले लोग शान्ति से बने रहें, शान्ति भंग न हो तथा किसी को मारना भी न पड़े । उद्रारान् प्रदर्शय के दोनों अर्थ होते हैं- (१) ऊपर के आततइयों को शस्त्र दिखायें अथवा ऊपर के पीड़क शस्त्र दिखाकर दुष्टों को शान्त करें ।]

यमोदनं पचतो देवते इह तन्नस्तप उत सत्यं च वेत्तु ॥१२ ॥

हे पृथ्वी देवि ! पिता पुत्रों के सम्मिलन के समान ही आप हम सबके साथ व्यवहार करें । इस पृथ्वी पर हमारे लिए कल्याणकारी वायु बहाते रहें । जिस अन्नभाग को ये दोनों (दम्पती अथवा द्यावा-पृथिवी) परिपक्व करते हैं, वे हमारे तपः प्रभाव और सत्य संकल्प से अवगत हों ॥१२ ॥

३४३०. यद्यत् कृष्णः शकुन एह गत्वा त्सरन् विषक्तं बिल आससाद ।

यह विशाल आधारयुक्त पत्थर हविरूप अन्न को कूटकर तैयार करता है । पवित्रे (पवित्रकारक उपकरणों) से पुनीत होता हुआ यह दुष्ट वृत्तियों (कूड़े- करकट) का संहार करे । हे ओदन (परिपक्व अन्न) ! आप पृथ्वी की त्वचा पर बैठें और अतिकल्याणप्रद हों । स्त्री- पुरुषों और उनकी सन्ततियों को पाप स्पर्श भी न कर सके ॥१४ ॥

३४३३. सप्त मेधान् पशवः पर्यगृह्णन् य एषां ज्योतिष्माँ उत यश्चकर्श ।
त्रयस्त्रिंशद् देवतास्तान्त्सचन्ते स नः स्वर्गमभि नेष लोकम् ॥१६ ॥

वानस्पत्य उद्यतो मा जिहिंसीर्मा तण्डुलं वि शरीर्देवयन्तम् ॥१८ ॥

३४३७. त्रयो लोकाः संमिता ब्राह्मणेन द्यौरेवासौ पृथिव्य१न्तरिक्षम् ।

३४३९. पृथिवीं त्वा पृथिव्यामा वेशयामि तनूः समानी विकृता त एषा ।

३४४१. अग्निः पचन् रक्षतु त्वा पुरस्तादिन्द्रो रक्षतु दक्षिणतो मरुत्वान् ।

पवित्र कर्मों से पावन बनकर जल धाराएँ शुद्ध करती हैं । वे द्युलोक और फिर पृथ्वी को प्राप्त होती हैं । इन जीवनदायिनी, जीव को कृतार्थ करने वाली, सबकी आधारभूत, पात्र में अधिष्ठित जलधाराओं को अग्निदेव चारों ओर से संतप्त (दीप्त) करें ॥२५ ॥

३४४३. आ यन्ति दिवः पृथिवीं सचन्ते भूम्याः सचन्ते अध्यन्तरिक्षम् ।

३४४४. उतेव प्रभ्वीरुत संमितास उत शुक्राः शुचयश्चामृतासः ।

३४४९. नवं बर्हिरोदनाय स्तृणीत प्रियं हृदश्चक्षुषो वल्ग्वस्तु।

हे अन्न ! आप धारणकर्त्ता हैं, अत: आप पृथ्वी के आधार पर स्थिर हों, आप अच्युत्य को देवशक्तियाँ च्युत न करें । जिनके पुत्र जीवित हैं, ऐसे स्त्री- पुरुष आपको अग्न्याधान से पुष्टि प्रदान करें ॥३५ ॥

३४५३. सर्वान्त्समागा अभिजित्य लोकान् यावन्तः कामाः समतीतृपस्तान् ।

तस्मिञ्छ्रयातै महिषः सुपर्णो देवा एनं देवताभ्यः प्र यच्छान् ॥३८ ॥

३४५६. यद्यज्जाया पचति त्वत् परः परः पतिर्वा जाये त्वत् तिरः ।

इस (नारी या प्रकृति) से उत्पन्न सभी पुत्रों को, जो हमारे आस- पास भूमि की सेवा करते हैं, उन्हें (ओदन) पात्र के निकट बुलाएँ । पुत्र भी इस बात को समझते हुए इस नाभि (केन्द्र या यज्ञ) में आ जाए ॥४० ॥

अस्माभिर्दत्तो निहितः स्वर्गस्त्रिभिः काण्डैस्त्रीन्त्स्वर्गानरुक्षत् ॥४२ ॥

हम सत्य, तप और देवताओं के निमित्त इस ओदनरूपी निधि को समर्पित करते हैं । आपसी कर्म के आदान-प्रदान रूप जुआ में और सभा- समिति में भी यह हमसे दूर न हो, हमें त्याग कर अन्य के पास न जाए ॥४६ ॥

अनूनं पात्रं निहितं न एतत् पक्तारं पक्वः पुनरा विशाति ॥४८ ॥

हरेक सद्गृहस्थ 'दान देता हूँ' ऐसा ही सदैव कहे । दान के अनुकूल भावना भी रखे । याचक ब्राह्मणों को वशा का दान करे । यह दान, दाता को प्रजा और सन्तति प्रदान करने वाला है ॥१ ॥

३४८२. पदोरस्या अधिष्ठानाद् विक्लिन्दुर्नाम विन्दति।

३४८४. यदस्याः कस्मै चिद् भोगाय बालान् कश्चित् प्रकृन्तति।

[वृक्ष- वनस्पतियों को पृथ्वी की लोम राशि कहा गया है। उन्हें जीवन की अनिवार्य आवश्यकताओं के लिए तो प्रयुक्त किया जा सकता है, भोग- विलास, प्रदर्शन- वैभव के लिए काटना पाप है। पर्यावरण बिगड़ने से संतति पर संकट आते हैं।]

[गोपति संरक्षक के प्रतीक हैं तथा कौवे स्वार्थ, धूर्त प्रकृति के लोगों के पर्याय हैं।]

यदि गौ की परिचारिका, गौ का गोबर और मूत्र इधर-उधर फेंकती है, तो उस पापकर्म से गोपति का रूप विकृत हो जाता है ॥९ ॥

३४८८. य एनां वनिमायन्ति तेषां देवकृता वशा। ब्रह्मज्येयं तदब्रुवन् य एनां निप्रियायते ॥११॥

३४९३. चरेदेवा त्रैहायणादविज्ञातगदा सती । वशां च विद्यान्नारद ब्राह्मणास्तर्ह्येष्याः ॥१६ ।

[काण्ड १० के १०.७ मन्त्र में वशा के ऊध और स्तन पर्जन्य तथा विद्युत् कहे गये हैं । जो यह रहस्य नहीं जानते तथा उत्पादक द्रव्यों की आहुतियाँ ब्रह्मकर्म-यज्ञ में देते हैं, उन्हें वशा का पय मिलता है ।]

३४९७. देवा वशामयाचन् मुखं कृत्वा ब्राह्मणम् । तेषां सर्वेषामददद्धेडं न्येति मानुषः ॥२० ।

३४९८. हेडं पशूनां न्येति ब्राह्मणेभ्योऽददद् वशाम् । देवानां निहितं भागं मर्त्यश्चेन्निप्रियायते

देवताओं की सुरक्षित निधि रूप में रखे गये भाग (वशा) को जो मनुष्य अपना प्रिय मानकर ब्राह्मणों को दान स्वरूप नहीं देता, तो उसे पशुओं का भी कोप भाजन बनना पड़ता है ॥२१ ॥

[ब्रह्मनिष्ठों में भी जो विद्वान्-अनुभवी- कुशल हों- उन्हें सृजन विद्या के उपयोग का अधिकार सौंपना चाहिए ।]

३५०१. देवा वशामयाचन् यस्मिन्नग्रे अजायत । तामेतां विद्यान्नारदः सह देवैरुदाजत ॥२४।

आयुश्च तस्य भूतिं च देवा वृश्चन्ति हीडिताः ॥२८ ॥

आविष्कृणुष्व रूपाणि यदा स्थाम जिघांसति ॥२९ ॥

[यह एक सूक्ष्म चक्र है । भावना से देवशक्तियों का सम्पर्क होता है और उसी आधार पर प्रतिभा के सदुपयोग का ताना- बाना बुना जाता है ।]

३५०९. स्वधाकारेण पितृभ्यो यज्ञेन देवताभ्यः । दानेन राजन्यो वशाया मातुर्हेडं न गच्छति ।

अथाहुर्नारकं लोकं निरुन्धानस्य याचिताम् ॥३६ ॥

३५१४. प्रवीयमाना चरति क्रुद्धा गोपतये वशा । वेहतं मा मन्यमानो मृत्योः पाशेषु बध्यताम्

सृजनशील वशा (प्रतिभा), गोपति (इन्द्रियों के स्वामी अविवेकी व्यक्ति) के लिए क्रोधित होकर विचरण करती है । वह अभिशाप देती है कि मुझे वन्ध्या (अनुत्पादक) स्थिति में रखने वाला मृत्युपाश से आबद्ध हो ॥३७ ॥

[लोकहित के लिए देव शक्तियों द्वारा विकसित विद्या या प्रतिभा को जो घर में ही परिपक्व करके स्वार्थ में प्रयुक्त करना चाहते हैं, उनकी संतति की मति भ्रष्ट हो जाती है ।]

३५१६. महदेषाव तपति चरन्ती गोषु गौरपि । अथो ह गोपतये वशाददुषे विषं दुहे ॥३९

यह गौ (वशा) गौओं (इन्द्रियों) के बीच चरती हुई भी अत्यधिक सन्ताप देती है, मानो दान न देने वाले गोरक्षक के लिए यह दूधरूपी विष देती है ॥३९ ॥

[प्रतिभा से इन्द्रिय सुख अर्जित करने वालों की इन्द्रियाँ विलासी होकर क्षीण होती जाती हैं । उनके लिए दूध भी विष बन जाता है ।]

तासां विलिप्त्यं भीमामुदाकुरुत नारदः ॥४१ ॥

तामब्रवीन्नारद एषा वशानां वशतमेति ॥४२ ॥

३५२०. कति नु वशा नारद यास्त्वं वेत्थ मनुष्यजाः ।
तास्त्वा पृच्छामि विद्वांसं कस्या नाश्नीयादब्राह्मणः ॥४३ ॥

३५२१. विलिप्त्या बृहस्पते या च सूतवशा वशा ।

३५२२. नमस्ते अस्तु नारदानुष्ठु विदुषे वशा । कतमासां भीमतमा यामदत्त्वा पराभवेत् ॥

तस्या नाश्नीयादब्राह्मणो य आशंसेत भूत्याम् ॥४६ ॥

ताः प्र यच्छेद् ब्रह्मभ्यः सो ऽनाव्रस्कः प्रजापतौ ॥४७ ॥

वशां चेदेनं याचेयुर्या भीमाददुषो गृहे ॥४८ ॥

"हे ब्रह्म ज्ञानियो ! यह (वशा) आपकी हवि (आपके लिए समर्पित) है ।" ब्राह्मण द्वारा याचना किये जाने पर गोपति ऐसा उच्चारित करे । अदानी के घर में वशा अत्यंत भयंकर हो जाती है ॥४८ ॥

[ऋषि- सावित्री, सूर्या । देवता- सोम, ६ स्वविवाह, ७-२२, २६, २८- ६४ आत्मा, २३ सोमार्क, २४ चन्द्रमा, २५ विवाह मन्त्र आशीष, वधूवास संस्पर्शमोचन, २७ वधूवास संस्पर्श-मोचन । छन्द- अनुष्टुप्, १४ विराट् प्रस्तार पंक्ति, १५ आस्तार पंक्ति, १९-२०, २४, ३२-३३, ३७, ३९, ४०, ४७, ४९-५०, ५३, ५६-५७ ५८-५९, ६१ त्रिष्टुप्, २१, ४६ जगती, २३, ३१, ४५ बृहतीगर्भा त्रिष्टुप्, २९, ५५ पुरस्ताद् बृहती, ३४ प्रस्तार पंक्ति, ३८ पुरोबृहती त्रिपदा परोष्णिक्, ४८ पथ्यापंक्ति, ५४, ६४ भुरिक् त्रिष्टुप्, ६० परानुष्टुप् त्रिष्टुप् ।]

सत्य ने पृथ्वी को आकाश में स्थापित किया है । सूर्यदेव द्युलोक को स्तम्भित किये हुए हैं । ऋत से आदित्यगण स्थित हैं और सोम द्युलोक के ऊपर स्थित है ॥१ ॥

आदित्यादि देव सोम के कारण ही बलशाली हैं । सोम द्वारा ही पृथ्वी महिमामयी हुई है । इन नक्षत्रों के बीच भी सोम को ही स्थापित किया गया है ॥२ ॥

[सूक्ष्म सोम प्रवाह प्रकृति एवं प्राणियों को भी शक्ति देते हैं ; किन्तु वे सूक्ष्म प्रवाह मुख से सेवनीय नहीं हैं । वे प्रवाह प्राण - प्रक्रिया द्वारा ग्रहण या धारण किये जाने वाले हैं ।]

३७९५. यत् त्वा सोम प्रपिबन्ति तत आ प्यायसे पुनः ।

हे दिव्यसोम ! आप बृहती विद्या के जानकारों से विदित तथा गुह्य विधियों द्वारा सुरक्षित हैं (संकीर्ण मानस वाले कुपात्र इसे नहीं पा सकते) । आप ग्रावा (सोम निष्पादक यंत्र या गरिमामय वाणी) की ध्वनि को सुनते हैं । आपको पृथ्वी के प्राणी सेवन करने में सक्षम नहीं हैं ॥५ ॥

३७९७. चित्तिरा उपबर्हणं चक्षुरा अभ्यञ्जनम् ।

सूर्याया भद्रमिद् वासो गाथयैति परिष्कृता ॥७ ॥

३७९९. स्तोमा आसन् प्रतिधयः कुरीरं छन्द ओपशः ।

स्तवन (स्तुति मंत्र) ही सूर्या के लिए अन्न था, कुरीर नामक छन्द सिर के आभूषण थे । सूर्या के वर अश्विनी कुमार थे तथा अग्नि अग्रगामी दूतरूप थे ॥८ ॥

३८००. सोमो वधूयुरभवदश्विनास्तामुभा वरा ।
सूर्यां यत् पत्ये शंसन्तीं मनसा सविताददात् ॥९ ॥

सूर्या द्वारा हृदय से पति की कामना करने पर जब (सूर्य ने) उन्हें अश्विनीकुमारों को प्रदान किया, तब सोम भी वधूयु (उनके साथ विवाह के इच्छुक) थे; परन्तु अश्विनीकुमार ही उनके वररूप में स्वीकृत किये गये ॥९ ॥

३८०१. मनो अस्या अन आसीद् द्यौरासीदुत च्छदिः ।
शुक्रावनड्वाहावास्तां यदयात् सूर्या पतिम् ॥१० ॥

श्रोत्रे ते चक्रे आस्तां दिवि पन्थाश्चराचरः ॥११ ॥

अनो मनस्मयं सूर्यारोहत् प्रयती पतिम् ॥१२ ॥

मघासु हन्यन्ते गावः फल्गुनीषु व्यु ह्यते ॥१३ ॥

सूर्या के पतिगृह - गमनकाल में सूर्य ने पुत्री के प्रति स्नेहरूप जो धन स्रवित किया (दिया) , उसे पहले ही भेज दिया था। मघा नक्षत्र में विदाई के समय दी गई गौओं को हाँका गया तथा अर्जुनी अर्थात् पूर्वाफाल्गुनी और उत्तराफाल्गुनी नक्षत्र में कन्या को पति के गृह भेजा गया ॥१३ ॥

३८०५. यदश्विना पृच्छमानावयातं त्रिचक्रेण वहतुं सूर्यायाः ।
क्वैकं चक्रं वामासीत् क्व देष्ट्राय तस्थथुः ॥१४ ॥

हे अश्विनीकुमारो ! जिस समय आप दोनों तीनचक्रों से युक्त रथ से सूर्या (सूर्यपुत्री) को ले जाने के लिए पहुँचे थे, तब आपका एक चक्र कहाँ स्थित था ? आप दोनों अपने-अपने क्रिया - व्यापार में प्रेरणा प्रदान करने वाले कौन से स्थान पर रहते थे ? ॥१४ ॥

अनु तद् वामजानन् पुत्रः पितरमवृणीत पूषा ॥१५ ॥

३८०७. द्वे ते चक्रे सूर्ये ब्रह्माण ऋतुथा विदुः। अथैकं चक्रं यद् गुहा तदद्धातय इद् विदुः ॥

३८०८. अर्यमणं यजामहे सुबन्धुं पतिवेदनम्। उर्वारुकमिव
बन्धनात् प्रेतो मुञ्चामि नामुतः ॥१७ ॥

यथेयमिन्द्र मीढ्वः सुपुत्रा सुभगासति ॥१८ ॥

३८१०. प्र त्वा मुञ्चामि वरुणस्य पाशाद् येन त्वाबध्नात् सविता सुशेवाः ।

हे कन्ये ! आपको हम वरुण के बन्धनों से छुड़ाते हैं। सवितादेव ने सेवा कार्य के लिए आपको बन्धनयुक्त किया था । सत्य के आधार और सत्कर्मों के निवासरूप लोक में अनिष्टरहित पति के साथ आपको विराजमान करते हैं ॥१९ ॥

[सविता द्वारा सूर्या को, पिता द्वारा पुत्री को विवाह से पूर्व जो सेवा कार्य सौंपे जाते हैं, उनके उत्तरदायित्वों से उसे विवाह के समय मुक्त कर दिया जाता है ।]

३८११. भगस्त्वेतो नयतु हस्तगृह्याश्विना त्वा प्र वहतां रथेन ।

भगदेव आपको यहाँ से हाथ पकड़कर ले जाएँ । आगे अश्विनीकुमार आपको रथ में विराजित करके ले चलें । आप अपने पतिगृह की ओर प्रस्थान करें । वहाँ आप गृहस्वामिनी और सबको अपने नियंत्रण (अनुशासन) में रखने वाली बनें । वहाँ आप विवेकपूर्ण वाणी का प्रयोग करें ॥२० ॥

३८१२. इह प्रियं प्रजायै ते समृध्यतामस्मिन् गृहे गार्हपत्याय जागृहि ।
एना पत्या तन्वं१ सं स्पृशस्वाथ जिर्विर्विदथमा वदासि ॥२१ ॥

३८१३. इहैव स्तं मा वि यौष्टं विश्वमायुर्व्य श्नुतम् ।
क्रीडन्तौ पुत्रैर्नप्तृभिर्मोदमानौ स्वस्तकौ ॥२२ ॥

३८१४. पूर्वापरं चरतो माययैतौ शिशू क्रीडन्तौ परि यातोऽर्णवम् ।
विश्वान्यो भुवना विचष्ट ऋतूँरन्यो विदधज्जायसे नवः ॥२३ ॥

३८१५. नवोनवो भवसि जायमानोऽह्नां केतुरुषसामेष्यग्रम् ।

कृत्यैषा पद्वती भूत्वा जाया विशते पतिम् ॥२५ ॥

एधन्ते अस्या ज्ञातयः पतिर्बन्धेषु बध्यते ॥२६ ॥

पतिर्यद् वध्वो३ वाससः स्वमङ्गमभ्यूर्णुते ॥२७ ॥

उक्त (कृत्या जन्य) विकारों की स्थिति में स्त्री पीड़ादायक होती है । ऐसी स्थिति में वधू से संयुक्त होने से पति का शरीर भी कान्तिरहित तथा रोगादि से दूषित हो जाता है ॥२७ ॥

३८१९. आशसनं विशसनमथो अधिविकर्तनम् ।
सूर्यायाः पश्य रूपाणि तानि ब्रह्मोत शुम्भति ॥२८ ॥

३८२०. तृष्टमेतत् कटुकमपाष्ठवद् विषवन्नैतदत्तवे ।
सूर्यां यो ब्रह्मा वेद स इद् वाधूयमर्हति ॥२९ ॥

यह स्थिति दोषपूर्ण, अग्रहणीय, दूर रखने योग्य एवं विष के समान घातक (पीड़ाजनक) है । यह व्यवहार के योग्य नहीं है, जो मेधावी विद्वान्, सूर्या को भली प्रकार जानते हैं, वे ही वधू के साथ हितकारी सम्बन्ध स्थापित करने योग्य होते हैं ॥२९ ॥

प्रायश्चित्तिं यो अध्येति येन जाया न रिष्यति ॥३० ॥

ब्रह्मणस्पते पतिमस्यै रोचय चारु संभलो वदतु वाचमेताम् ॥३१ ॥

शुभं यतीरुस्रियाः सोमवर्चसो विश्वे देवाः क्रन्निह वो मनांसि ॥३२ ॥

३८२४. इमं गावः प्रजया सं विशाथायं देवानां न मिनाति भागम् ।
अस्मै वः पूषा मरुतश्च सर्वे अस्मै वो धाता सविता सुवाति ॥३३ ॥

हे गौओ ! आप अपने बछड़ों के साथ इस घर में प्रविष्ट हों, इससे देवों का भाग विलुप्त नहीं होता । पूषादेव, मरुद्गण, विधाता तथा सवितादेव इसी मनुष्य के निमित्त आपकी उत्पत्ति करते हैं ॥३३ ॥

सं भगेन समर्यम्णा सं धाता सृजतु वर्चसा ॥३४ ॥

यद् गोष्वश्विना वर्चस्तेनेमां वर्चसावतम् ॥३५ ॥

हे अश्विनीकुमारो ! जो तेजस्विता आँखों में, सम्पत्ति में और गौओं में विद्यमान है, उसी तेज से आप इसका (वधू का) संरक्षण करें ॥३५ ॥

येनाक्षा अभ्यषिच्यन्त तेनेमां वर्चसावतम् ॥३६ ॥

हे अश्विनीदेवो ! जिस तेज से महान् गौ का जघन अर्थात् दुग्धाशय भाग, जिससे सम्पत्ति और आँखें अभिपूरित हैं, उसी से आप इस (वधू) का संरक्षण करें ॥३६ ॥

३८२८. यो अनिध्मो दीदयदप्स्व१ न्तर्यं विप्रास ईडते अध्वरेषु ।
अपां नपान्मधुमतीरपो दा याभिरिन्द्रो वावृधे वीर्या वान् ॥३७ ॥

३८२९. इदमहं रुशन्तं ग्राभं तनूदूषिमपोहामि । यो भद्रो रोचनस्तमुदचामि ॥३८ ॥

अर्यम्णो अग्निं पर्येतु पूषन् प्रतीक्षन्ते श्वशुरो देवरश्च ॥३९ ॥

३८३१. शं ते हिरण्यं शमु सन्त्वापः शं मेथिर्भवतु शं युगस्य तर्द्म ।

३८५६. तुभ्यमग्रे पर्यवहन्त्सूर्यां वहतुना सह । स नः पतिभ्यो जायां दा अग्ने प्रजया सह ॥१

३८५७. पुनः पत्नीमग्निरदादायुषा सह वर्चसा ।

तास्ते जनित्रमभि ताः परेहि नमस्ते गन्धर्वर्तुना कृणोमि ॥३४॥

३८९०. नमो गन्धर्वस्य नमसे नमो भामाय चक्षुषे च कृण्मः।

३८९१. राया वयं सुमनसः स्यामोदितो गन्धर्वमावीवृताम।

३८९७. यं मे दत्तो ब्रह्मभागं वधूयोर्वाधूयं वासो वध्वश्च वस्त्रम् ।

[जब अन्दर के जीव का शरीर परिपक्व हो जाता है तो वह उस संकीर्ण आवरण को तोड़कर बाहर निकलता है । इसी आधार पर अण्डज पक्षी को द्विज कहते हैं । मनुष्य भी साधना द्वारा परिपक्व होकर जब संकीर्णता से बाहर निकलता है, तो द्विज कहलाता है, तब वह मुक्ति मार्ग पर चल पड़ता है ।]

मा मा प्रापत् पाप्मा मोत मृत्युरन्तर्दधेऽहं सलिलेन वाचः ॥२९ ॥

हम सत्यनिष्ठा से वसन्तादि ऋतुओं से तथा पूर्वकाल और भविष्यत्काल में उत्पन्न होने वाले समस्त पदार्थों से संरक्षित रहें। नरक का निमित्त कारण पाप कर्म और मृत्यु हमें प्राप्त न हो। हम मन्त्ररूपी वाणी से स्वयं को रक्षित (परिष्कृत) करते हैं ॥२९ ॥

४२८३. अग्निर्मा गोप्ता परि पातु विश्वत उद्यन्त्सूर्यो नुदतां मृत्युपाशान्।

४२८५. न ते सखा सख्यं वष्ट्येतत् सलक्ष्मा यद् विषुरूपा भवाति।
महस्पुत्रासो असुरस्य वीरा दिवो धर्तार उर्विया परि ख्यन् ॥२॥

नकिरस्य प्र मिनन्ति व्रतानि वेद नावस्य पृथिवी उत द्यौः ॥५ ॥

४२८९. को अद्य युङ्क्ते धुरि गा ऋतस्य शिमीवतो भामिनो दुर्हृणायून् ।

४२९०. को अस्य वेद प्रथमस्याह्नः क ईं ददर्श क इह प्र वोचत् ।

जायेव पत्ये तन्वं रिरिच्यां वि चिद् वृहेव रथ्येव चक्रा ॥८ ॥

४२९२. न तिष्ठन्ति न नि मिषन्त्येते देवानां स्पश इह ये चरन्ति ।
अन्येन मदाहनो याहि तूयं तेन वि वृह रथ्येव चक्रा ॥९ ॥

४२९३. रात्रीभिरस्मा अहभिर्दशस्येत् सूर्यस्य चक्षुर्मुहुरुन्मिमीयात् ।
दिवा पृथिव्या मिथुना सबन्धू यमीर्यमस्य विवृहादजामि ॥१० ॥

४२९४. आ घा ता गच्छानुत्तरा युगानि यत्र जामयः कृणवन्नजामि ।
उप बर्बृहि वृषभाय बाहुमन्यमिच्छस्व सुभगे पतिं मत् ॥११ ॥

४२९५. किं भ्रातासद् यदनाथं भवाति किमु स्वसा यन्निर्ऋतिर्निगच्छात् ।
काममूता बह्वे३तद् रपामि तन्वा मे तन्वं१ सं पिपृग्धि ॥१२ ॥

४२९६. न ते नाथं यम्यत्राहमस्मि न ते तनूं तन्वा३ सं पपृच्याम् ।
अन्येन मत् प्रमुदः कल्पयस्व न ते भ्राता सुभगे वष्ट्येतत् ॥१३ ॥

४२९७. न वा उ ते तनूं तन्वा३ सं पपृच्यां पापमाहुर्यः स्वसारं निगच्छात् ।
असंयदेतन्मनसो हृदो मे भ्राता स्वसुः शयने यच्छयीय ॥१४ ॥

अन्या किल त्वां कक्ष्येव युक्तं परि ष्वजातै लिबुजेव वृक्षम् ॥१५ ॥

४२९९. अन्यमू षु यम्यन्य उ त्वां परि ष्वजातै लिबुजेव वृक्षम् ।
तस्य वा त्वं मन इच्छा स वा तवाधा कृणुष्व संविदं सुभद्राम् ॥१६ ॥

४३००. त्रीणि च्छन्दांसि कवयो वि येतिरे पुरुरूपं दर्शतं विश्वचक्षणम् ।
आपो वाता ओषधयस्तान्येकस्मिन् भुवन आर्पितानि ॥१७ ॥

४३०१. वृषा वृष्णे दुदुहे दोहसा दिवः पयांसि यह्वो अदितेरदाभ्यः ।
विश्वं स वेद वरुणो यथा धिया स यज्ञियो यजति यज्ञियाँ ऋतून् ॥१८ ॥

इष्टस्य मध्ये अदितिर्नि धातु नो भ्राता नो ज्येष्ठः प्रथमो वि वोचति ॥१९ ॥

४३०३. सो चिन्नु भद्रा क्षुमती यशस्वत्युषा उवास मनवे स्वर्वती ।
यदीमुशन्तमुशतामनु क्रतुमग्निं होतारं विदथाय जीजनन् ॥२० ॥

४३०४. अध त्यं द्रप्सं विभ्वं विचक्षणं विराभरदिषिरः श्येनो अध्वरे ।
यदी विशो वृणते दस्ममार्या अग्निं होतारमध धीरजायत ॥२१ ॥

४३०५. सदासि रण्वो यवसेव पुष्यते होत्राभिरग्ने मनुषः स्वध्वरः ।
विप्रस्य वा यच्छशमान उक्थ्यो३ वाजं ससवाँ उपयासि भूरिभिः ॥२२ ॥

विवक्ति वह्निः स्वपस्यते मखस्तविष्यते असुरो वेपते मती ॥२३ ॥

४३०७. यस्ते अग्ने सुमतिं मर्तो अख्यत् सहसः सूनो अति स प्र शृण्वे ।
इषं दधानो वहमानो अश्वैरा स द्युमाँ अमवान् भूषति द्यून् ॥२४ ॥

आ नो वह रोदसी देवपुत्रे माकिर्देवानामप भूरिह स्याः ॥२५ ॥

रत्ना च यद् विभजासि स्वधावो भागं नो अत्र वसुमन्तं वीतात् ॥२६ ॥

४३१०. अन्वग्निरुषसामग्रमख्यदन्वहानि प्रथमो जातवेदाः ।
अनु सूर्य उषसो अनु रश्मीननु द्यावापृथिवी आ विवेश ॥२७ ॥

प्रति सूर्यस्य पुरुधा च रश्मीन् प्रति द्यावापृथिवी आ ततान ॥२८ ॥

४३१२. द्यावा ह क्षामा प्रथमे ऋतेनाभिश्रावे भवतः सत्यवाचा ।
देवो यन्मर्तान् यजथाय कृण्वन्त्सीदद्धोता प्रत्यङ् स्वमसुं यन् ॥२९ ॥

४३१३. देवो देवान् परिभूर्ऋतेन वहा नो हव्यं प्रथमश्चिकित्वान् ।

४३१४. अर्चामि वां वर्धायापो घृतस्नू द्यावाभूमी शृणुतं रोदसी मे ।
अहा यद् देवा असुनीतिमायन् मध्वा नो अत्र पितरा शिशीताम् ॥३१ ॥

४३१५. स्वावृग् देवस्यामृतं यदी गोरतो जातासो धारयन्त उर्वी ।
विश्वे देवा अनु तत् ते यजुर्गुर्दुहे यदेनी दिव्यं घृतं वाः ॥३२ ॥

४३१६. किं स्विन्नो राजा जगृहे कदस्याति व्रतं चकृमा को वि वेद ।
मित्रश्चिद्धि ष्मा जुहुराणो देवाञ्छ्लोको न यातामपि वाजो अस्ति ॥३३ ॥

४३१७. दुर्मन्त्वत्रामृतस्य नाम सलक्ष्मा यद् विषुरूपा भवाति ।

सूर्ये ज्योतिरदधुर्मास्य१क्तून् परि द्योतनिं चरतो अजस्रा ॥३५ ॥

४३१९. यस्मिन् देवा मन्मनि संचरन्त्यपीच्ये३ न वयमस्य विद्म ।
मित्रो नो अत्रादितिरनागान्त्सविता देवो वरुणाय वोचत् ॥३६ ॥

४३२०. सखाय आ शिषामहे ब्रह्मेन्द्राय वज्रिणे। स्तुष ऊ षु नृतमाय धृष्णवे ॥३७ ॥

हे मित्रो ! स्तोत्रों से, वज्र धारण करने वाले इन्द्रदेव की स्तुति करते हुए, हम उनसे आशीर्वाद की याचना करते हैं। श्रेष्ठ वीर तथा शत्रुओं को पराजित करने वाले इन्द्रदेव की, आप सभी के कल्याण के लिए हम स्तुति करते हैं ॥३७ ॥

४३२१. शवसा ह्यसि श्रुतो वृत्रहत्येन वृत्रहा। मघैर्मघोनो अति शूर दाशसि ॥३८ ॥

४३२२. स्तेगो न क्षामत्येषि पृथिवीं मही नो वाता इह वान्तु भूमौ।
मित्रो नो अत्र वरुणो युज्यमानो अग्निर्वने न व्यसृष्ट शोकम् ॥३९ ॥

जिस प्रकार वर्षाकाल में मेढक पृथ्वी को छोड़कर जल में छलाँग लगाता है, उसी प्रकार आप भी विस्तृत भू-भाग को लाँघकर ऊपर की ओर गमन करें। वायुदेव, अग्नि के सहयोग से हमारे निमित्त सुखकारक बनकर बहें। प्राणि- समुदाय के सखारूप मित्रदेव और वरुणदेव अग्नि द्वारा घास को पूर्णरूप से भस्मसात् करने के समान ही हमारे दुःख और कष्टों को दूर करें ॥३९ ॥

(ऋषिगण) यम (देवता अथवा अनुशासन) के निमित्त (यज्ञ में) सोम का अभिषव करते हैं । आहुतियाँ वे यमदेव को समर्पित करते हैं । सोम और हवियों से अलंकृत अग्निदेव को दूत बनाकर यज्ञदेव यम की ओर (निकट) ही जाते हैं ॥१ ॥

४३४७. यमाय घृतवत् पयो राज्ञे हविर्जुहोतन । स नो जीवेष्वा यमेद् दीर्घमायुः प्र जीवसे

इस सूक्त में अभिजित् सहित सभी नक्षत्रों का वर्णन है । ज्योतिर्गणित में सवा दो नक्षत्रों की एक राशि मानी जाती है, इस प्रकार १२ x २.२५ =२७ नक्षत्रों का ही प्रयोग होता है; किन्तु अभिजित् भी २८ वाँ मान्य नक्षत्र है । राशि गणना 'मेष' से तदनुसार नक्षत्र गणना 'अश्विनी' से की जाती है । इस सूक्त में कृत्तिका नक्षत्र से वर्णन प्रारम्भ करके चक्र पूरा किया गया है । लोकमान्य बाल गंगाधर तिलक ने अपने प्रसिद्ध ग्रन्थ 'ओरायन' (सन् १८९३ ई०) की भूमिका में इसी 'कृत्तिका' नक्षत्र की प्रमुखता के आधार पर 'वेदों का काल निर्धारण' सुनिश्चित किया है । उनका मानना है कि जिन दिनों कृत्तिका नक्षत्र की प्रमुखता थी , कृत्तिका नक्षत्र से नक्षत्र चक्र प्रारम्भ होता था; उसी नक्षत्र को आधार मानकर दूसरे नक्षत्रों की गतिविधि तथा दिन-रात की गणना होती थी, वही ब्राह्मण काल था, संहिताकाल इससे भी पूर्व था, उसे 'मृगशिराकाल' कहते थे; क्योंकि उस समय 'मृगशिरा' नक्षत्र की प्रमुखता थी । उनके मतानुसार इस समय से भी पूर्व, जिसे अदितिकाल (६०००-४००० ई०पू०) कहते हैं, मन्त्रों का प्रादुर्भाव हो चुका था-

(हे दुःस्वप्न !) तुम यमलोक से पृथ्वी पर आए हो, निःसंकोच- निर्भय होकर तुम स्त्रियों और मरणधर्मा मनुष्यों के समीप पहुँच जाते हो । तुम प्राणधारी आत्माओं के हृदयस्थल में दुःस्वप्न का निर्माण कर देते हो और उनके रथ (मनोरथ) पर साथ ही बैठकर जाते हो ॥१ ॥

[स्वप्न यम के लोक से आते हैं । यम अनुशासन के देवता हैं । उनके प्रतिनिधि चित्रगुप्त (विचित्र और गुप्त रूप से) अवचेतन मस्तिष्क-चित्त में स्थित रहते हैं । जब स्थूल मस्तिष्क विश्राम करने लगता है, तभी अवचेतन में समाहित भले-बुरे विचार अपना रूप प्रकट करने लगते हैं । अपने ही कुसंस्कार दुःस्वप्न बनकर मनुष्य के मनोरथों के साथ जुड़ जाते हैं ।]

४९७४. बन्धस्त्वाग्रे विश्वचया अपश्यत् पुरा रात्र्या जनितोरेके अह्नि ।

हे दुःस्वप्न ! सबके स्रष्टा (स्व-स्व कर्मानुसार) आबद्धकर्ता ने रात्रि के उद्भव से पूर्व एक दिन तुम्हें देखा था । उसी समय से तुम इस जगत् में संव्याप्त हो । वैद्यों से तुम अपने स्वरूप को छिपा लेते हो ॥२ ॥

[दुःस्वप्न कठिन रोग की तरह लोगों को दुखी करते हैं ; किन्तु काय चिकित्सक इस रोग का निदान नहीं कर पाते ।]

४९७५. बृहद्गावासुरेभ्योऽधि देवानुपावर्तत महिमानमिच्छन्।

४९७६. नैतां विदुः पितरो नोत देवा येषां जल्पिश्चरत्यन्तरेदम्।

इस स्वप्न में जिनका वार्तालाप चलता है, उन्हें न तो पितरगण जानते हैं और न देवगण। वरुणदेव द्वारा उपदिष्ट नेतृत्वकर्त्ता आदित्य इस स्वप्न के अप् तत्त्व (सृष्टि के मूल क्रियाशील तत्त्व) से उत्पन्न त्रित (त्रिगुणात्मक सृष्टि) में स्थापित करते हैं ॥४ ॥

४९७७. यस्य क्रूरमभजन्त दुष्कृतोऽस्वप्नेन सुकृतः पुण्यमायुः ।

जिस स्वप्न के प्रभाव से दुष्ट- दुराचारी भयंकर फल प्राप्त करते हैं और पुण्यात्मा पुण्यकर्मों के प्रभाव से दीर्घायु को भोगते हैं, ऐसे हे स्वप्न ! तुम परम बन्धु (परमात्मा या जीवात्मा) के साथ रहते हुए स्वर्गीय सुखों का आनन्द पाते हो तथा तपाये गये मन से उत्पन्न होते हो ॥५ ॥

[मन में जो भाव पककर अवचेतन तक पहुँच जाते हैं; वे ही स्वप्नों में प्रकट होते हैं। मानसिक संकल्पों के तपने-परिपाक होने से ही स्वप्न उपजते हैं। वे दुष्ट स्वभाव वालों के लिए भयंकर तथा सद्भाव वालों के लिए आनन्दप्रद होते हैं ।]

४९७८. विद्म ते सर्वाः परिजाः पुरस्ताद् विद्म स्वप्न यो अधिपा इहा ते।

गिरिभ्रजो नोर्मयो मदन्तो बृहस्पतिमभ्य१र्का अनावन् ॥१ ॥

अंगिरस् (बृहस्पति) ने गुप्त स्थान में रहने वाली गौओं (वाणियों या किरणों) को प्रकाशित किया । वे देव भग (ऐश्वर्य) की तरह अर्यमा (आदित्य या सृजेता) को लाकर प्रजाजनों में मित्र की तरह रहने वाले दम्पत्ती (नर-मादा) को सुसज्जित करते हैं । हे बृहस्पते ! आप हमें युद्ध के अश्वों की तरह शक्तिसम्पन्न बनाएँ ॥२ ॥

५०९६. साध्वर्या अतिथिनीरिषिरा स्पार्हाः सुवर्णा अनवद्यरूपाः ।

५०९८. अप ज्योतिषा तमो अन्तरिक्षादुद्नः शीपालमिव वात आजत् ।
बृहस्पतिरनुमृश्या वलस्याभ्रमिव वात आ चक्र आ गाः ॥५ ॥

दद्भिर्न जिह्वा परिविष्टमाददाविर्निधीँरकृणोदुस्त्रियाणाम् ॥६ ॥

५१०१. अश्नापिनद्धं मधु पर्यपश्यन्मत्स्यं न दीन उदनि क्षियन्तम् ।

५१०२. सोषामविन्दत् स स्व१: सो अग्निं सो अर्केण वि बबाधे तमांसि ।
बृहस्पतिर्गोवपुषो वलस्य निर्मज्जानं न पर्वणो जभार ॥९ ॥

अनानुकृत्यमपुनश्चकार यात् सूर्यामासा मिथ उच्चरातः ॥१० ॥

रात्र्यां तमो अदधुर्ज्योतिरहन् बृहस्पतिर्भिनदद्रिं विदद् गाः ॥११ ॥

बृहस्पतिः स हि गोभिः सो अश्वैः स वीरेभिः स नृभिर्नो वयो धात् ॥१२ ॥

[सूक्त- १७]

[ऋषि- कृष्ण । देवता- इन्द्र । छन्द- जगती, ११-१२ त्रिष्टुप् ।]

५१०६. अच्छा म इन्द्रं मतयः स्वर्विदः सध्रीचीर्विश्वा उशतीरनूषत ।

पवित्र, आत्मशक्ति की वृद्धि करने वाली, एक साथ रहने वाली तथा उन्नति की कामना करने वाली हमारी स्तुतियाँ इन्द्रदेव को वैसे ही आवृत करती हैं, जैसे स्त्रियाँ आश्रय पाने के लिए अपने पति का आलिंगन करती हैं ।

५१०७. न घा त्वद्रिगप वेति मे मनस्त्वे इत् कामं पुरुहूत शिश्रय ।
राजेव दस्म नि षदोऽधि बर्हिष्यस्मिन्त्सु सोमेवपानमस्तु ते ॥२ ॥

५१०८. विषूवृदिन्द्रो अमतेरुत क्षुधः स इद्रायो मघवा वस्व ईशते ।
तस्येदिमे प्रवणे सप्त सिन्धवो वयो वर्धन्ति वृषभस्य शुष्मिणः ॥३ ॥

५१०९. वयो न वृक्षं सुपलाशमासदन्त्सोमास इन्द्रं मन्दिनश्चमूषदः ।

जिस प्रकार पक्षी सुन्दर पत्तेदार वृक्ष का अवलम्बन लेते हैं, उसी प्रकार पात्रों में विद्यमान हर्षदायक सोमरस इन्द्रदेव का आश्रय लेते हैं । सोमरस के प्रभाव एवं तेज से उनका मुख तेजोमय हो जाता है । वे अपनी सर्वोत्तम तेजस्विता मनुष्यों को प्रदान करें ।।४ ।।

न तत् ते अन्यो अनु वीर्यं शकन्न पुराणो मघवन् नोत नूतनः ।।५ ।।

यस्याह शक्रः सवनेषु रण्यति स तीव्रैः सोमैः सहते पृतन्यतः ।।६ ।।

५११२. आपो न सिन्धुमभि यत् समक्षरन्त्सोमास इन्द्रं कुल्या इव ह्रदम् ।
वर्धन्ति विप्रा महो अस्य सादने यवं न वृष्टिर्दिव्येन दानुना ।।७ ।।

५११३. वृषा न क्रुद्धः पतयद् रजः स्वा यो अर्यपत्नीरकृणोदिमा अपः ।
स सुन्वते मघवा जीरदानवेऽविन्दज्ज्योतिर्मनवे हविष्मते ।।८ ।।

५११४. उज्जायतां परशुर्ज्योतिषा सह भूया ऋतस्य सुदुघा पुराणवत् ।
वि रोचतामरुषो भानुना शुचिः स्व१र्ण शुक्रं शुशुचीत सत्पतिः ।।९ ।।

इन्द्रदेव का वज्रास्त्र तेजस्विता के साथ प्रकट हो, पुरातनकाल के समान ही यज्ञ में स्तोत्रों का प्रादुर्भाव हो । स्वयं देदीप्यमान इन्द्रदेव तेजस्विता से शोभायुक्त और पवित्र हों । सज्जनों के पालक वे सूर्य के समान ही शुभ्रज्योति से प्रकाशमान हों ।।९ ।।

५११५. गोभिष्टरेमामतिं दुरेवां यवेन क्षुधं पुरुहूत विश्वाम् ।
वयं राजभिः प्रथमा धनान्यस्माकेन वृजनेना जयेम ।।१० ।।

५११६. बृहस्पतिर्नः परि पातु पश्चादुतोत्तरस्मादधरादघायोः ।
इन्द्रः पुरस्तादुत मध्यतो नः सखा सखिभ्यो वरिवः कृणोतु ॥११ ॥

५११७. बृहस्पते युवमिन्द्रश्च वस्वो दिव्यस्येशाथे उत पार्थिवस्य ।

हे इन्द्रदेव ! जब आपके द्वारा शत्रुओं की सामर्थ्य को पददलित तथा उनकी शरत्कालीन आवासीय नगरियों को विध्वंस किया गया, तब प्रजाजनों में आपकी शक्ति विख्यात हुई । हे शक्ति के प्रतिनिधि इन्द्रदेव ! आपने मनुष्यों के कल्याण के लिए यज्ञ विध्वंसक राक्षसों को दण्डित करके पृथ्वी एवं जल पर उनके प्रभुत्व को समाप्त किया ॥२ ॥

[इन्द्रदेव लक्ष्य पर पहुँचकर अपने अश्वों को मुक्त कर देते हैं, यह कथन एक सूक्ष्म वैज्ञानिक प्रक्रिया को स्पष्ट करता है । इन्द्रदेव संगठन (संयुक्त रखने) की सामर्थ्य के रूप में मान्य हैं । किसी भी ऊर्जा स्रोत से उभरने वाले ऊर्जा प्रवाह (अश्व) इन्द्रशक्ति के कारण अपने स्रोत से जुड़े रहते हैं । वे ऊर्जा प्रवाह जब किसी पदार्थ या प्राणी तक पहुँच जाते हैं, तो वे उन (पदार्थों- प्राणियों) के द्वारा धारण किये जाते हैं और उन्हीं के अंगों के तन्त्र बनने के लिए ऊर्जा स्रोत के बन्धन से मुक्त हो जाते हैं । जैसे सूर्य की हर किरण सूर्य से जुड़ी है, जब वह किसी वृक्ष की पत्ती पर पड़ जाती है, तो वह वृक्ष के (रस पकाने जैसे) प्राण चक्र का अङ्ग बन जाती है । सूर्य उसे मुक्त कर देता है ।]

नो अह प्र विन्दस्यन्यत्र सोमपीतये विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥२ ॥

५७६३. किमयं त्वा वृषाकपिश्चकार हरितो मृगः ।
यस्मा इरस्यसीदु न्व१र्यो वा पुष्टिमद् वसु विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥३ ॥

श्वा न्वस्य जम्भिषदपि कर्णे वराहयुर्विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥४ ॥

५७६५. प्रिया तष्टानि मे कपिर्व्यक्ता व्य दूदुषत् ।

[इन्द्राणी शक्ति को तुष्ट करने वाले पदार्थों को वृषाकपि (कामना प्रवाह) दूषित करते हैं, तो वे उग्र होती हैं ।]

५७६६. न मत्स्त्री सुभसत्तरा न सुयाशुतरा भुवत् ।
न मत् प्रतिच्यवीयसी न सक्थ्युद्यमीयसी विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥६ ॥

(इन्द्राणी का कथन) कोई दूसरी स्त्री मुझसे बढ़कर सौभाग्यशालिनी नहीं और न कोई दूसरी अतिसुखी और सुसन्तति युक्त है । मुझसे अधिक कोई भी स्त्री अपने पति को सुख देने में सक्षम भी नहीं होगी । इन्द्रदेव ही वास्तव में सर्वश्रेष्ठ हैं ॥६ ॥

५७६७. उवे अम्ब सुलाभिके यथेवाङ्ग भविष्यति ।
भसन्मे अम्ब सक्थि मे शिरो मे वी व हृष्यति विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥७ ॥

५७६८. किं सुबा हो स्वङ्गुरे पृथुष्टो पृथुजाघने ।
किं शूरपत्नि नस्त्वमभ्य मीषि वृषाकपिं विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥८ ॥

५७६९. अवीरामिव मामयं शरारुरभि मन्यते ।

५७७०. संहोत्रं स्म पुरा नारी समनं वाव गच्छति ।
वेधा ऋतस्य वीरिणीन्द्रपत्नी महीयते विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥१० ॥

५७७१. इन्द्राणीमासु नारिषु सुभगामहमश्रवम् ।
नह्य स्या अपरं चन जरसा मरते पतिर्विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥११ ॥

सभी स्त्रियों में इन्द्राणी को मैं सर्वाधिक सौभाग्यशालिनी मानता हूँ । दूसरी स्त्रियों के पति के समान इन्द्राणी के पति इन्द्र, वृद्धावस्था में मृत्यु को प्राप्त नहीं होते, (अपितु इन्द्र अमर हैं) इन्द्र ही वस्तुतः सर्वोत्तम हैं ॥११ ॥

हे इन्द्राणी ! हमारे मित्र (मरुद्‌गण) वृषाकपि के बिना हर्षित नहीं रहते । वृषाकपि का ही अति प्रीतियुक्त द्रव्य (हव्यादि) देवों के समीप पहुँचता है, इन्द्रदेव ही सर्वोत्तम हैं ॥१२ ॥

[मरुद्‌गण संचरणशील हैं, उन्हें वृषाकपि मेधा या अग्निरूप में सहयोग देते हैं । हव्य एवं पर्जन्य को प्रवाहित करते हैं ।]

५७७३. वृषाकपायि रेवति सुपुत्र आदु सुस्नुषे ।

५७७४. उक्ष्णो हि मे पञ्चदश साकं पचन्ति विंशतिम् ।

सेदीशे यस्य रोमशं निषेदुषो विजृम्भते विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥१६ ॥

सेदीशे यस्य रम्बतेऽन्तरा सक्थ्या३ कपृद् विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥१७ ॥

५७८४. इदं जना उप श्रुत नराशंस स्तविष्यते ।

५७८५. उष्ट्रा यस्य प्रवाहणो वधूमन्तो द्विर्दश ।

[परीक्षित के प्रभाव से वांछित पदार्थों का उत्पादन प्रचुर मात्रा में होता है, यह भाव इस मंत्र से प्रकट होता है ।]

५८३५. को असिद्याः पयः ॥२ ॥

५८३८. एतं पृच्छ कुहं पृच्छ ॥५ ॥ ५८३९. कुहाकं पक्वकं पृच्छ ॥६ ॥

यह (जानते नहीं हो तो) पूछो । किसी चमत्कारी व्यक्ति से पूछो । किसी अद्‌भुत कौशलयुक्त तथा परिपक्व व्यक्ति से पूछो ॥५-६ ॥

५८४२. आमणको मणत्सकः ॥९ ॥ ५८४३. देव त्वप्रतिसूर्य ॥१० ॥

५८८४. देवी हनत् कुहनत् ॥११ ॥ ५८८५. पर्यागारं पुनः पुनः ॥१२ ॥

[सूक्त-१३३]

५८९०. विततौ किरणौ द्वौ तावा पिनष्टि पूरुषः । न वै कुमारि तत् तथा यथा कुमारि मन्यसे।

५८९१. मातुष्टे किरणौ द्वौ निवृत्तः पुरुषानृते । न वै कुमारि तत् तथा यथा कुमारि मन्यसे ॥२।

५८९२.निगृह्य कर्णकौ द्वौ निरायच्छसि मध्यमे । न वै कुमारि तत् तथा यथा कुमारि मन्यसे।

हे मध्यमे (जड़ एवं चेतन को संयुक्त करने वाली सत्ता !) आप दोनों कर्णों (छोरों) को अपने वश में करके उन्हें नियोजित कर देती हैं । हे कुमारि ! जैसा तुम मानती हो, वैसा यह नहीं है ॥३ ॥

[सूक्त-१३६]

५९१५.यदस्या अंहुभेद्याः कृधु स्थूलमुपातसत् ।मुष्काविदस्या एजतो गोशफे शकुलाविव।

विष्वञ्चा वस्या वर्धतः सिकतास्वेव गर्दभौ ॥२ ॥

वासन्तिकमिव तेजनं यन्त्यवाताय वित्पति ॥३ ॥

५९२१. महानग्न्युप ब्रूते भ्रष्टोऽथाप्यभूभुवः । यथैव ते वनस्पते पिप्पति तथैवति ॥७ ॥

५९२२.महानग्न्युप ब्रूते भ्रष्टोऽथाप्यभूभुवः । यथा वयो विदाह्य स्वर्गे नमवदह्यते ॥८ ॥

५९२३. महानग्न्युप ब्रूते स्वसावेशितं पसः । इत्थं फलस्य वृक्षस्य शूर्पे शूर्पं भजेमहि ॥

१. अङ्गिरा (१९.२२, ३४-३५) - द्र० अथर्व० भाग-१ ।

२३. गोषूक्ति-अश्वसूक्ति (२०.२७, ६१) - इन दोनों ऋषियों का ऋषित्व ऋ० ८.१४-१५, सामवेद- १२१, १२२, २११ और ३८२ तथा अथर्ववेद २०.२७ एवं ६१ वें सूक्त में वर्णन मिलता है। इन दोनों ऋषियों का समुदित ऋषित्व प्राप्त होता है। पंचविंश ब्राह्मण १९.४९ में 'गौषूक्त' नाम के एक सामद्रष्टा का ऋषि के रूप में उल्लेख मिलता है। ताण्ड्य महाब्राह्मण (१९.४.१०) में गोषूक्त शब्द ऋषिनाम के रूप में वर्णित है। ऐसा प्रतीत होता है कि गोषूक्त के पुत्र अथवा वंशजों का नाम 'गोषूक्ति' है। इनके ऋषित्व को ऋ० में आचार्य सायण ने इस प्रकार प्रमाणित किया है - तथा चानुक्रान्तम्- 'यदिन्द्र पञ्चोना गोषूक्त्यश्वसूक्तिनौ काण्वायनौ' इति (ऋ० ८.१४ सा० भा०)। ता० म० ब्रा० में इनके ऋषित्व को इस प्रकार प्रमाणित किया गया है- 'गौषूक्तिश्चाश्वसूक्तिश्च बहु प्रतिगृह्य गरगिराव मन्येतां तावेते सामनी अपश्यतां ताभ्यां गरन्निरघ्नाताम् (ता० म० ब्रा० १९.४.१०)।

२५. त्रिशोक (२०.२२.४३) - अथर्ववेदीय प्रमुख ऋषियों में त्रिशोक का ऋषित्व विवेचित है। ऋग्वेद और सामवेद में इनके नाम के साथ अपत्यवाचक विशेषण 'काण्व' संयुक्त मिलता है; किन्तु अथर्ववेद और यजुर्वेद में इनका उल्लेख 'त्रिशोक' के रूप में मिलता है। अथर्व० में इनका उल्लेख सूक्त ४.२९.६ तथा २०.४३ सूक्त में दृष्टिगोचर होता है। सामवेद १३१, १३३, १३४ में त्रिशोक काण्व के रूप में परिलक्षित होते हैं। इनका गोत्र सुस्पष्ट न होने के कारण यह प्रतीत होता है कि ये काण्व के शिष्य थे। कण्व वंशीय गोत्र की पुष्टि करते हुए आचार्य सायण ने ऋग्वेद में इस प्रकार भाष्य किया है-'आ घ द्विचत्वारिंशत्त्रिशोक आद्याग्नेन्द्री'। अनुक्त गोत्रत्वात् काण्वस्त्रिशोक ऋषिः (ऋ० ८.४५ सा० भा०)। शौनक प्रणीत बृहद्देवता में भी इनके ऋषित्व को वर्णित किया गया है-...... त्रिशोकाय पुरन्दरः (बृह० ६.८१)। ऋ० ८.४५.३० में यह उल्लेख मिलता है कि इन्द्र ने त्रिशोक के लिए अद्रि को चीरकर जल धारायें प्रवाहित की थी। ऋग्वेद १.११२.१२ से यह जानकारी मिलती है कि अश्विनीकुमारों ने असुरों के द्वारा अपहृत उनकी गौओं को वापस दिलाया था।

२८. द्युतान (२०.१३६) - द्युतान का ऋषित्व ऋक्, यजु, साम और अथर्व चारों वेदों में दृष्टिगोचर होता है। ऋक् तथा साम में द्युतान को मरुतों का वंशज होने के कारण 'द्युतान मारुत' के रूप में उल्लिखित किया गया है; जबकि अथर्व० में अकेले द्युतान के नाम से ही वर्णित हैं। ऋ० तथा अथर्व० में द्युतान को वैकल्पिक ऋषि रूप में मान्यता प्राप्त है; जबकि इन दोनों वेदों की अनुक्रमणियों में इन्हें मंत्रों का स्वतंत्र ऋषि माना गया है। ऋ० ८.९६ के सम्बन्ध में द्युतान मारुत का वैकल्पिक ऋषित्व है। शतपथ ब्राह्मण ३.६.१.१६ में इन्हें वायु कहा गया है। तैत्ति० सं० ५.५.९.४ और काण्व संहिता ५.७ के अनुसार एक दैवी पुरुष का नाम द्युतान मारुत है। जबकि पंचविंश ब्रा० १७.१.७ में उन्हें एक साम मंत्र का रचयिता बताया गया है। यजु० में उवट ने अपने भाष्य में इस प्रकार प्रकट किया है-द्युतानः त्वा। द्युतानो दीप्यमानः त्वां मारुतो वायुः मिनोतु (यजु० ५.२७ उ० भा०)। ऋग्वेद में सायणाचार्य जी इनके ऋषित्व को प्रमाणित करते हुए तिरश्चीराङ्गिरस के साथ वैकल्पिक ऋषि के रूप में स्वीकार करते हैं- द्युतानाख्यो मरुतां पुत्र ऋषिस्तिरश्चीर्नामाङ्गिरसो वा (ऋ० ८.९६ सा० भा०)

३१. नोधा (२०.९, ३५) - नोधा ऋषि को चारों वेदों में ऋषित्व प्राप्त है। गोतम गोत्रीय होने के कारण यजु, साम और ऋक् में इनका ऋषित्व गौतम पद के साथ संयुक्त रूप से दृष्टिगोचर होता है; किन्तु अथर्व में यह अपत्यार्थक पद 'गौतम' अनुल्लिखित है। इनका उल्लेख अथर्ववेद २०.९.३५,४१ आदि स्थानों पर मिलता है। बृह० ३.१२८ में भरद्वाज, गृत्समद आदि ऋषियों के बीच इनका उल्लेख मिलता है। नवीन स्तोत्रों के द्रष्टा रूप में नोधा ऋषि का उल्लेख निरुक्तकार ने ४.२.१६ में किया है। ऋग्वेद में आचार्य सायण ने इनके ऋषित्व को इस प्रकार से प्रतिपादित किया है- गौतमस्य नोधस् आर्षमाग्नेयम् (ऋ० १.५८ सा० भा०)। यजुर्वेद में भी नोधा गोतम द्रष्टा रूप में विवेचित हैं- इन्द्रदेवत्या पथ्याबृहती नोधागोतमदृष्टा (यजु० २६.११ मही० भा०)।

३४. पुरुमीढ और अजमीढ (२०.१४३) - पुरुमीढ और अजमीढ का सम्मिलित ऋषित्व ऋ०, साम०, यजु० और अथर्व० चारों वेदों में मिलता है। ऋ० में इनके नाम के साथ अपत्यार्थक विशेषण सौहोत्र संयुक्त मिलता है। ऋ० ४.४३-४४ के ऋषि सुहोत्र के पुत्र अजमीढ- पुरुमीढ हैं, जबकि साम० और ऋ० में इनके साथ 'आङ्गिरस' अपत्यार्थक शब्द के संयुक्त रूप से देखने को मिलता है। ऋ० का ४४वाँ सूक्त पूरा का पूरा अथर्व २०.१४३.१-७ में संगृहीत है। यहाँ इन दोनों ऋषियों के साथ 'सौहोत्रौ' विशेषण संयुक्त रूप से सम्मिलित नहीं है। यजु० सर्वानुक्रम सूत्र में भी इनके ऋषि विषयक प्रमाणों की पुष्टि की गई है- वायो शुक्रः पुरुमीढाजमीढो (सर्वा० ३.९)। ऋ० के ४.४३ सूक्त में आचार्य सायण ने इनको इस प्रकार विवेचित किया है- 'क उ श्रवत्' इति सप्तर्चमेकादशं सूक्तम्। सुहोत्रपुत्रौ पुरुमीळ्हाजमीळ्हावृषी (ऋ० ४.४३ सा० भा०)।

४१. प्रस्कण्व (२०.४६, ४७) - द्र० अथर्व० भाग १।

४६. भरद्वाज (१९.४९, २०.२६) - द्र० अथर्व० भाग -१।

४७. भर्ग (२०.१०३, ११३) - वेदों में भर्ग शब्द तेजस् या किरण के अर्थ में कई बार प्रयुक्त हुआ है। इनका ऋषित्व ऋक्, साम और अथर्व० में दृष्टिगोचर होता है। ऋग्वेद और सामवेद में इनका उल्लेख 'प्रगाथ-पुत्र' होने के कारण भर्ग प्रागाथ के रूप में हुआ है, जबकि अथर्ववेद में ऐसा कहीं भी वर्णन नहीं मिलता। प्रमुख गायत्री मंत्र ऋ० ३.६२.१० में भी सविता के वरेण्य तेजस् या भर्ग को प्रज्ञा की प्रेरणा के लिए धारण करने की अभिलाषा व्यक्त की गई है- तत्सवितुर्वरेण्यं भर्गो देवस्य धीमहि। धियो यो नः प्रचोदयात् (ऋ० ३.६२.१०)। ब्राह्मण ग्रन्थों में भी भर्ग शब्द का उल्लेख मिलता है; परन्तु भर्ग ऋषि से भिन्न अर्थों में यथा- 'अयं वै लोका भर्गः' (शत० ब्रा० १२.३.४.७)। 'पृथिव्येव भर्गः' (गो० ब्रा० १.५.१५)। 'वीर्यं वै भर्ग एष विष्णुर्यज्ञः....' (शत० ब्रा० ५.४.५.१)। सामवेद में इस नाम के छन्दों की संख्या पर्याप्त मात्रा में है। आचार्य सायण ने इनका ऋषित्व विवेचित करते हुए इन्हें प्रगाथ पुत्र कहा है- ......प्रथमं सूक्तं प्रगाथपुत्रस्य भर्गस्यार्षमाग्नेयम् (ऋ० ८.६० सा० भा०)।

४८. भार्गव वैदर्भि (११.६) - द्र० अथर्व० भाग -१।

५३. मधुच्छन्दा (२०.२६.४-६) - मधुच्छन्दा का ऋषित्व चारों वेदों में दृष्टिगोचर होता है। ऋ०, साम० और यजु० में अपत्यवाची पद 'वैश्वामित्र' के साथ संयुक्त रूप से इनका उल्लेख मिलता है, जबकि अथर्व० में ऐसा अनुल्लिखित है। ऐतरेय ब्रा० ७.१७.७; ७.१८.१ में इन्हें विश्वामित्र के ५१वें पुत्र के रूप में निरूपित किया गया है। शतपथ ब्राह्मण में इनके 'प्र उ ग' (प्रातः सवन सूक्त) का उल्लेख मिलता है- प्रउगं माधुच्छन्दसं (शत० ब्रा० १३.५.१.८)। कौषीतकि ब्रा० २८.२ में भी इनके ऋषि होने का प्रमाण मिलता है। यजुर्वेद में कहीं- कहीं पर इनका अपत्यार्थक पदरहित नाम भी उल्लिखित हुआ है- पावका नो मधुच्छन्दाः सारस्वतीम् (सर्वा० २.३९)। ऐतरेय आरण्यक में इनके नामकरण का कारण इनका मधु से विशेष सम्बन्ध होना बतलाया गया है- मधुह स्म वा ऋषिभ्यो मधुच्छन्दाश्छन्दति तन्मधुच्छन्दसो मधुच्छन्दस्त्वम् (ऐत० आ० १.१.३)।

५५. मेध्यातिथि (२०.९.३-४) - इनका ऋषित्व ऋ० , साम० और अथर्व० में विवेचित है । यजुर्वेद में इनके द्वारा दृष्ट कोई भी मंत्र प्राप्त नहीं होता । 'काण्व' वंशीय होने के कारण ऋ० और साम० में अपत्यार्थक पद काण्व संयुक्त है, जबकि अथर्व० में ऐसा अनुल्लिखित है । अथर्व० २० .१४३.९ में मेधातिथि तथा मेध्यातिथि दोनों समुदित ऋषि माने गये हैं । अथर्व० का यह मंत्र ऋ० ८.५७.३ में विद्यमान है, जहाँ इस मंत्र के ऋषि मेध्यकाण्व माने गये हैं । अथर्व० में अन्य कोई मंत्र इन दोनों के नाम से नहीं मिलता । मेध्यातिथि को ऋ० ८.२.४० में स्पष्टतः 'काण्व' कहा गया है-...काण्वं मेध्यातिथिम् (ऋ० ८.२.४०) । ऋ० के खिल सूक्त (८.५१.१) में इनके नाम का उल्लेख मिलता है-.....मघवन् मेध्यातिथौ पुष्टिगौ श्रुष्टिगौ सचा (ऋ० ८.५१.१) । आचार्य सायण ने इनके सन्दर्भ में इस प्रकार कहा है-धीवन्तं स्तुतिमन्तं काण्वं कण्वपुत्रं मेध्यातिथिं....(ऋ० ८.२.४० सा० भा०)

५७. ययाति (२०.१३७) - ययाति का ऋषित्व ऋग्वेद और अथर्ववेद में दृष्टिगोचर होता है । ऋग्वेद में इन्हें ९.१०.४-६ तीन ऋचाओं का ऋषित्व प्राप्त है । ये नहुष पुत्र होने के कारण ऋ० में 'नाहुष' पद से संयुक्त हुए हैं । ययाति नाहुष को यज्ञकर्त्ता भी कहा गया है । अथर्ववेद में 'नाहुष' पद प्रायः अनुल्लिखित है । वहाँ ये 'ययाति' के नाम से ही उल्लिखित हैं । ययाति शब्द महर्षि दयानन्द के शब्दों में 'यती प्रयत्ने' से बनकर 'प्रयत्नशील पुरुष' का वाचक है । यह प्रयत्नशील इसलिए है कि कर्म ही मनुष्य को प्रयत-पवित्र बनाता है । राजा मनु के पुत्र का नाम नहुष था तथा नहुष के पुत्र का नाम ययाति था, जैसा कि भाष्यकार आचार्य सायण ने अपने ऋग्वेद भाष्य में प्रमाणित किया है- द्वितीयस्य नहुषस्य राज्ञः पुत्रो ययातिर्नाम । तृतीयस्य मनोः पुत्रो नहुषो नाम राजर्षिः...... ययातिर्नाहुषो नहुषो मानवो ....(ऋ० ९.१०१ सा० भा०) ।

६४. वामदेव (२०.१३.१) - द्र० अथर्व० भाग -१ ।

अन्यदेव समुदाय- वैदिक मन्त्रों के सन्दर्भ में मान्यता है कि ऋचाओं की अनुभूति करने वाले को ऋषि और मन्त्रोक्त को देवता कहा जाता है। इस प्रसंग में वैदिक मंत्रों में प्रसिद्ध उद्‌भट विद्वान् आचार्य सायण का यह सूत्र अत्यन्त प्रसिद्ध है- 'यस्य वाक्यं स ऋषिः। या तेनोच्यते सा देवता' (ऋ० १०.१० सा० भा०)। उक्त कहे गये सूत्रानुसार ही अथर्ववेद के ऋषि-देवताओं का उल्लेख किया गया है। वैदिक मन्त्रों में प्रचलित प्रमुख सविता, अग्नि, वायु, वरुण, इन्द्र आदि के अतिरिक्त स्थान विशेष, अचेतन, अमूर्त्त, द्रव्य-गुण विशेष, पात्र-उपकरण और पशु या प्राणी विशेष आदि के रूप में वर्णन मिलता है। इन सभी को गुण, धर्म और स्वभाव के आधार पर अलग-अलग वर्गों में विभक्त कर वर्णित किया गया है।

२. उपकरण वर्ग- वज्र (आयुध)।

३. हव्य-पदार्थ वर्ग- ओदन (चावल), बार्हस्पत्यौदन, ब्रह्मौदन (ऋत्विज् हेतु पकाया गया भात) आदि।

४. वस्तु या द्रव्य वर्ग- अस्तृतमणि, औदुम्बरमणि, त्रिवृत् (मणि विशेष), दर्भमणि, शतवारमणि आदि।

Book VIII.

⌊The second grand division of the Atharvan collection comprehends books viii.–xii. It consists wholly of hymns of more than twenty verses, and contains all the hymns of that length except such as for especial reasons were placed in the later books. Leaving out of account the later books, there are forty-five such hymns; and these have been divided into five books, of which the first four, books viii., ix., x., and xi., have ten hymns each, while the remaining five hymns make up the twelfth book. Disregarding ix. 6 and xi. 3 (paryāya-hymns), it may be noted that books viii.–xi. contain all the hymns of from twenty to fifty verses to be found in the first two grand divisions, and that book xii. contains all of more than that number in the same divisions. "Of any other principle of arrangement dependent on the length of the different hymns, no trace is to be observed," says Whitney. For the divisions of book viii., see below. The whole book has been translated by Victor Henry, Les livres VIII et IX de l'Atharva-véda traduits et commentés, Paris, 1894. The commentary ("of Sāyaṇa") breaks off at the end of hymn 6 and we have no more of it till the beginning of book xi. But in lieu of the missing introductions, Shankar Pandurang Pandit gives introductions of his own, modelled on those of the bhāṣya, and drawn from the same sources, the Kāuçika, the Keçavī, etc.⌋

⌊The Major Anukramaṇī, at the beginning of § 2 of its treatment of book viii., says that, 'up to the end of book xi., the artha-sūktas constitute the norm and the paryāyas, beginning with virāḍ vā (viii. 10. 1), the exception': yāvad ekādaçakāṇḍāntam artha-sūkta-prakṛtis, tāvad vihāya paryāyān virāḍvā-prabhṛtīn iti. And in fact, all through books viii.–xii., and even to the end of book xviii., every arthasūkta is by one ms. or another designated as an arthasūkta (xviii. 2 is an exception, solitary and doubtless casual). — In this place it may be well to enumerate the paryāya-hymns (including those also of the next division) and to print an account of the way in which the mss. present them. The account (barring slight changes) is by Mr. Whitney, and is written on a loose slip of paper found in his Collation-book at viii. 10. 1.⌋

⌊The paryāya-hymns are eight in number and are scattered over seven different books. Specifically, and with the number of paryāyas in each, they are as follows: viii. 10 (with 6 paryāyas); ix. 6 (with 6); ix. 7 (with 1); xi. 3 (with 3); xii. 5 (with 7); xiii. 4 (with 6); book xv. (18 paryāyas); book xvi. (9 paryāyas).⌋

They are called paryāya-sūktas in distinction from those among which they occur and which are named artha-sūktas. The separate portions of which they are composed are called each a paryāya ⌊or also paryāya-sūkta⌋. Each ⌊paryāya taken separately⌋ is in the mss. numbered as to its verses separately; but they ⌊the paryāyas of a given group taken together⌋ so evidently constitute each a whole, as shown by the sense and likewise by the manner in which the Anukramaṇīs treat them, that we ⌊R. and W.⌋ regarded it as beyond question that they should be numbered continuously, to save a citation by more than three numbers. ⌊In this connection should be consulted SPP's "Critical Notice," prefixed to vol. i., p. 19 ff.⌋ ⌊See pages cxxxiii–vii.⌋

Each paryāya has its own summing up at the end: if a numbered division corresponding to an ṛc is composed of more than one divided portion, it is called a gaṇa, and its subdivisions avasāna-rcas or gaṇā 'vasāna-rcas. Thus the first division ⌊of viii. 10⌋ is summed up as follows: paryāyaḥ 1, gaṇāḥ 6, gaṇāvasānarcaḥ 13; and it is by the latter number that the Anukr. treats it. Similarly the third paryāya ⌊of viii. 10⌋ is summed up as paryāya-sūktam 1, gaṇāḥ 4, gaṇāvasānarcaḥ 8. ⌊Cf. the summation at the end of viii. 10.⌋

In xii. 5 the divisions are called vacanāni or vacanā 'vasāna-rcas. In paryāyas 5 and 6 of xiii. 4 a distinction is made between avasānarcaḥ and gaṇāvasānarcaḥ, those which have the refrain receiving the latter designation.

The divisions of books xv. and xvi. are likewise paryāyas, and their subdivisions are styled avasānarcaḥ or gaṇāvasānarcaḥ in the same manner.

⌊The anuvāka-division of each of the ten-hymned books viii.–xi. is into five anuvākas of two hymns each; and that of book xii. (consisting of five long hymns) is also into five anuvākas, but these are of one hymn each, so that here the anuvāka-division and the hymn-division coincide. The comm. divides the anuvākas into hymns in a manner nearly like that described for book vii. (see p. 388): that is, his "hymns" are mechanical decads of verses, with an overplus or shortage in the last "decad" when the total for the hymn (not — as in book vii. — for the anuvāka) is not an exact multiple of ten. A tabular conspectus for book viii. follows:

Hymns	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Verses	21	28	26	25	22	26	28	24	26	33 ¶
Decad-div.	10 + 11	10 + 10 + 8	10 + 10 + 6	10 + 10 + 5	10 + 12	10 + 10 + 6	10 + 10 + 8	10 + 14	10 + 10 + 6	6 P

Here ¶ means "paragraph of a paryāya" (such as is numbered as a "verse" in the Berlin edition) and P means "paryāya." The last line shows the "decad"-division. These divisions are shown also in the Berlin edition. Of these "decads," anuvākas 1, 2, 3, and 4 contain respectively 5, 6, 5, and 5 (in all, 21 "decads"); while anuvāka 5 has 3 "decads" and 6 paryāyas. The sum is 24 "decad"-sūktas and 6 paryāya-sūktas or 30 sūktas. Cf. again the summation at the end of hymn 10.⌋

1. For some one's continued life.

[Brahman. — ekaviṅçakam. ārṣy (ārtvy?) āyuṣyam. trāiṣṭubham: 1. purobṛhatī triṣṭubh; 2, 3, 17–21. anuṣṭubh; 4, 9, 15, 16. prastārapañkti; 7. 3-p. virāḍ gāyatrī; 8. virāṭ pathyābṛhatī; 12. 3-av. 5-p. jagatī; 13. 3-p. bhuriñ mahābṛhatī; 14. 1-av. 2-p. sāmnī bhurig bṛhatī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi., with verse 17 after 20. ⌊Partly prose, "verse" 14.⌋

⌊Hymns 1 and 2 together are used with others in Kāuç. in the upanayana (55. 17) with touching the student's navel, and again with others in rites for long life (58. 3, 11).

The comm. cites them from Nakṣ. K. 23 in a mahāçānti. They are reckoned by Kāuç. to the āyuṣya gaṇa (note to 54. 11). For vs. 10, see below.⌋

1. To the ender Death [be] homage. Let thy breaths, expirations, rest here. Let this man be here with his life (ásu), in the portion of the sun, in the world of the immortal.

Ppp. puts our second pāda last.

2. Up hath Bhaga taken him, up Soma rich in shoots ⌊hath taken⌋ him, up the heavenly Maruts ⌊have taken⌋ him, up have Indra-and-Agni, for his welfare.

Or añçumant means 'rich in rays,' Soma having its secondary sense of 'moon': both were probably in the author's mind.

3. Here [be] thy life, here breath, here life-time, here thy mind; we bear thee up from the fetters of perdition with divine speech.

4. Step up from here, O man, fall not down, loosening down the fetter (páḍbīça) of death; be not severed from this world, from the sight (saṁdṛ́ç) of fire, of the sun.

The mss., as usual, vary between páḍvīçam and páḍb-, and SPP. adopts the former; the comm. has the latter.

5. Let the wind, Mātariçvan, be cleansing for thee; for thee let the waters rain immortal things; may the sun burn weal for thy body; let death compassionate thee; do not thou perish.

6. Up-going [be] thine, O man, not down-going; length of life (jīvā́tu), ability, I make for thee; for do thou ascend this immortal easy-running chariot, then shalt thou in advanced age (?jírvi) speak to the council (vidátha).

Both here and at xiv. 1. 21, our mss. on the whole read decidedly jírvis (only P.M. have jivrís, Bp. jívis, here); and SPP. reports all his authorities without exception as giving it, so that it is without question the true AV. reading (as against RV. jívri); the comm. reads ajirvis, and glosses it with ajīrṇas, and Ludwig renders 'lebenskräftig.'

7. Let not thy mind go thither; let it not be lost (tiró-bhū); do not neglect (pra-mad) the living, go not after the Fathers; let all the gods defend thee here.

8. Do not regard (ā-dhī) the departed, who lead [one] to the distance; ascend out of darkness, come to light; we take hold on thy hands.

Ppp. begins c with ud ā roha, which makes the pāda a good triṣṭubh; the omission of e 'hi would rectify it to an anuṣṭubh. The comm. omits e 'hi. Ppp. also reads hastam in d. ⌊With b, cf. v. 30. 12 b.⌋

9. Let not the dark and the brindled one, sent forth, [seize] thee, that are Yama's dogs, road-defenders; come thou hitherward; do not hesitate; stand not there with mind averted.

Ppp. reads mā 'va for mā vi in c. The comm. omits préṣitāu in a; he ⌊twice⌋ supplies bādhatām as the missing verb in a.

10. Do not follow that road; that is a frightful one — the one thou hast not gone before, that I speak of; to that darkness, O man, do not go forth; [there is] fear in the distance, safety for thee hitherward.

⌊Kāuç. reckons the vs. to the abhaya gaṇa, note to 16. 8.⌋ Ppp. mutilates tamas in c to tam. The comm. reads purastāt in d. ⌊For iyátha, see Gram. § 801 d.⌋

11. Let the fires that are within the waters defend thee; let that defend thee which human beings kindle; let Vāiçvānara, Jātavedas defend [thee]; let not [the fire] of heaven consume thee along with the lightning.

Our text should read in d mā́ prá dhāk; the omission of prá is an error of the press. Ppp. reads mā pra dahāt.

12. Let not the flesh-eating [fire] plot against thee; move far from the destroying (sáṁkasuka) one; let heaven defend, let earth defend thee; let both sun and moon defend thee; let the atmosphere defend from the gods' missile.

Most of the mss. (not our Bp.P.M.I.) read rákṣatām in d, which SPP. accordingly (following all his authorities) retains, though the accent is not defensible. ⌊I can find no note to the effect that P.M.I. leave rakṣatām unaccented.⌋ Ppp. puts pādas a, b after c, d. The comm. reads saṁkusukāt in b.

13. Let both the knower and the attender defend thee; let both the sleepless one and the unslumbering one defend thee; let both the guardian and the wakeful one protect thee.

In bodhá and pratībodhá, in a, the radical sense is perhaps more that of 'wake.' The comm. understands six rishis bearing these several appellations to be intended. ⌊Cf. the closely related v. 30. 10, above; also MGS. ii. 15. 1 a, b, c, d, and the Index to their pratīkas.⌋ A similar formula is found also in K. xxxvii. 10; compare further PGS. iii. 4. 17. Ppp. reads anavadrāṇiç ca in b. ⌊In b, the first ca might be dropped, without hurting the meter.⌋

14. Let these defend thee; let these guard thee; to these [be] homage! to these hail!

After gopāyantu, Ppp. inserts te tvāṁ hasassāyatu.

15. Let Vāyu, Indra, Dhātar, the preserving Savitar, assign thee unto converse with the living; let not breath, strength, leave thee; we call after thy life.

The pada-text has sam°úde in a, and the translation follows this (cf. vy°úṣi from root vas), as being on the whole probably the understanding of the text-makers; if they had seen in the word anything of the root mud, they would have divided sa∘múde; and yet it is very likely that it is a corruption for saṁ∘múde; the comm. glosses it with sammodāya, as if the reading were sammúde. No variant from Ppp. is noted.

The comm. divides our 15–17 into two long verses, ending 15 with kathā́ syāḥ. His intention seems to be to make just twenty verses of the hymn.

16. Let not the jaw-snapping (?) grinder (jambhá), let not the darkness find thee, let not the tongue-wrencher (?); how shouldst thou be one that perisheth? up let the Ādityas, the Vasus bear thee, up let Indra-and-Agni, for thy welfare.

The translation implies a bold emendation of the unintelligible jihvā́ ā́ barhís to jihvābarhás, formed like muṣkābarhás ⌊at iii. 9. 2⌋; Ludwig has a kindred conjecture, ā́ barhīs (aor.). The comm. thinks of a demon's tongue stretched to the size of a barhis. The rendering of saṁhanu agrees with that of the Petersburg Lexicon, and with the comm's first gloss, saṁhatadanta; he adds as an alternative saṁhatahanur jambho 'sthūladantaḥ. ⌊But cf. v. 28. 13 and note.⌋ Ppp. reads, for b, mā jihvacaryaḥ prasuyuṣ kathāsya.

17. Up hath heaven, up hath earth, up hath Prajāpati caught thee; up out of death have the herbs, with Soma for their king, made thee pass.

18. Be this man just here, O gods; let him not go yonder from hence; him by what is of thousand-fold might do we make pass up out of death.

19. I have made thee pass up out of death; let the vigor-givers blow together; let not the women of disheveled locks, let not the evil-wailers, wail for thee.

The 'evil-wailers,' perhaps professional lamenters of death or other misfortune, appear again at xi. 2. 11. The comm., in a, has apīparan, which SPP., without sufficient reason, is inclined to regard as the original reading. For the fuller use of 'blow together,' see 2. 4 below. ⌊For agha-rúd, see Bloomfield, AJP. xi. 339; Caland, Todtengebräuche, Note 106*. See also his note 517.⌋

20. I have taken, I have found thee; thou hast come back renewed; whole-limbed one! I have found thy whole sight, and thy whole life-time.

The verse is RV. x. 161. 5, which has another tvā after ā́ 'hārṣam in a, and the voc. punarnava ⌊with unlingualized n⌋ at end of b, with both of which variants the comm. agrees, while Ppp. also gives the former. ⌊For the lingualized ṇ, see Prāt. iii. 82.⌋

21. It hath shone out for thee; it hath become light; darkness hath departed from thee; away from thee we set down death [and] perdition, away the yákṣma.

The comm. also recognizes vy avāt as coming from root vas 'shine,' glossing it with vyāucchat: compare tasmāi vyāuchat PB. xvi. 1. 1. ⌊For the form, cf. Gram. § 890 a and § 167.⌋

2. To prolong some one's life.

[Brahman. — aṣṭāvinçakam. ārṣy (ārtvy ?) āyuṣyam. trāiṣṭubham *: 1, 2, 7. bhurij; 3. āstārapañkti; 4. prastārapañkti; 6. pathyāpañkti; 8. purastāj jyotiṣmatī jagatī; 9. 5-p. jagatī; 11. viṣṭārapañkti; 12. purastādbṛhatī; 14. 3-av. 6-p. jagatī; 15. pathyāpañkti; 19. upariṣṭādbṛhatī; 21. satahpañkti; 26. āstārapañkti; 22, 28. purastādbṛhatī; 5, 10, 16–18, 20, 23–25, 27. anuṣṭubh (17. tripāt).]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi., all but the last verse, and with 9 before 8. *⌊Verse 13 appears to be the one upon the strength of which the Anukr. declares the hymn to be trāiṣṭubham (its remaining 27 vss. being exceptions !); and even this is no real triṣṭubh. It counts indeed 44 (8 + 12 : 12 + 12) and might be called purastāj jyotiṣmatī.⌋

⌊Vāit. uses only vs. 16: see under 16. — The uses by Kāuç. are many. For the uses of this hymn with h. 1, see introd. to h. 1. Further, in the name-giving ceremony, it is used (58. 14) with pouring a continuous stream of water on the youth's right hand; and this is followed (58. 15) by the binding on of an amulet of deodar (see note to vs. 28 below); and the use of vs. 16 is especially prescribed (58. 17: the text of the sūtra in the comm. differs from that of Bl.) to accompany the putting a new garment upon him. Vss. 12–13 are prescribed (97. 3) in case of family quarrels (see also note to vs. 9 below); vs. 14 (comm., 14–15) is used in the tonsure ceremony (54. 17); and again vs. 14 (comm., 14–15), on the child's first going out of the house (58. 18). Vs. 17 was previously prescribed for the same tonsure ceremony (53. 19: the comm. reads kṣuram abhyukṣya triḥ pramārṣṭi) on sprinkling and wiping the razor; and the same vs. is substituted for vi. 68. 3 by the Daça Karmāṇi in the same ceremony (53. 17 note); furthermore, it is used at the beginning of the ceremony of the reception of the Vedic student (55. 3). Vs. 18 (comm., 18–19) is used on the first feeding of the child (with rice and barley: 58. 19); and vss. 20 and 22 on his "committal" (58. 20, 21) respectively "to day and night" and "to the seasons." — Bloomfield (note to 58. 17) cites a passage describing the four "committals": 1. to heaven and earth, with vss. 14–15; 2. to rice and barley, with vss. 18–19; 3. to day and night, with vs. 20; 4. to the seasons, with vs. 22. — Finally, the comm. regards vs. 15 as intended, with v. 1. 7 etc., at Kāuç. 46. 1–3, in the rite against false accusation.⌋

1. Take thou hold on this bundle (?) of immortality; unsevered length of life be thine; I bring back thy life, [thy] life-time; go not to the welkin (rájas), to darkness; do not perish.

SPP. with all his authorities save one (which has snú-) reads çnúṣṭim in a, and this must doubtless be regarded as the true AV. text: compare iii. 17. 2. The comm. glosses it here with prasnuti 'a dripping forth,' and then explains amṛtasya çnuṣṭi as the stream of water which, according to one direction in Kāuç. (58. 14), is to be poured out while the hymn is recited. He glosses rajas with rāga, and explains it and tamas as the two familiar guṇas so called: it is, indeed, a little startling to find the two names here side by side.

2. Come thou hitherward unto the light of the living; I take thee in order to life for a hundred autumns; loosening down the fetters of death, imprecation, I set for thee further a longer life-time.

Some of SPP's mss. accent falsely abhyèhi in a. Ppp. transposes the order of c and d, and reads lokam for arvāñ in a.

3. From the wind have I found thy breath, from the sun I thy sight; what is thy mind, that I maintain in thee; be in concord with thy limbs; speak with thy tongue, not babbling.

4. I blow together upon thee with the breath of bipeds [and] quadrupeds as upon [new-] born fire; homage, O death, to thy sight, homage to thy breath have I made.

5. Let this man live; let him not die; him we send together; I make a remedy for him; death, do not slay the man.

The majority of the mss. (including all ours save Bp.O.) leave mṛtyo in d accentless. ⌊Both editions read mŕtyo.⌋

6. The lively, by-no-means-harming, living herb, the preserving, overpowering, powerful, do I call hither, for this man's freedom from harm.

⌊Pādas a and b are repeated at viii. 7. 6.⌋ The accent of the two participles jīvantī́m and trāyamāṇā́m seems to mark them as appellatives rather than proper participles. Naghāriṣā́, like naghamārā́, seems a fusion of the phrase na ghā (or gha) riṣyati etc.; the pada-mss. chance mostly to agree in the frequent error of reading ṛ for ri (nagha∘ṛṣā́m; Bp. ∘riṣā́m); the comm. reads and explains nagharuṣām, taking -gha- as representing root han: yasyāḥ kopo 'pi na ghātakaḥ; he regards the plant intended as the pāṭhā (Clypea hernandifolia). Ppp. reads naghāriṣaṁ, adds arundhatīm after sahasvatīm in d, and has hvaye for huve. The long ī in óṣadhīm is expressly taught by Prāt. iii. 6; naghāriṣām is mentioned in the introduction to the fourth chapter (add. note 4, at II. 7).

7. Bless thou [him]; do not take hold; let him loose; even being thine, let him be one of completed years (?) here; O Bhava-and-Çarva, be ye gracious; yield protection; driving away difficulty, bestow ye life-time.

The obscure -hāyas in b is translated here as if akin with hāyana ⌊cf. vs. 8 d⌋; the comm. glosses sarvahāyas with sarvagati; the Petersburg Lexicons conjecture 'having complete liveliness or power.' For sán, the comm. reads sam ⌊and joins it with sṛjá, supplying prāṇāis⌋.

8. Bless thou this man, O death; pity him; let him go up from here; unharmed, whole-limbed, well-hearing, hundred-yeared by old age, let him attain enjoyment with himself.

Ppp. reads him for 'yam in b, and combines in d–e -hāyanā "tm-. The comm. paraphrases ātmánā in d with ananyāpekṣaḥ san. ⌊Read as 8 + 11 : 8 + 8 + 8.⌋

9. Let the missile of the gods avoid thee; I make thee pass from the welkin (rájas); I have made thee pass up out of death; removing afar the flesh-eating Agni, I set for thee an enclosure in order to living.

The comm. reads in c nirāuham; SPP. follows grammatical rule and reads -haṅ jīv- this time ⌊cf. note to i. 19. 4⌋ because all his saṁhitā-mss. happen to agree in doing so; some of ours, however, do not. The comm. explains rájasas in b as mūrchālakṣaṇād āvaraṇāt. ⌊At 97. 6, Kāuç. gives in full, for use in case of a family quarrel (cf. above, introd.), a verse whose first half agrees entirely with the second half of this.⌋

10. The down-going in the welkin, not to be ventured down upon, which is thine, O death — from that road defending this man, we make bráhman a covering (várman) for him.

The comm. reads in b anavadhṛṣyam; root dhṛṣ + ava is found only in these two derivatives. For rajasám ⌊cf. Gram. § 1209 b⌋ Ppp. has rajasas; the comm. simply paraphrases the former by rajomayam. One or two of the pada-mss. (including our Bp.) leave mṛtyo unaccented in b; Ppp. elides 'nav- after it; and, in c, combines pathāi 'maṁ (satisfying the meter).

11. I make for thee breath-and-expiration, old age as [mode of] death, long life-time, welfare; all the messengers of Yama, sent forth by Vivasvant's son, moving about, I drive away.

Ppp. reads in b jarāmṛtyum, and, in d, caratā "rān (i.e. carata ārād?) apa.

12. Afar niggardliness, perdition, away seizure (gráhi), the flesh-eating piçācás, every demon that is of evil nature — that we smite away, as it were into darkness.

Or 'like darkness.' The comm. reads in b purogrāhim, and, in d, eva for iva. Ppp. has tavāi 'va for tat tama iva. 'Afar' and 'away' in a, b anticipate as it were the 'we smite away' of d.

13. Thy breath I win from immortal Agni, from long-lived Jātavedas, that thou mayest take no harm, mayest be immortal in alliance [with him]: that I make for thee; let that prove successful for thee.

A number of the mss. (including our Bp.E.D.) read ṛṣyās in c. Ppp. has vanave for vanve in b, and yatrā at beginning of c.

14. Let heaven-and-earth be propitious to thee, not distressing, conferring fortune (? abhiçrī); let the sun burn weal unto thee; let the wind blow weal to thy heart; let the heavenly waters, rich in fatness (páyas), flow propitious upon thee.

Ppp. combines sūryā "tapatu in c, reads kṣaranti in e, and adds further at the end çivās te santv oṣadhīḥ. The comm. gives adhiçriyāu in b, glossing it with prāptaçrīke çrīprade.

15. Propitious to thee be the herbs; I have caught thee up from the lower unto the upper earth; there let both the Ādityas, sun and moon, defend thee.

Ppp. reads ā 'hāriṣam in b, and ati for abhi in c, and combines -masā ubhā at the end.

16. What enveloping (paridhā́na) garment thou hast, what inner wrap (nīvī́) thou makest for thyself, that we make propitious unto thy body; be it not harsh to thy touch.

SPP. reads, "with all his authorities," ádrūkṣṇam in d. Our mss. might doubtless all be understood in the same way, but some of them look more like -ḍū- or -dū-; -rū-, which our text unfortunately gives, is not found in any; neither rūkṣṇa nor drūkṣṇa appears to be met with elsewhere; the comm. glosses with arūkṣam; he also reads açnute for astu te at the end. Ppp. has 'dukṣaṇam. ⌊Vait. (10.6) employs the vs. in the paçubandha on draping the sacrificial post.⌋

17. In that with a dangerous (? marcáyant) very sharp (sutejás) razor thou, a hair-dresser, shearest hair and beard, adorning the face, do not thou steal away our life-time.

The translation given implies in c the reading çúmbhan, which, it can hardly be questioned, is the true one, although it is read by only one ms. (our W.) and by Ppp.; the rest of our mss. all have, and our edition with them, çúmbhaṁ. SPP. accepts the unintelligible çúbham, with the comm., and with, as he reports, the majority of his authorities, the rest reading, like ours, çúmbhaṁ; the comm. explains çubham with dīptaṁ tejasvi and has to supply after it kuru to make any sense. Ppp. further reads -çmaçrū in b, and māi 'nam for mā nas in c. According to the distinct direction of the Prāt. (ii. 76), we ought to read ā́yuṣ prá in d, and its authority is sufficient to establish that as the true text, against both the editions; half SPP's authorities give it, though only one of ours (R.); on such a point the mss. are often at odds, and their evidence of little weight. The verse occurs also in several Gṛhya-Sūtras, AGS. (i. 17. 16); PGS. (ii. 1. 19), and HGS. (i. 9. 16); all read supeçasā in a; in b, HGS. has vaptar, PGS. vapati, AGS. and PGS. keçān; in c, the two latter have çunddhi çiras, HGS. varcayā mukham; in d, AGS. and PGS. give asya for nas; all have āyuḥ pra. ⌊Found also MP. ii. 1. 7: see also MGS. i. 21. 7 and p. 153.⌋ ⌊Cf. Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 184.⌋

18. Propitious to thee be rice and barley, free from balā́sa, causing no burning (?); these drive off the yákṣma; these free from distress.

Compare Grohmann in Ind. Stud. ix. 399. The comm. does not connect abalāsāú with balā́sa, but regards it as a-bala-asa, and glosses it with çārīrabalasyā 'kṣeptārāu. Adomadhāú (cf. adomadám, vi. 63. 1, and note) is very obscure; Ppp. reads instead adhomadhāu; the comm. adomadhū, glossing it with upayogānantaram madhurāu. Ppp. reads yatas for etāu in both c and d, and follows it in d by muñcata mā 'ṅhasaḥ.

19. What thou eatest (aç), what thou drinkest, of grain, milk of the plowing — what should be eaten, what should not be eaten — all food I make for thee poisonless.

20. Both to day and to night, to them both we commit thee. Defend ye this man for me from the arā́yas that seek to devour [him].

Some of SPP's authorities, also the comm. and Ppp., read dadhmasi at end of b. Ppp. further has rāyebhyas at beginning of c, and nas (for me) in d. The comm. explains arāyebhyas as = adhanebhyo dhanāpahartṛbhyo vā.

21. A hundred, a myriad years, two periods (yugá), three, four, we make for thee; let Indra-and-Agni, let all the gods, approve thee, not showing enmity.

The second half-verse is i. 35. 4 c, d. The 'periods' here are not at all likely to be those of the later chronology, though the comm. naturally thinks them so. ⌊Alternatively, he makes yugé = 'generations.'⌋ Ppp. has santu for kṛṇmas in b, and omits te in c. The pada-mss. read té : ánu instead of te : ánu : compare under i. 35. 4. ⌊We had a "satahpañkti" at vi. 20. 3.⌋

22. Unto autumn, unto winter, unto spring, unto summer, we commit thee; [be] the rains pleasant to thee, in which the herbs grow.

Ppp. has again dadhmasi in b.

23. Death is master of bipeds; death is master of quadrupeds; from that death, lord of kine, I bear thee up; ⌊so⌋ do thou not be afraid.

Ppp. reads for d ud dharāmi sa mā mṛta ⌊intending mṛthās?⌋.

24. Thou, unharmed one, shalt not die; thou shalt not die, be not afraid; [men] die not there, nor go to lowest darkness.

Ppp. gives in c pra mīyante—a better reading, as rectifying the meter. ⌊Pāda b occurs as vs. 1 a of a khila to RV. i. 191, with the two clauses inverted.⌋

25. Every one, verily, lives there—ox, horse, man, beast—where this charm (bráhman) is performed, a defense (paridhí) unto living.

The verse has a correspondent in TA. (vi. 11. 12), but with a different first pāda: TA. makes it ná vāí tátra prá mīyate (nearly as our 24 c in Ppp.).

26. Let it protect thee from thy fellows, from witchcraft, from thy kinsmen; be thou undying, immortal, surviving; let not thy life-breaths (ásu) leave thy body.

Ppp. reads sugantubhyas at end of b.

27. The deaths that are a hundred and one, the perditions (nāṣṭrá) that are to be over-passed—from that let the gods free thee, from Agni Vāiçvānara.

Ppp. reads in b nāṣṭrātta (-tu?) jīvyāḥ. ⌊See note to iii. 11. 5 for "101 deaths."⌋

28. Agni's body art thou, successful (pārayiṣṇú); demon-slayer art thou, rival-slayer, likewise expeller of disease, a remedy pūtúdru by name.

Pūtúdru is (OB.) Acacia catechu or Pinus deodora; the comm. reads pūtadru and does not attempt ⌊on p. 587⌋ to identify it.* The mss. vary between -ṇú and -ṇús at end of a; our edition reads -ṇús (with our P.M.E.s.m.); SPP. adopts -ṇú, with the great majority of his authorities; the comm. has -ṇus; Ppp., as noticed above, lacks this verse. There is little to choose in point of acceptability between the two readings. *⌊As noted in the introd., the use of the hymn is followed in Kāuç. 58. 15 by the binding on of pūtu-dāru (so Bl's text, with the variant pūta-; in citing the text, at p. 568, comm. has pūti-). This is explained by Daç. Kar. as an "amulet of deodar," devadāru-maṇi; and so Dār. and Keç. to 8. 15, and comm. p. 567 end.⌋

⌊The first anuvāka, 2 hymns and 49 verses, ends here. The quoted Anukr. (cf. end of h. 1) says ādyasahitam.⌋

3. To Agni: against sorcerers and demons.

[Cātana.—ṣaḍvinçam. āgneyam. trāiṣṭubham: 7, 12, 14, 15, 17, 21. bhurij; 25. 5-p. bṛhatīgarbhā jagatī; 22, 23. anuṣṭubh; 26. gāyatrī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. (in the verse-order 1–4, 6, 5, 7–14, 18, 15, 17, 16, 19–22, 24, 26, 25, 23). The first 23 verses are (in slightly different order*) vss. 1–23 of RV. x. 87, and most of them are found in no other text. ⌊Cf. Oldenberg, Die Hymnen des RV. i. 246.⌋ *⌊Namely, with 4 after 6, with 17 and 18 inverted, and with 12 between 21 and 22.⌋

⌊Kāuç. reckons the hymn to the cātana hymns (8. 25). The comm. says (p. 587, l. 18 ff.) that the whole anuvāka, that is hymn 4 as well as 3, is to be used in a variety of practices, which he details. In the vaçāçamana ceremony (44. 16), after the victim's "breath has been stopped" with ii. 34. 5, the performer takes his place at her right and mutters this hymn. Vs. 22 (not 21) is identical with vii. 71. 1, which was prescribed at 2. 10 for use in the parvan sacrifices, to accompany the carrying of fire thrice about the offering. Moreover, verses of this hymn are used in four expiatory rites as follows: vss. 15–18 accompany an oblation (112. 1) made when the cows give bloody milk; vs. 26 is used with vi. 63. 4 if spontaneous combustion occurs (46. 23); and the same vs. is used (130. 3) when there appears a bright glow without any fire; and yet again (131. 3), when the fire puffs (çvasati). Finally, the same vs. is used by Vāit. (6. 11) in the agnyādheya (with vi. 19. 2 etc.) with an offering to Agni Çuci.⌋

Translated: Henry, 7, 43; Griffith, i. 392.

1. I pour ghee upon (ā-ghṛ) the vigorous (vājín) demon-slayer; I go for broadest protection to the friend; Agni, sharpened, [is] kindled with acts of skill (? krátu); let him by day, let him by night, protect us from harm.

This verse is found further in TS. (i. 2. 14^6); neither RV. nor TS. offers a variant reading.

2. Do thou, of iron tusks, O Jātavedas, kindled, touch the sorcerers with thy flame (arcís); take hold of the false-worshipers with thy tongue; cutting off (?) the flesh-eaters, shut them in thy mouth.

The comm. reads dhṛṣṭvā in d, paraphrasing it only with dharṣitvā. RV. has vṛktví, which is most probably to be referred to root vṛj. Ppp. has datsvā (for dhatsva).

3. Apply both thy tusks, thou that hast them in both jaws (ubhayāvín), the lower one and the upper, being harmful, sharpened; also in the atmosphere go about, O Agni; put together thy grinders upon the sorcerers.

RV. reads dáṅṣṭrā at end of a, and rājan for agne at end of c. Ppp. has dehy ⌊in a, apparently⌋ and api for abhi in d.

4. O Agni, split the skin of the sorcerer; let the harmful thunderbolt smite him with flame (háras); crush his joints, O Jātavedas; let the flesh-eating, flesh-craving ⌊one⌋ divide him.

RV. (vs. 5; its vs. 4 is our 6) reads vṛkṇám for enam at the end. The comm. understands 'a wolf or the like' in d, and takes vi-ci as 'scatter about, dragging him to and fro to eat him.' It more probably refers to the flesh-eating Agni.

5. Wherever now, O Jātavedas, thou seest a sorcerer standing, O Agni, or also moving, also flying in the atmosphere, him [as] archer, pierce with a shaft, being sharpened.

RV. (vs. 6) has a quite different c, yád vā 'ntárikṣe pathíbhiḥ pátantam. Ppp. (vs. 6) reads in d viddhi çarvā. Many mss. (including our Bp.W.E.O.T.) have sárvā in d.

6. By sacrifices, O Agni, straightening (sam-nam) thine arrows, by speech smearing their tips with thunderbolts — with them pierce in the heart the sorcerers; break back (pratīcás) their arms.

'By sacrifices,' 'by speech' — i.e. in virtue of our offerings and praise. RV. (vs. 4) offers no variant; Ppp. (vs. 5) reads çalyam in b.

7. Both those that are seized do thou win (spṛ), O Jātavedas, and also the sorcerers that have seized with spears; do thou, O Agni, first, greatly gleaming, smite [him] down; let the variegated raw-flesh-eating kṣvíñkās eat him.

This verse differs somewhat, and inconsistently, from RV., which has ā́labdham in a, and, without utá, ālebhānā́t . . . yātudhā́nāt in b, giving the clear sense 'win away him that is seized from the sorcerer that has seized him,' and agreeing with the sing. tám in d. The AV. version yields no acceptable meaning; and most of the saṁhitā-mss. read ā́rabdhāṁ in a (including our P.M.W.I.: some of the others not noted), as if the word were after all a singular. The comm. reads kṣvañkās in d, and explains it simply as pakṣiviçeṣās. He gives a most absurd version of a, b: 'protect (us) who have begun (to praise thee) and (slay) with spears the sorcerers who have made a noise'! ⌊Comm. seems to read rebhāṇān and to take it from root ribh: cf. note to vs. 21.⌋ Ppp. has our version of a, b, except that it reads utā "lab- in a, and omits uta in b ⌊i.e., if I understand R., it appears to begin b with ārebhāṇāṅ⌋.

8. Proclaim thou here which that [is], O Agni — the sorcerer that is doing this; him take hold of with the fuel, O youngest [god]; subject him to the eye of the men-watcher.

RV. inserts another yás at beginning of b, and Ppp. has the same. The comm. reads kṛṇoṣi (explaining it ⌊alternatively⌋ as = kṛṇoti) at end of b, and yaviṣṭhya at end of c. ⌊Better, perhaps, in a, 'Proclaim which one he [is]' etc.⌋

9. With sharp eye, O Agni, defend thou the sacrifice; conduct it forward to the Vasus, O forethoughtful one; thee that art harmful, greatly gleaming against the demons, let not the sorcerers injure, O men-watcher.

Ppp. reads hiṅsrā at beginning of c. The comm. appears to regard abhiçoçucānam as a compound.

10. A men-watcher, do thou look around for the demon among the people (vikṣú); crush back his three points (ágra); crush, O Agni, his ribs with flame (háras); cut up threefold the root of the sorcerer.

The comm. attempts no explanation of the 'three points,' but simply glosses agra with uparibhāga.

11. Let the sorcerer thrice come within thy reach (?prásiti), who, O Agni, slays truth (ṛtá) with untruth; roaring [at] him with thy flame (arcís), O Jātavedas, do thou put him down (ni-yuj) before the eyes of the singer.

Our ní yuñdhi at the end is a weakened corruption of RV. ní vṛñdhi, which is read also by Ppp., the comm., and one of SPP's authorities. SPP. reads yuñgdhi, not heeding the rule of the Prāt. (ii. 20) to the contrary. ⌊Cf. his bhañgdhi in vs. 6. And in his "Corrections" to vol. ii., he is at pains thrice to correct vṛñdhi of p. 71–2 to vṛñgdhi.⌋ The majority of the mss. (including all ours save D.R.p.m.K.) accent ágne in b; both editions, of course, emend to agne. The comm. paraphrases prásitim with jvālām; he does not deign to add any explanation to sphūrjáyan. The occurrence of enam in d seems to require us to regard tám as object of sphūrjáyan.

12. What, O Agni, the pair utter in curses today, what harshness (tṛṣṭá) of speech the reciters (rebhá) produce: the shaft that is born of fury of the mind — with that pierce thou the sorcerers in the heart.

'That' in d is fem., as if referring to the 'shaft' alone; and the comm. regards a and b as describing faults caused by the sorcerers, which Agni is to requite — which is doubtless the true connection. Mithunā is explained as = strīpuṅsāu, and çapātas as = parasparaṁ ākroçatas. The verse is RV. vs. 13, its vs. 12 being found much further on, as our vs. 21. Ppp. again reads viddhi for vidhya in d.

13. Crush away the sorcerers with heat; crush away, O Agni, the demon with flame (háras); crush away with burning (arcís) the false-worshipers; crush away the greatly gleaming ones that feed on lives (? asutṛ́p).

RV. (vs. 14) is quite different in d: párā 'sutṛ́po abhí çóçucānaḥ. The comm. paraphrases asutṛpas with paraprāṇāir ātmānaṁ tarpayantaḥ.

14. Let the gods crush away today the wicked one (vṛjiná); let [his] curses sent forth go back upon him; let shafts strike (ṛch) in the vitals him who steals by [magic] speech; let the sorcerer come within every one's reach.

RV. (vs. 15) reads tṛṣṭā́s (for sṛṣṭā́s) at end of b, and the comm. and one of SPP's authorities have the same. The comm. this time paraphrases prásitim with prakarṣeṇa abhibhavitrīṁ hetim, adding as alternative agner jvālām.

15. The sorcerer that smears himself (sam-añj) with the flesh of men, who with that of horses, with cattle, who bears [off] the milk of the inviolable [cow], O Agni — their heads cut thou into with flame.

Ppp. reads bharata in c. ⌊The áçveyena of Aufrecht's RV.^{2} seems to be a misprint.⌋

16. Let the sorcerers bear [off] poison of the kine; let them of evil courses fall under the wrath of Aditi; let god Savitar abandon them; let them lose their share of the herbs.

'Lose': lit. 'have it conquered from them.' RV. (vs. 18: RV. inverts the order of our vss. 16 and 17) reads pibantu for bharantām (with Ppp.) in a, has the proper passive form vṛçcyantām in b (Ppp. has mṛddhyantām), and leaves enān unlingualized in c; the lingualization in our text is by Prāt. iii. 80, where the commentary quotes this passage.

17. Yearly [is] the milk of the ruddy [cow]; of that let not the sorcerer partake (aç), O men-watcher; whatever one [of them], O Agni, would fain enjoy (tṛp) the beestings, him do thou pierce back in the vitals with thy burning (arcís).

Our pada-text divides wrongly mā́ : āçīt in b; RV. has the true reading, mā́ : açīt. RV. also has márman at the end, making the triṣṭubh verse regular. Ppp. once more reads vidhi (not viddhi this time) for vidhya in d, and marman after it.

18. From of old, O Agni, thou killest the sorcerers; the demons have not conquered thee in fights; burn up the flesh-eaters together with their dupes (? mūrá); let them not be freed from thy heavenly missile.

We had this verse above, as v. 29. 11. The only variant in the version of RV. (vs. 19) is that, in c, sahámūrān is put after ánu daha; ⌊so also SV. i. 80, which has besides kayā́das for kravyā́das⌋. The comm. regards -mūrān as for -mūlān, and renders it mūlasahitān 'together with their roots,' and it is perhaps one of the cases contemplated by Prāt. i. 66 — at least, the commentary there quotes this passage as one of the instances of substitution of r for l; and it is very likely that the tradition is right.

RV. (vs. 20) reads údaktāt at end of a, and té for tyé in c; in the latter case, the comm. does the same; he supplies sphuliñgās as the missing noun in c, d. An accent-mark has dropped out in our edition under the -du- of paçcā́d utá in b.

20. From behind, in front, below, and above, do thou, O Agni, a poet, protect us about with poesy; [as] friend a friend, [as] unaging in order to old age, [as] an immortal mortals, do thou [protect] us, O Agni.

RV. (vs. 21) reads again údaktāt for utó 'ttarā́t in a, also rājan for agne at end of b, and sákhe at beginning of c; and it combines -mṇé 'gne between c and d. The comm. has martyān in d.

21. Set thou in the reciter, O Agni, that eye with which thou seest the hoof-breaking sorcerers; Atharvan-like, with brightness of the gods, scorch (uṣ) down the truth-damaging fool (acít).

The obscure epithet in b is divided in pada-text çapha°ārújaḥ (RV. -jam, and later yātudhā́nam). The comm. is in part obscure: çaphārujaḥ çaphavat çaphāḥ : nakhā ity arthaḥ; but he adds as alternative atha vā paçurūpadhāriṇāṁ çaphā apī sambhavanti: tāir ārujantī'ti çaphārujaḥ: i.e. 'breaking things with their hoofs.' The irregularity of meter allows us to suspect the tradition of the word. The comm. also strangely explains rebhe as çabdaṁ kurvate rakṣase! ⌊Root ribh: cf. note to vs. 7.⌋ Ppp. reads in d aditi for acitam.

The verse is RV. vs. 12, where it is decidedly better in place.

22. Thee the devout, O Agni, powerful one, would we fain put about us [as] a stronghold, [thee] of daring color, day by day, slayer of the destructive one.

We have had this verse above, as vii. 71. 1; for its different correspondences and variants, see the note at that place; ⌊but Ppp. here ends with bhañgurāvatām⌋. The comm., though he notes it as 'explained above,' goes on to give a new explanation, curiously accordant with and yet not a little different from the other; the most important point of difference is that, in explaining pari dhīmahi, he there gave us our choice between parito dhārayāmaḥ and paridhiṁ kurmaḥ, while here he gives us our choice between the latter and dhyāyemahi. The real reason of the repetition probably is that he this time reads at the end bhañgurāvatām, with RV. ⌊and Ppp.⌋, while before he had no variant from our AV. text. ⌊Here and in vs. 23, W. queries his version of bhañg- as he did at vii. 71, which see.⌋

23. With poison smite thou back the destructive ones, the demoniacs, O Agni, with keen brightness (çocís), with heat-pointed flames (arcí).

RV. in b lingualizes the particle to ṣma, and reads daha for jahi; and it ends d with ṛṣṭíbhis instead of the anomalous arcíbhis. Ppp. has in c çukreṇa instead of tigména.

The RV. hymn ends with four anuṣṭubh verses, of which only the first two find place thus in our text.

24. With great light Agni shineth out; he maketh all things manifest by his greatness; he forceth away the ill-conditioned ungodly wiles; he sharpeneth his two horns to gore the demons.

All the authorities read at the end viníkṣve, and even the comm. is with them, calling the v a Vedic accretion (vakāropajanaç chāndasaḥ). RV., in the corresponding verse (v. 2. 9: repeated without variant in TS. i. 2. 14^7), has viníkṣe, which our edition reads by emendation, SPP. retaining the totally inadmissible v, which seems to have blundered into the word out of ví nikṣva in the following verse. RV. (and TS.) has before it rákṣase (sing.).

25. The two horns that thou hast, O Jātavedas, unaging, of keen thrust, sharpened by devotion (bráhmaṇ) — with them do thou gore, O Jātavedas, the attacking enemy (durhā́rd), the advancing kimīdín with thy flame (arcís).

At the end of this verse, nikṣva seems to have been taken for a 2d sing. middle; but it is doubtless a corruption* for nikṣa, the root showing an a-stem elsewhere. Ppp. avoids the error by reading nṛcakṣaḥ; and also yātudhānam for arciṣā before it, which gets rid of yet another difficulty of construction, though it makes the irregular meter yet worse. In our edition, in d, the accent-mark which should stand under the do of jātavedo has slipped out of place to the left, under ve. *⌊We must assume that the corruption is an old one if the v of viníkṣve is to be ascribed to it. Since the forms from stem nikṣa- are so few (in 3 AV. verses), perhaps we might after all assume that this is a root-class imperative, nikṣ-ṣva.⌋

26. Agni drives off the demons, he of bright brightness, immortal, bright, purifying, laudable.

This verse is RV. vii. 15. 10, and is found also in TB. (ii. 4. 1⁶) and MS. (iv. 11. 5); the text is the same in all. ⌊Ritual uses, above.⌋

⌊Here ends the third artha-sūkta and the quoted Anukr. says tṛtīyaṁ tu.⌋

4. Against sorcerers and demons: to Indra and Soma.

[Cātana.—pañcaviṅçakam. mantroktadevatyam. jāgatam: 8–14, 16, 17, 19, 22, 24. triṣṭubh; 20, 23. bhurij; 25. anuṣṭubh.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. (with exchange of order between 4 and 5, and between 19 and 20). It is, with no change of order of verses, and with only few and insignificant variants, RV. vii. 104; not a verse occurs further in any other text, so far as known.

⌊No ritual use of the hymn is prescribed either by Kāuç. or by Vāit. But the comm. regards this hymn as used with the preceding one in a variety of practices: see h. 3.⌋

Translated: by the RV. translators; and as AV. hymn by Henry, 10, 47; Griffith, i. 396.

1. O Indra-and-Soma, burn the demon, oppress (ubj) [him]; put (arpay-) down, ye two bulls, them that thrive in darkness; crush away, scorch down the fools (acít); slay, push, pin (çā) down the devourers.

Tamovṛ́dh may be (so Ludwig) 'increaser of darkness.' The comm. has nothing better than hiṅs to suggest for ubj.

2. O Indra-and-Soma, against ⌊abhí⌋ the evil-plotter, the evil, let heat boil all up ⌊sam-yas⌋ like a fiery pot; assign unavoidable hate unto the brahman-hating, flesh-eating kimīdín of terrible aspect.

The construction and meaning of the first half-verse are doubtful; the comm. glosses yayastu with simple gacchatu. RV. has agnivā́n instead of -mā́n in b. In our edition, the accent-sign which should stand under gni in this word has slipped to the right, under mān. ⌊Here W. seems to take sam as intensive and to render its force by "all up." Neither in BR. nor in the Index is it joined with yas: but cf. saṁ-yāsa.⌋

3. O Indra-and-Soma, pierce ye the evil-doers within their hiding-place (vavrá), in untenable darkness, whence there shall not come up again any one soever of them; be that your furious might unto overpowering.

RV. reads at beginning of c yáthā nā́ 'taḥ pún-. In our edition read duṣkṛ́to in a.

4. O Indra-and-Soma, cause to roll (vṛt) from the sky the deadly weapon, from the earth also, a shattering for the evil-plotter; shape out from the mountains (párvata) the noisy one, wherewith ye burn down the increasing demon.

The comm. glosses svaryà with svaraṇārha. Ppp. has the easier reading pra harataṁ for vartayatam in a.

5. O Indra-and-Soma, cause [it] to roll forth from the sky; with fire-heated, stone-smiting, unaging heat-weapons do ye pierce the devourers in the abyss; let them go to silence.

Ppp. reads divas for yuvam in b; the comm. has in d niḥsvaram, which would be a good reading, but is against the pada-texts of both RV. and AV. (ni°svarám).

6. O Indra-and-Soma, be there about you on all sides this prayer (matí), as a girth [about] two vigorous (vājín) horses, the invocation (hótrā) that I send forth to you with wisdom; these acts of worship (bráhman) quicken ye like two lords of men.

RV. reads in d nṛpátī ’va, as the meter demands, and so do our P.M.W.R.T.K. and part of SPP's authorities, also the comm., and Ppp., and this is, almost beyond question, the true text; but SPP. adopts in his edition nṛpátī iva, with the remainder (a majority) of his saṁhitā authorities. The pada-reading is probably nṛpátī ivé ’ti nṛpátī°iva, as all the pada-mss. except our Bp. (both copies) appear to read, and as the RV. pada reads; but we should altogether expect nṛpátī ’vé ’ti nṛpátī°iva, as Bp. reads. The anomaly of the addition of íti after iva instead of after nṛpátī (first time) is noted in Prāt. i. 82 c; the Prāt. takes no notice of the exceptional combination nṛpatī ’va — which is, to be sure, an argument against its right to stand in the saṁhitā-text: see note to Prāt. iii. 33. The retention of dental n in hinómi after pari is prescribed by Prat. iii. 88. Ppp. reads instead pra hiṇomi. ⌊Cf. Geldner, Ved. Stud. ii. 134.⌋

7. Remember ye with [your] rapid courses; smite the haters, the destructive demoniacs; O Indra-and-Soma, let there not be ease (sugá) for the evil-doer, the hater that at any time vexes me.

RV. reads, in d, nas for mā, and druhā́ for druhús. Ppp. ends with (for abhi . . .) api kā cid ud ūhuḥ. The retention of dental s in práti smar- is by Prāt. ii. 102; the passage is there quoted in the commentary. Our comm. glosses tujayadbhis with balavadbhis, and attenuates the difficult prati smarethām to prati gacchatam.

8. Whoever reviles with untrue speeches me walking with simple mind — like waters grasped with the fist, let the speaker of what is not be [himself] non-existent, O Indra.

The comm. glosses abhicáṣṭe with abhiçāpaṁ karoti. The long initial vowel of ā́satas (p. ásataḥ) is by Prāt. iii. 21, iv. 90; the passage is there quoted.

9. They who distract (vi-hṛ) with [their] courses him of simple intent, or who spoil at their will (svadhā́bhis) what is excellent — let Soma either deliver them up to the serpent, or let him set them in the lap of perdition.

The comm. declares svadhā in b an annanāma, and renders svadhābhis by annāir nimittabhūtāiḥ, 'for food'! An accent-mark is wanting in our text over the ya of dūṣáyanti in b.

10. Whoever, O Agni, tries to harm our taste of drink, of horses, of kine, whoever of our bodies — let the enemy, the thief, the theft-committer, go to want (dabhrá); let him be degraded with self and with posterity.

RV. reads in b yó áçvānām̐ yó gávām, and the comm. does the same. ⌊But SPP. reports that Sāyaṇa's text reads b thus: ye aç. ye g. yas t.⌋ A number of our mss. (P.M.W.R.K.) read ví for ní at beginning of d, but SPP. reports no such variant among his authorities. The form ṣá after ní here is not quoted in the Prāt. commentary. ⌊Join nas rather with the genitives of a and b?⌋

11. Be he far away, with self and with posterity, be he beneath all the three earths, let his glory dry up, ye gods, who by day and who by night tries to harm me.

RV. reads in d nas instead of mā.

12. It is easy of understanding for a knowing man (jána) [that] true and untrue words (vácas) are at variance; of them what is true, whichever is more right, that Soma verily favors; he smites the untrue.

Ppp. reads pasprçāte at end of b.

13. Soma by no means furthers the wicked [man], nor the kshatríya who maintains [anything] falsely; he smites the demon; he smites the speaker of untruth; both lie within reach of Indra.

14. If I am one of false gods, or if I put upon (? api-ūh) the gods what is vain, O Agni — why art thou angry with us, O Jātavedas? let them of hateful speech obtain (sac) misery of thee.

RV. reads ā́sa instead of ásmi at end of a. The comm. renders te in d as if it were té; for the difficult apy-ūhé he gives simply vahāmi (mogham̐ vyartham̐ devān stotavyān yaṣṭavyāñç ca apyūhe vahāmi).

15. May I die today if I am a sorcerer, or if I have burnt (tap) a man's lifetime; then let him be divided from ten heroes who vainly says to me "thou sorcerer."

The comm. glosses vīrāis with putrāis, which is probably its virtual meaning: 'may he lose ten heroic sons.' Our pada-text differs from that of RV. by dividing daçá°bhiḥ in c. Ppp. reads pāuruṣasya in b.

16. Whoever to me that am no sorcerer (áyātu) says "thou sorcerer," or whatever demoniac says "I am pure (çúci)" — let Indra smite him with a great deadly weapon; may he fall lowest of every creature.

Ā́yātu doubtless literally 'that have no yātú or familiar demon' (though the proper accent in such case would be ayātú), opposite of yātumánt 'possessing such a yātú,' or yātudhā́na 'holding or containing such.'

17. She who goes forth in the night like an owl (?), hateful, hiding herself away — may she fall down into an endless hole (vavrá); let the [pressing-] stones smite the demoniacs with [their] noises.

RV. again (as in 7 d) reads druhā́ for druhús in b; also vavrā́n anantā́n áva in c. Ppp. reads dūhas in b; and the comm. has upa instead of apa. He glosses khargálā with ulūkī.

18. Scatter yourselves, O Maruts, among the people (vikṣú); seek, seize, crush (sam-piṣ) the demoniacs, who, becoming birds, fly in the nights, or who have put defilements (rípas) on the heavenly sacrifice.

RV. has bhūtvī́ in c. SPP. reads ī́3cchata in a, because the great majority of his authorities give it. This is contrary to the established usage of both RV. and AV. (but in accordance with that of SV.), although in nearly every such case a part of the mss. lengthen the vowel; part of ours do the same here, as elsewhere. The comm. glosses ripas with hiṅsās; and dadhire with dhārayanti!

19. Cause the stone to roll forth from the sky, O Indra; [it,] sharpened by Soma, do thou wholly sharpen, O liberal one; from before, from away, from below, from above, do thou smite upon the demoniacs with a mountain.

RV. reads in a áçm- after divó, and some of SPP's authorities do the same. RV. has also prā́ktād ápāktād and údaktād in c; the directions admit also of being understood as from east, west, south, and north.

20. Here fly these dog-sorcerers (çvā́yātu); Indra the unharmable they the harm-seeking seek to harm; the mighty one (çakrá) sharpens his deadly weapon for the treacherous ones (píçuna); now may he let fly (sṛj) the thunderbolt at the sorcerers (yātumánt).

The epithets like çvā́yātu in this verse and below in vs. 22 seem by their accent (and by comparison with yātumánt and yātudhā́na) to signify strictly 'one having a dog (etc.) for his familiar demon.' The comm. glosses with çvarūpadhāriṇaḥ çvasahitā [vā]. Ppp. combines at end of b -vo adābhyam.

21. Indra was the crusher-away of the familiar demons (yātú), of the oblation-disturbers, of them who strive to win upon [it]; let the mighty one (çakrá) attack them that are demoniacs as an ax the woods, splitting [them] like vessels.

RV. reads eti in d, and no small share of the AV. mss. (the majority of SPP's) do the same (including our P.s.m.I.D.R.p.m.Kp.); both editions give etu. The AV. pada-text, like the RV., divides and accents in b abhí : ā°vívāsatām. The Petersburg Lexicons treat the abhi as if in direct combination with the participle; and they translate 'approach with hostile intent,' which is highly arbitrary. The comm. gives no aid, rendering simply abhimukhaṁ gacchatām. Ppp. reads in b -matīnām. ⌊W. would probably have changed "crusher-away" to "demolisher" on the revision.⌋

22. The owl-sorcerer, the owlet-(?)sorcerer smite thou, the dog-sorcerer and the cuckoo-sorcerer, the eagle-(? suparṇá-)sorcerer and the vulture-sorcerer — do thou destroy (pra-mṛṇ) the demon, O Indra, as if with a mill-stone.

As to the renderings of these various names for sorcerers, see under vs. 20. For çuçulūka- Ppp. has çulūka-, the comm. çiçulūka-. The translation of it is a mere guess, to avoid transferring the word.

23. Let not the sorcerous demon reach us; let the kimīdíns that are paired fade away; let the earth protect us from earthly distress, let the atmosphere protect us from heavenly.

RV. reads, in a, b, yātumā́vatām ápo 'chatu mithunā́ yā́ kimīdínā. Ppp. has kimīdinām. The comm. glosses apo 'chantu with simple apa gacchantu. The pada-division of yāt- in a is yātu○mā́vat both in AV. and in RV.; the word is the subject of Prāt. iv. 8.

24. O Indra, smite the man sorcerer, likewise the woman ⌊who is⌋ prevailing with magic (māyā́); let the neckless false-worshipers vanish (? ṛd); let them not see the sun moving upward.

The obscure ṛdantu in c is glossed by the comm. with naçyantu; Ppp. reads rujanta instead. Çā́çadānām the comm. explains as = hiñsatīm.

5. Against witchcraft etc.: with an amulet.

Found also (except vs. 18) in Pāipp. xvi. *⌊The Berlin ms. reads -garbhā "stāra-, which is more nearly right.⌋

⌊Kāuç. uses the hymn, with iii. 5 etc., to accompany the binding on of an amulet in a rite (19. 22) for general prosperity; and again, with ii. 11 etc., in a rite (39. 7) against witchcraft. It is reckoned (note to 19. 1) to the puṣṭika mantras. To the svastyayana gaṇa (note to 25. 36) are reckoned vs. 18 (not 15: and probably not xix. 20. 4, which has the same pratīka as 18) and its fellow vs. 19; and to the abhaya gaṇa (note to 16. 8), vs. 22. The comm. cites from Nakṣ. Kalpa (19) the use of the hymn in a mahāçānti called rāudrī. Vāit. passes the hymn unnoticed.⌋

Translated: Henry, 14, 50; Griffith, i. 400; Bloomfield, 79, 575.

1. This reverting amulet, a hero, is bound on a hero; heroic, rival-slaying, true hero, a very propitious protection.

The comm. calls the amulet tilakavṛkṣanirmita, thus ⌊cf. comm. to vss. 4, 8⌋ identifying tilaka and srāktya. Ppp. omits our b and the first words of our c, reading as its b sapatnahas suvīraḥ: then paripāṇaḥ etc.

2. This amulet, rival-slaying, having excellent heroes, powerful, vigorous, overpowering, formidable, a hero, goes to meet the witchcrafts, spoiling [them].

Ppp. reads etu in c.

3. With this amulet Indra smote Vritra; with this he, being filled with wisdom, ruined the Asuras; with this he conquered both, heaven-and-earth here; with this he conquered the four directions.

Ppp. reads, for c, anena dyāvāpṛthivī ubhe ajayat.

4. This amulet of sraktyá, back-turning, reverting, forcible, remover of scorners, controlling — let it protect us on all sides.

Ppp. reads maṇis again for vaçī in c; also viçvatas at the end.

5. This Agni says, this also Soma says, this Brihaspati, Savitar, Indra; let these gods, my representatives (puróhita), drive the witchcrafts backward with the reverters.

In this verse and the next, Ppp. has the better reading pratisareṇa for -rāis in d. The first half-verse is found again below as xix. 24. 8 c, d. ⌊Cf. also MS. i. 5. 3. The first pāda recurs at xvi. 9. 2.⌋

6. I interpose heaven-and-earth, also the day, also the sun; let these gods, my representatives, drive the witchcrafts backward with the reverters.

'Interpose' — i.e. between me and what I dread. Ppp. pratisareṇa in d, as noted above; also, for b, utāi 'va brahmaṇaspatim; and, at beginning of c, te te devāṣ pu-.

7. The people who make the amulet of sraktyá their defenses — like the sun ascending the sky, it, controlling, drives away the witchcrafts.

Ppp. puts iva after divam in c.

8. By the amulet of sraktyá, as by a seer (ṛ́ṣi) full of wisdom, I have conquered all fighters; I smite away the scorners, the demoniacs.

9. The witchcrafts that are of the Añgirases, the witchcrafts that are of the Asuras, the witchcrafts that are self-made, and those that are brought by others — let these, of both kinds, go away to the distances, across ninety navigable [streams].

'Self-made' (svayaṁkṛta), doubtless 'made by ourselves'; the comm. so understands. 'Navigable' — i.e. not to be crossed without the help of a boat. SPP's mss. do not punctuate between b and c, but the comm. does so, like our edition. Ppp. combines kṛtyā "ñgirasīr, has for b yāḥ kṛtyā "surīr uta (the addition rectifying the meter), and combines in f nāvyā 'ti; and in c it puts yās after kṛtyās.

10. On this man let the gods bind the amulet [as] defense: [namely,] Indra, Vishṇu, Savitar, Rudra, Agni, Prajāpati, Parameshṭhin, Virāj, Vāiçvānara, and all the seers.

11. Thou art the chief (uttamá) of herbs, as the ox of moving creatures (jágat), as the tiger of wild beasts (çvápad); whom we sought, him have we found, a watcher near at hand (?).

The mark of division in this verse is badly placed in our edition; it should be after çvápadām iva, as in the mss. ⌊and SPP's edition⌋. SPP. reads at the end, with all the mss., ántitam; the comm. this time (cf. the note to vi. 4. 2) gives us our choice between taking it as one word (= atyantasaṁnihitam) or two (= tam eva antike); Ppp. avoids the difficulty by reading instead adhruvam. To me the emendation to ánti tám seems unacceptable. The comm. reads before it pratispāçinam. Prāt. iii. 10 notes the double form çvápad and çvā́pad. The first three pādas are found again below as xix. 39. 4 a, b, c; the irregular uttamás instead of uttamā́ seems due to the influence of the two masculine nouns in the double comparison.

12. He verily becomes a tiger, likewise a lion, likewise a bull, likewise a lessener of rivals, who bears this amulet.

'Lessener'—lit'ly 'one who makes lean'; but, though all the mss. and both editions have -kárçana, it can hardly be otherwise than a misreading for -kárṣaṇa, which the comm. gives. Ppp. has a wholly different c, sarvā diço vi rājati (as our 13 c), and so deprives us of its witness.

13. Not Apsarases smite him, not Gandharvas, not mortals; he reigns over (vi-rāj) all the quarters who bears this amulet.

14. Kaçyapa created thee; Kaçyapa collected thee; Indra bore thee in human wise (?); bearing [thee], he conquered in the conflict (?); the amulet, of thousand-fold might, the gods made their defense.

The obscure mā́nuṣe, in c, the comm. explains as ⌊a collective⌋ = mānuṣeṣu madhye; he reads in d saṁçreṣaṇe, which is much more acceptable; one is inclined also to conjecture saṁçreṣiṇo 'jayat. Ppp. brings no help, only reading abadhnata for akṛṇvata at the end.

⌊The comm. reckons our e, f as a separate verse, the 5th of his "decad," thus making this "decad" come out with 13 vss. (instead of 22 – 10 = 12, as in the Berlin ed.).⌋

15. Whoever with witchcrafts, whoever with consecrations, whoever with sacrifices desires to slay thee—him do thou, O Indra, smite back with the hundred-jointed thunderbolt.

16. Let this back-turning, forcible, all-conquering amulet verily defend [our] progeny and riches, a very propitious protection.

Ppp. reads sahasvān instead of ojasvān in b. Our text should, for consistency, read ójasvānt s-.

17. Freedom from rivals for us below, freedom from rivals for us above, freedom from rivals for us behind, O Indra, light in front make thou, O hero.

Or the directions may be understood as south, north, west, and east. Ppp. has, for c, indra piçācaṁ naṣ paçcāt.

18. A defense for me [be] heaven-and-earth, a defense the day, a defense the sun, a defense for me both Indra and Agni; a defense let Dhātar assign (dhā) to me.

Compare AÇS. i. 2. 1 ⌊and ĀpÇS. xiv. 26. 1⌋ with a, b; both substitute agnis for ahar. The verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp. The comm. omits me in c. The first half-verse occurs again as xix. 20. 4 a, b.

19. Indra-and-Agni's abundant formidable defense, which not all the gods together pierce through — let that, being great, save my body on all sides, that I may be long-lived, attaining old age.

With d compare VS. xxxiv. 52 d, which differs from it only by reading at the end the irregular form ásam. Ppp. has te for me in c, and asat in d ⌊though the pronoun calls for asas⌋.

20. The divine amulet hath ascended me, in order to great unharmedness; enter ye together unto this post (? methí), body-protecting, thrice-defending, in order to vigor (ójas).

Ppp. reads tvā instead of mā in a, and enyam instead of methim in c. The comm. questions whether mahyāi in b means mahatyāi or mahyam! The difficult and doubtful second half-verse puzzles him (as us) greatly: first he regards 'men' as addressed (he narāḥ), and takes methi as 'a stirrer-up, a destroyer of enemies,' or alternatively as a post in a threshing floor (methī khale yatho 'cchirā vartata evam ayam apī 'ti; or, secondly, the gods are addressed, and methi means an amulet representing such a post (methīsthānīyam maṇim).

21. In this let Indra deposit manliness; this, O gods, enter ye together unto, in order to long life-time of a hundred autumns; that he may be long-lived, attaining old age.

22. Giver of welfare, lord of the people, Vritra-slayer, masterful remover of scorners, let Indra bind ⌊for thee⌋ the amulet, [he] that has conquered, is unconquered, soma-drinking, fearless-making bull; let him defend thee on all sides, by day and by night on all sides.

The majority of mss. (nearly all SPP's) put no pause at the end of d (after aparājitaḥ). The first two pādas are nearly the same with i. 21. 1 a, b, above (and with other texts: see the note to that verse). Ppp. omits a, b, and reads (better) sarvadā instead of sarvatas at end of f. ⌊An accent-mark is lacking under the so of somapāḥ.⌋

6. To guard a pregnant woman from demons.

[Mātṛnāman.—ṣaḍviñçam. mātṛnāmādevatyam uta mantroktadevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 2. purastādbṛhatī; 10. 3-av. 6-p. jagatī; 11, 12, 14, 16. pathyāpañkti; 15. 3-av. 7-p. çakvarī brāhmaṇaspatyā; 17. tathā jagatī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi., ⌊but with vs. 8 before 7, vs. 15 between 11 and 12, and vs. 24 between 13 and 14⌋.

⌊The hymn is reckoned by Kāuç. (8. 24), with ii. 2 (which see) and vi. 111, to the mātṛnāmāni. It is employed in the sīmanta rite (35. 20) in the eighth month of a woman's pregnancy with binding on an amulet "as specified in the text" (cf. vs. 20):

Dār. and Keç. and comm. (p. 636¹, p. 648⁸) say an amulet of white and yellow mustard; the Ath. Paddh. seems to prescribe a "talisman in the form of a doll made of red and yellow mustard plants" (?) and reaching from the woman's neck to her navel. In Dārila's note on the same passage (35.20), vs. 18 is specially cited for the same rite. The hymn is not noticed by Vāit.⌋

Translated: Weber, Ind. Stud. v. 251; Ludwig, p. 523; Henry, 17, 54; Griffith, i. 403.

1. The two spouse-finders which thy mother rubbed up for thee when born (fem.) — for them ⌊tátra⌋ let not the ill-named one be greedy, the alíṅça nor the vatsápa (calf-drinker or -protector?).

Weber (and Zimmer after him: p. 321) conjectures that the two 'winners of a husband' are the breasts, and that the reference is to the ceremonious washing of the young child. The numerous names of evil beings in the hymn are in good part unknown elsewhere and untranslatable; of some of them tentative versions can be added in parenthesis. The comm. reads alīças in d, and explains it as ali + īça ⌊taking ali as diseases (or deities representing them) that fly about like bees⌋.

2. Palāla (straw) and anupalāla (after-straw), çárku, kóka (cuckoo), malimlucá (robber), palī́jaka, the entwiner (āçréṣa), the wrap-garmented, the bear-necked, the winking one.

Ppp. reads çulkam for çarkum in a; in b, malīmṛtaṁ palītakam; in c, açleṣam, and adds ⌊cf. vss. 5, 23⌋ at the end muṣkayor apa hanmasi 'we smite away in the pudenda,' which gives a construction to the accusatives of which our text is alone made up. The comm. gives in b palīcakam; he supplies nāçayāmi to govern the accusatives.

3. Approach (sam-vṛt) thou not; creep thou not on; creep not down between the thighs; I make for her a remedy, the bajá, expeller of the ill-named.

Ppp. reads javam instead of bajam in d. The comm. identifies baja with the white mustard (çvetasarṣapa) ⌊see introd.⌋.

4. Both the ill-named and the well-named — both seek approach (saṁvṛ́t); the niggards (arā́ya) we smite away; let the well-named seek what is woman's (strāíṇa).

Ppp. reads icchatām at end of b, and omits the second half-verse. The comm. explains strāiṇam as striyāḥ sambandhy aṅgaṁ strīsamūhaṁ vā; he takes -nāman from root nam. The ṇ of durṇāman is prescribed by Prāt. iii. 84.

5. The ásura that is black, hairy, tuft-born, also snouted (túṇḍika) — the niggards we smite away from her pudenda, from her buttocks (bháṅsas).

Ppp. reads, in c, d, asyā bhaṅsaso muṣkayor apa ⌊cf. vss. 2, 23⌋.

6. The after-snuffling, fore-feeling, and the much-licking flesh-eater, the niggards, the dog-kiṣkins, hath the brown bajá made to disappear.

Ppp. reads, for c, rāyaç çukaskiṇaṁ; the comm. has ca kiṣkiṇas (for çvakiṣ-); and he explains kiṣkin to mean either 'uttering the sound kiṣ kiṣ,' or 'constantly injuring' (from the root kiṣk).

7. He who lies with (ni-pad) thee in sleep, having become [like] a brother and like a father — them, eunuch-formed, tiara-decked (tirīṭín), let the bajá force (sah) from here.

Tirīṭin = 'womanish,' as wearing a distinctive woman's head-dress; the comm., however, paraphrases the word with antardhānenā 'ṭataḥ, as if from tiraḥ-aṭin! Ppp. puts the verse after vs. 8, and reads suptām̐ for svapne in a, and, in c, d, vajas tam̐ . . . klībarūpam̐ kirīṭinam. ⌊Cf. RV. x. 162. 5–6 with our vss. 7–8.⌋

8. He who surprises (tsar) thee sleeping, who tries to harm thee waking — them the circling (pari-kram) sun hath made to vanish away like a shadow.

Both translators understand the second half-verse to mean 'them hath the baja made to vanish, as the sun the shadow,' and the comm. takes it in the same way; but, though that may be the virtual sense, it is not what the line actually says. Ppp. reads, in a, suptām̐ chinatti, with ca for tvā in b. The comm. has carati instead of tsarati in a. Nearly all our mss. (all save D.R.) read jā̆gratim at end of b, but SPP. strangely reports no such variant from any of his authorities.

9. Whoever makes this woman one having a dead child (-vatsá), or a miscarriage, him, O herb, do thou make disappear, lustful ⌊accusative⌋ for her, slippery.

The last pāda is very obscure and doubtful, and quite otherwise understood by the translators; the version given follows the Petersburg Lexicon. The comm. interprets kamalam by garbhadvāram, and añjivam by abhivyaktimad mlakṣaṇopetam̐ vā, and supplies to them kuru. Ppp. reads instead kamalavam̐ dyuvam; it also reverses the order of mṛtávatsām and ávatokām in a, b. Añjivám (p. añji॰vám) is quoted under Prāt. iv. 18 as an example of a word made with a taddhita-suffix beginning with v.

10. They who dance around the dwellings (çā́lā) in the evening, making donkey-noises — they that [are] kusū́las (granaries) and kukṣilás (paunchy), exalted (kakubhá), karúmas, srímas — these, O herb, with thy smell do thou make to disappear scattered.

One or two of our mss. (as of SPP's) read strīmāḥ (I.) or sṛ́māḥ (W.) at end of d, or omit the visarga before it (M.s.m.W.O.). Ppp. reads, for c, d, kuçūlā yaç ca kukṣulā kakubhā svarasā (-ramā?) sumā; the comm., for the last two words, has kharumāḥ çrumāḥ; he interprets kusūlās as kusūlākṛtayas, kukṣilās as bṛhatkukṣayas, and kakubhās as arjunavṛkṣavad bhayam̐karākṛtayas. ⌊Over "exalted" W. has interlined "humped?" As for srīma, cf. sṛ́ma in OB.⌋

11. The kukúndhas, the kukū́rabhas, that bear skins (kṛ́tti), pelts (? dūrçá), dancing on like impotent men, that make a noise in the forest — them we make disappear from here.

Ppp. reads kakundhāṣ karūrabhāṣ kṛtyāir duriçāni bibhrati: klīvāi 'va pr. ghoṣām̐ ye kurvate vane. The comm. has kṛkandhāḥ kukūravāḥ kṛtyāir dūṣyāṇi.

12. They who do not endure yonder sun, burning down from the sky, the niggards, buck-clothed, ill-smelling, red-mouthed, the mákakas, we make to disappear.

Ppp. reads in c rāyāṁ vastavāsino, and, in e, mṛṣakān for makakān. In bastavāsin, Weber understands -vāsin as 'smelling,' the Petersburg Lexicons (also Ludwig alternatively) as 'bleating' (for -vāçin); the comm. avicarmavasanān. ⌊For the verse-sequence in Ppp., see above.⌋

13. They who, putting their excessive self on the shoulder, carry [it], thrusters-forth of women's hips — O Indra, make the demons disappear.

The comm. has several different explanations of the first half-verse, the translators as many more; a literal rendering seems admissible enough. Ppp. reads for b ahiṁ mādhāya bibhrati.

14. They who go before a woman, bearing horns (pl.) in the hand, stayers in the oven, laughing out, who make light in the tuft — them we make to disappear from here.

All our mss., and nearly all those of SPP., read badhvàs in a, and our edition follows them. SPP. gives in his text vadhvàs, with the commentator. In c, he adopts āpākeṣṭhā́s, with a small minority of his mss., and directly against Prāt. ii. 94, which prescribes -sthā́s. One would like to emend to apāk- 'standing aloof.'

15. Of whom the front-feet are behind, the heels in front, the faces in front, who are threshing-floor-born, dung-smoke-born, who are úruṇḍas and maṭmaṭás, pot-testicled, ayāçús (impotent ?) — these from her, O Brahmaṇaspati, do thou make to disappear by attention (? pratībodhá).

Ppp. reads in c çākadh-, in d ye ca mayyajā, and in e combines -ṣkā 'yāç-. Some of our mss. (Bp.P.M.W.), as of SPP's, read múkhāḥ at end of b. The comm. has, for d, aruṇḍā ye ca muṭmuṭāḥ; he explains ayāçavas by ayo vāyur vāyuvad āçugāminaḥ.

16. With eyes cast about, not looking forward (? ápracaṅkaça), womenless be the eunuchs; make to fall down, O remedy, him who, not her husband, tries to approach this woman that has a husband.

The comm. reads in a pracaṅkaçās, and strangely explains it ⌊alternatively⌋ as =prakṣīṇorupradeçās; for paṇḍagās in b he has pannagās (pādena na gacchantaḥ); for pādaya in c, pātaya. Ppp. gives in e svapati.

17. The bristling, hermit-haired, grinding up, much handling one, hastening up, copper-colored, snouted (? tuṇḍéla) and çáluḍa, pierce thou forth with the foot, with the heel, as a kicking cow a pot.

Doubtless the concluding word should be spandanā́, as given by SPP., in accordance, as he claims, with all but two of his authorities. The mss. are always so careless and untrustworthy in their distinction of sp and sy that it must be the sense rather than their testimony that decides in any case which is the true reading. Ppp. appears to have syandanā. The combination upéṣantam (p. upa॰éṣantam: Ppp. upeçantam) is according to Prāt. iii. 52; the passage is quoted in the commentary to that rule; the comm. ⌊and his text⌋ read here upāiṣ-. The comm. also has çālaḍam (Ppp. çālūḍham) in d, and takes prá vidhya (Ppp. pravṛddhi) in e as pravídhya, gerund. Further, he has prāsyāt instead of pārṣṇyā, and, at the end, spandanāt. His verse-division is different from ours, as he reckons e, f to vs. 18. He explains marīmṛçam in b as =punaḥpunar mṛçantam. Ppp. has, for udumbalaṁ tuṇḍelam, adaraṁ sulatuṇḍenam.

18. Whoever shall handle thy embryo, or shall make it born dead — let the brown one, with formidable bow, make him pierced to the heart.

The comm. explains prati mṛçāt by pīḍayet. The ā of hṛdayāvídham, and its non-division in pada-text, are the subject of Prāt. iii. 3, iv. 68. ⌊Delete the accent mark under tu in d.⌋

19. They who suddenly make die those that are born, [who] lie by the bearing [women] — the Gandharvas, woman-seekers (?), let the brown one drive, as the wind a cloud.

Ppp. begins ye sto j-, and ends abhrāi vātāi 'va rājatu. The comm. explains amnojātān as = ardhotpannān. The Prāt., ii. 52, expressly prescribes that the final of amnáḥ is not ⌊convertible into⌋ r — which seems a plain acknowledgment that at a later period the word was treated as being amnár.

20. Let [her] maintain what is left (?); what is set, let not that fall down; let the two formidable remedies, to be borne in the under garment, defend thine embryo.

Parisṛṣṭam in a is very hard to deal with, both on account of the meaning and because combinations of root sṛj with pari are hardly met with; the Pet. Lexicon suggests emendation to -çriṣṭam; as both Ppp. and the comm. have -çiṣṭam, I have taken the liberty of so translating. The comm. paraphrases it by homādiviniyogāvaçiṣṭaṁ sarṣapadvayam ⌊see the introduction⌋ and makes it the object of dhārayatu. Ppp. also reads yujyatam for yad dhitam in b, and, at the end, nivabhāryayāu. ⌊Whitney queries for a: 'Let what is wreathed about (pari-sṛj) maintain.' This might refer to bandages swathed around, to support the abdomen. In b, hitám would refer to the embryo (cf. dhātā dadhātu etc.), and áva pādi to untimely delivery (cf. i. 11. 4–6).⌋

21. From the rim-nosed, the tañgalvà, the shady (? cháyaka) and naked, from the kimīdín, let the brown one protect thee about for progeny, for husband.

Or chāyaka may come from root chā, and so signify 'tearing' or the like; the comm. reads instead sāyakāt. Ppp. has at the beginning pavāinasā tañ-.

22. From the two-mouthed, the four-eyed, the five-footed, the fingerless one, from the much twining twiner (vṛ́nta) that creeps forth upon [one], do thou protect [her] about.

All the pada-mss. most absurdly divide anam◦guréḥ at end of b; SPP. properly emends to anañguréḥ, but why "with Sāyaṇa" is not evident; Ppp. reads anañguleḥ; and further has, in c, vṛddhād adhi pra-. SPP. seems to regard the comm. as reading abhiprasarpataḥ.

23. They who eat raw meat, and who the flesh of men, the hairy ones [that] devour embryos — them we make to disappear from here.

Ppp. combines at the beginning yā "mam, and has in place of our d 'rāyān ⌊combined keçavārāyān⌋ asyā bhañsaso muṣkayor apa hanmasi (as in its version of our 5 c, d — cf. 2). The pada-reading keça◦vā́ḥ is quoted in the commentary to Prāt. iv. 18.

24. They that creep away from the sun, as a daughter-in-law away from her father-in-law — let both bajá and piñgá pierce in into their heart.

Pari in a, though compounded with the verb, has the value of a strengthener of the ablative sense of sū́ryāt, as ádhi in b of that of çváçurāt. ⌊Cf. Geldner, Ved. Stud. i. 270.⌋

25. Piñgá, defend thou [the child] in process of birth; let them not make the male female; let not the egg-eaters injure the embryos; drive thou the kimīdíns from here.

In b, lit'ly 'not make the man a woman.' Ppp. puts the mā after pumāñsam.

26. Childlessness, still-birth, also crying, guilt (aghá), barrenness (? āvayá) — that do thou attach to [our] enemy (ápriya), as if having made a garland from a tree.

Ppp. reads, in a, b, mārtavatsam āmābhrogham agham ānayam. The comm. has, for agham āvayam, aghavāvayam, and paraphrases it with aghānām pāpānāṁ tatphalabhūtānāṁ duḥkhānāṁ vā 'sakṛd vayanam. It is curious that both ā-vayam and mārta-vatsam are quoted in the commentary to Prāt. iv. 18, as if their second member were 'a taddhita beginning with v.' — ⌊Cf. MB. i. 1. 14; MP. i. 4. 11.⌋

⌊Here ends the third anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 48 verses. It is also the end of the sixth artha-sūkta, which begins with yāú te. The quoted Anukr. says yāu te.⌋

7. To the plants: for some one's restoration to health.

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. ⌊with verses 16–19 in the order 16, 18, 19, 17⌋. *⌊The mss. have sāṣṭāviñçakam.⌋ †⌊The Anukr. omits the definition of vss. 15 (triṣṭubh) and 24 (6-p. jagatī).⌋

⌊Used by Kāuç. in a remedial rite (26. 33, 40, note), "with a gilt and lacquered amulet made [cf. introd. to AV. ii. 9] of splinters of ten kinds of trees" (Keç., p. 327^{22}), against all diseases. In the puṁsavana, vs. 27 accompanies (note to 35. 6) the giving of food to the pregnant woman. Vāit. prescribes the hymn for use in the sāutrāmaṇī rite (30. 6) when the priest mixes herbs with the surā.⌋

1. Those that are brown, and that are bright (çukrá), the red and the spotted, the swarthy, the black herbs — all [of them] do we address (acha-ā-vad).

2. Let them save (trā) this man from the yákṣma sent by the gods — the plants of which heaven has been the father, earth the mother, ocean the root.

The second half-verse was found above, as iii. 23. 6 a, b. This time it is also in Ppp. In c, dyāúṣ is read by W.I.R.T. We should expect pū́ruṣam in a.

3. Waters [were] the beginning, heavenly herbs; they have made disappear from every limb thy sinful (enasyà) yákṣma.

The first pāda is a fragment, in meter and in construction; the omission of ágram would fairly rectify both. As in sundry other like cases, most of the mss. read at the end anīnaçam (or -çaṁ); only P.M.W. have -çan.

4. The spreading, the bushy, the one-spathed, the extending herbs do I address; those rich in shoots, jointed (kāṇḍín), that have spreading branches (víçākha); I call for thee the plants that belong to all the gods, formidable, giving life to men.

5. What power [is] yours, ye powerful ones, [what] heroism and what strength [is] yours, therewith, O herbs, free ye this man from this yákṣma; now (átho) do I make a remedy.

The last pāda is wanting in Ppp.

6. The lively, by-no-means-harming, living herb, the non-obstructing, up-guiding, flourishing (? puṣyá) one, rich in sweets, do I call hither, for this man's freedom from harm.

Compare 2.6, with which this agrees in the first two pādas and in most of the last two. The mss. again are much at variance as to the reading of naghāriṣā́m; Bp.P. M.p.m.E.p.m.O. read ⌊Bp. with -ghă-⌋ naghārṣā́m. ⌊Ppp. reads naghāriṣām (as does Berlin ed.) and omits iha and pāda e.⌋ The omission of the obscure puṣyā́m would rectify the meter; the Pet. Lexx. regard the word as proper name of a plant.

7. Let the forethoughtful ones come hither, allies (medín) of my spell (vácas), that we may make this man pass forth out of difficulty.

Read medínīr in b (two accent-signs slipped out of place leftward).

8. Food of fire, embryo of the waters, they that grow up renewed, fixed, thousand-named — be they remedial [when] brought.

9. Wrapped in ávakā, water-natured, let the herbs, sharp-horned, thrust away difficulty.

Literally, 'having the avakā as fœtal envelop.'

10. Releasing, free from Varuṇa, formidable, that are poison-spoiling, also balā́sa-dispelling, and that are witchcraft-spoiling — let those herbs come hither.

'Free from Varuṇa': i.e., doubtless, 'freeing from the bonds of Varuṇa,' with which he visits guilt on the guilty. Ppp. reads in c–d balāsanāçinī rakṣonāçanīṣ kṛtyād-. Read in our text kṛtyādū́ṣaṇīç (for -yad-) in d.

11. Let the purchased, very powerful plants that are praised save in this village cow, horse, man, beast.

Ppp. prefixes an additional pāda to each half-verse: çivās te santv oṣadhir apak-; and apā sarasvatī jyeṣṭhaṁ trāy-.

12. Rich in sweets the root, rich in sweets the tip of them, rich in sweets was the middle of the plants; rich in sweets the leaf, rich in sweets the flower of them; partaking of sweet, a drink of nectar (amṛ́ta), let them milk out ghee, food, with milk (gó-) as chief (-purogavá).

The mss. (except D. and R.s.m.?) agree in the unmotived accent babhū́va at end of b. Ppp. has instead balena; also, for sambhaktās, sambhūtās 'originated,' which is easier.

13. However many [may be] these herbs upon the earth, let them, thousand-leafed, free me from death, from distress.

All the mss. leave oṣadhīs unaccented at end of b; and most (all save P.M.D.R.T.) accent -parṇyás at end of c. ⌊Cf. Caland, KZ. xxxi. 265.⌋

14. Let the tigerish amulet of plants, saving, protecting from imprecation, smite far away from us diseases [and] all demons.

The pada-text reads sárvā (not sárvāḥ) in c, and the translation follows it. Ppp. has vyāghro in a, and asmāt at the end. Adhi in d is redundant in respect both to sense and to meter.

15. As at the roaring of a lion do they quake; as at fire do they tremble at [the herbs when] brought; let the yákṣma of kine, of men, go driven by the plants beyond navigable streams.

The usual expression is 'beyond ninety-nine' such streams. Ppp. reads oṣadhīnām for saṁ vijante in a. ⌊Over "quake" W. interlines "shrink with fear." He would probably have changed it to "they are all in a tremble," as in v. 21. 4, 6.⌋

16. The herbs, becoming freed from Agni Vāiçvānara — go ye stretching over the earth, [ye] whose king is the forest-tree.

We should expect vocatives instead of nominatives in the first line.

17. They who, belonging to the Añgirases, grow on mountains and on plains — let those herbs, rich in milk, propitious, be weal to our heart.

In Ppp. this verse follows our vs. 19. ⌊Ppp. inserts after b vīrudho viçvabheṣajīs, and continues tā no mayasvatīç çivāḥ : o. s. ç. h.⌋

18. Both what plants I know, and what I see with the eye, the unknown and what we are acquainted with, and those in which we know what is brought together —

That is, probably, their collected or concentrated virtue. Ppp. reads in c janīmasi for jānīmaç ca. ⌊We might render ájñātās by 'what we are not acquainted with,' to correspond with W's version of jānīmás.⌋

19. Let all the entire herbs note (budh) my spell (vácas), that we may make this man pass forth out of difficulty.

Ppp. omits the second half-verse; it is identical with 7 c, d, above.

20. The açvatthá, the darbhá, sóma king of plants, immortal oblation — rice and barley [are] remedial, immortal sons of heaven.

Ppp. reads yavasya bheṣajo in c.

21. Ye rise up (ud-hā); it thunders, it roars at [you], O herbs! when, O ye children of the spotted one, Parjanya favors you with seed.

With the second half-verse is to be compared RV. v. 83. 4 c, d. Pṛçnimātṛ is elsewhere epithet only of the Maruts. The accent abhikrándati is unmotived ⌊unless, indeed, with Henry, we bring it, with standáyati, under the domain of yadā́⌋.

22. Of this amṛ́ta we make this man to drink the strength; now do I make a remedy, that he may be one of a hundred years (-hāyaná).

W. and O.s.m. read pārayāmasi at end of b; Ppp. has phalayāmasi.

23. The boar knows the plant; the mongoos knows the remedial [herb]; what ones the serpents, the Gandharvas know, those I call to aid for him.

One or two of our mss. (Bp.M. ⌊only one, Bp., if I understand W's Collation-book⌋) read vīrúdhām at end of a. Ppp. puts sarpās after gandharvās in c, and has for d tā ihā "yantv oṣadhīḥ.

24. What [herbs] of the Añgirases the eagles [know], what heavenly ones the ragháṭs know, what ones the birds, the swans know, and what all the winged ones, what herbs the wild beasts know — those I call to aid for him.

Raghát̤ (which divyā́s 'heavenly' might also qualify) is elsewhere unknown; Ppp. reads instead vagh-; the major Pet. Lex. suggests emendation ⌊apparently withdrawn in the minor: see raghát̤⌋ to raghávas 'swift'; Ludwig conjectures 'bees.' Ppp. also combines suparṇā "ñg- in a. ⌊Render haṅsā́s by the prosaic 'geese,' since the poetic tone of the AV. is not so elevated as to make that version intolerable. Cf. JAOS. xix., 2d half, p. 154.⌋

25. Of how many herbs the inviolable kine partake (pra-aç), of how many the goats and sheep, let so many herbs, being brought, extend protection to thee.

Ppp. exchanges the second halves of vss. 25 and 26, and makes ābhṛtās and oṣadhīs change places.

26. In how many ⌊herbs⌋ human physicians (bhiṣáj) know a remedy, so many, all-remedial, do I bring unto thee.

Ppp. ⌊see under vs. 25⌋ reads at the end iti for abhi.

27. Rich in flowers, rich in shoots (prasū́-), rich in fruits, also those lacking fruits — like joint mothers, let them milk unto this man in order to his freedom from harm.

Ppp. combines saṁmātarāi 'va in c. The first pāda is nearly identical with RV. x. 97. 3 b.

28. I have taken thee up out of what has five çalas, and also out of what has ten çalas, also out of Yama's fetter, out of all offense against the gods.

The Pet. Lexx. explain -çala as 'a certain measure of distance,' but that sense does not in the least suit the connection, either here or in TB. i. 5. 10^1. Ppp. reads ahāriṣam in a, ⌊ut tvā for atho in c,⌋ and, for d, oṣadhībhir apīparam. The second half-verse is identical with vi. 96. 2 c, d, above ⌊and nearly identical with RV. x. 97. 16 c, d⌋.

8. To conquer enemies.

Found also in Pāipp. xvi.; ⌊but the order of vss. 3 and 4 is inverted; likewise that of vss. 6 and 7⌋. ⌊"Verses" 22–24 are prose, in Brāhmaṇa style.—Whitney's treatment of this hymn is doubtless only a rough first draft, which he would have revised thoroughly had his life been spared. The understanding of this hymn is so peculiarly dependent upon an understanding of the ritual that I have felt obliged to present the latter with exceptional fulness—without attempting, however, to revise W's version into entire accordance therewith.⌋

⌊The text of the "army rites" (16. 9–20), cites expressly vss. 1, 2, and parts of 24, and is indeed largely made up of the names of the objects mentioned in the hymn (see below). Not only Dārila, but also Keçava (Bl., p. $314^{28\text{ ff.}}$), and the introd. which SPP. gives (p. 658–9) in lieu of the lost comm., all present instructive details.⌋

⌊With vs. 1, the sorcerer twirls a fire-drill (16. 9) made of açvattha and badhaka sticks (16. 11: cf. vss. 3, 4). Thereupon, while reciting the first half of vs. 2, he lays down some "old rope" (jīrṇa-rajju, Dār.: apparently to serve as tinder?) "in the place where the sparks [from the fire-drill] fall" (so Dār. and Keç.). When the smoke appears, he exorcises it with the words

This is the second half of our verse 2, with agním left out. When the flame breaks out (agniṁ jātam), he addresses it with

⌊Upon it, with use of h. 8, is placed successively (16. 14) fuel of açvattha, badhaka, tājad-bhañga ('castor-oil plant'), āhva ('palāça'), khadira, and çara ('reeds'). These things are all mentioned in vss. 3–4; Dārila's list (n. to 48. 1) agrees entirely with this: cf. also Bl., p. xliv.—Next follows the bestrewing of the tracks of the hostile army with various symbolical objects, to wit: first (16. 15), "the fetters aforesaid" (at 14. 28) of hemp and of muñja-grass smeared with iñgiḍa; then (16. 16–17), "traps [? kū́ṭa: see n. to vs. 16] of açvattha," "hempen nets," and "stakes of badhaka." Various expressions in the hymn may be taken either as allusions to these objects or else as suggesting their use: such are the "fetters" of vss. 10, 16; the "trap" of vs. 16; the "net" of vss. 4–8 and 18; the "net-stakes" of vss. 5, 12.⌋

⌊In counter-sorcery, iñgiḍa is the regular surrogate for ghee (Kāuç. 47.3). In the rites accompanying iii. 6 (the hymn is notably affiliated with ours in respect of substance and expression: cf. "fetters," açvattha, khadira; cf. also viii. 8. 3 a with iii. 6. 2 a; 10 a, b with 5 a, b; 19 c with 7 c), it is used (48.4) for smearing the threads or symbolical fetters; similarly at 14. 28, above; and again (with vi. 75: Kāuç. 48. 31) with a leaf of red açvattha.⌋

⌊A most interesting critical result is won from the study of the ritual use of our hymn, to wit: that here (vs. 2 c) we have an instance in which both alternatives (dhūmám and agnī́m) of an ūha have been adopted into the received text. This has given it a semblance of metrical blemish (Henry, Bloomfield, and Whitney all suggest the excision of amī́trāḥ), the true meaning of which has been missed by the Occidental exegetes. SPP. (as above) understands Keçava's introd. to Kāuç. 14 aright and explains it clearly, p. 658^{18}.—It may be noted that Ppp. unintelligently, with its agniṁ dhāmaṁ (intending dhūmaṁ), has both alternatives, but in the wrong order.⌋

Translated: Muir, v. 88 (vss. 5–8); Ludwig, p. 527; Henry, 23, 61; Griffith, i. 412; Bloomfield, 117, 582.

1. Let Indra the shaker shake (math) [them], he the mighty hero, stronghold-splitter, in order that we may slay by thousands the armies of our enemies.

Quoted in Kāuç. 16. 9 ⌊see introd.⌋.

2. Let the putrid rope, breathing on [it], make yonder army putrid; seeing afar smoke, fire, let our enemies set fear in their hearts.

Ppp. reads agniṁ dhāmaṁ in c. The different parts of the verse are quoted in Kāuç. 16. 10, 12, 13, where the 'putrid rope' appears to be understood as an actual rope which is burnt, and of which the 'smoke' and 'fire' are to frighten the foe. It is perhaps quite as likely that the ceremony is founded on a crass misinterpretation of the verse, and that the 'rope' is a poisonous serpent (as conjectured by Ludwig). The omission of amī́trās in d would rectify the meter. ⌊With regard to the last and to the whole verse, see the introd.⌋

3. Crush yonder men out, O açvatthá; devour (khād) them speedily, O khadirá; let them be suddenly ⌊tājád⌋ broken ⌊bhañj⌋ like hemp ⌊bháñga⌋; let the slayer (vádhaka) slay (han) them with deadly weapons (vadhá).

The translation implies the emendation (which is made in our text) of ajiram (p. khadira∘ajiram !) to -rám,* and the treatment of tāját and bháñgas (p. tājádbháñgaḥ∘iva !) as two separate words. Ppp. reads in b khadirā 'ciram, and in c combines

-bhañgāi 'va; for d it has bṛhajjālena saṁcitāḥ ⌊cf. our 4 d⌋. Kāuç. (16. 14) takes tājadbhañga as a single word, and its comm. explains it as the castor-oil plant (eraṇḍa). ⌊In çṛṇīhi I see an allusion to the sorcerer's favorite "reeds" (çará) of vs. 4. Griffith notes the power of the açvattha to rend asunder the masonry etc. in whose crevices its seed has germinated. The other word-plays, including that on vádhaka badhaka (cf. bādhaka and root bādh), are evident. See also introd.⌋ *⌊So also SPP. with several of his authorities.⌋

4. Let the rough-called one make yonder men rough (paruṣá); let the slayer slay them with deadly weapons; let them be broken quickly like a reed (çará), tied together with a great net.

Ppp. combines çare 'va in c,* and has at the end (as in 3 d) saṁcitās; it puts the verse before our vs. 3. The Pet. Lexx. conjecture paruṣāhvá to be 'a kind of reed.' ⌊For the materials of the sorcery, and the "net," cf. introd.⌋ *⌊As the meter requires; why then does not the Anukr. call the vs. a purastādbṛhatī and have done with it?⌋

5. The atmosphere was the net; the great quarters [were] the net-stakes; therewith encircling [them], the mighty one (çakrá) scattered away the army of the barbarians (dásyu).

Ppp. has an easier but virtually equivalent version of c, d: tenā 'bhidhāya senām indro dasyūn apā 'vapat. Vss. 5–8 are translated by Muir (v. 88). ⌊"Net-stakes": cf. introd. — For "encircling" W. first had "girding"; abhi-dhā carries the idea of bridling, curbing, or restraining: cf. vss. 7, 8, 9 and note to iii. 11. 8.⌋

6. Since great [is] the net of the great mighty one, the vigorous (vājínīvant) — therewith do thou crowd (ubj) down upon all [our] foes, that no one soever of them may be released.

Ppp. adds to our first half-verse (with rocanāvatas for vāj- in b) the second half-verse of our 7 (omitting nyarbudaṁ and reading at the end senām), then putting the whole after 7. All the mss. accent múcyātāi, which, though supported by the usage of sundry Vedic texts (including even RV.), was emended in our edition to agree with the Atharvan accentuation elsewhere. ⌊Henry would read móci, of which he holds mucyā́tāi to be a gloss.⌋

7. Great, O Indra, hero (çūra), is the net of thee that art great, that art worth a thousand, that hast hundred-fold heroism; therewith encircling the army of the barbarians, the mighty one slew a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand, a hundred million.

The translation follows Ppp. (see under the preceding verse) in reading senām at the end. Instead of our c, d, Ppp. has tena ny ubja maghavann amitrāñ çaçvatībhyaḥ.

8. This great world was the net of the great mighty one; by that net of Indra do I encircle all yon men with darkness.

9. Debility, formidable ill-success, and mishap that is not to be exorcised away (an-apavācaná), toil, and weariness, and confusion — with these do I encircle all yon men.

10. To death do I deliver those yonder; with fetters of death [are] they bound (sā); the sad messengers that are death's — them I lead them to meet, having bound (bandh) [them].

Ppp. reads khālās for aghalās in c, and at the end baddhān. All our mss. agree in giving the abbreviated form badhvā́. ⌊"Fetters": cf. introd.⌋

11. Lead ye them, O messengers of death; O messengers of Yama, restrain (apa-umbh) [them]; be they slain to more than thousands; let Bhava's club (? matyà) shatter them.

Ppp. reads for a mṛtyudūtā amuṁ nayata; d is corrupt, but apparently is the same with our d.

12. The Perfectibles (sādhyá) go lifting with force one net-stake, the Rudras one, the Vasus one; by the Ādityas one is lifted.

13. Let all the gods from above go crowding with force; let the Añgirases go slaying midway the great army.

Ppp. has at the end vadhāis instead of mahīm.

14. The forest trees, them of the forest trees, the herbs and the plants, what is biped, what is quadruped I despatch (iṣ), that they may slay yonder army.

'Them of the forest trees,' vānaspatyān, acc. pl. masc.; the lexicographers explain the word to mean 'fruit tree with conspicuous flowers.' At the end both of this verse and of the next, Ppp. reads hatām. Bp. reads dvi∘pát in c. ⌊For the citation in Kāuç. 73. 5, see introd.⌋

15. The Gandharvas and Apsarases, the serpents, the gods, the pure-folks, the Fathers, those seen, those unseen I despatch, that they may slay yonder army.

Ppp. makes devān and sarpān change places ⌊and reads hatāṁ again at the end⌋. ⌊Muir, v. 296, cites MBh. ii. 11. 45 = 461, where the Fathers are divided into seven troops, four of embodied and three of bodiless.⌋

16. Here are spread the fetters of death, which stepping into thou art not released; let this horn (kū́ṭa) slay of yonder army by thousands.

Ppp. gives for a mṛtyupaçā yama ⌊that is, ime?⌋ yuktā. Kāuç. (16. 16) speaks of 'kūṭas of açvattha[-wood] and nets of hemp.' ⌊Geldner, Ved. Stud. i. 139, renders the vs. and takes kū́ṭa as "trap"; SPP., p. 659^{13}, says niṣādānām prāṇibandhanam; Bl., p. 119 (see esp. p. 585), "hammer."⌋

17. The hot drink (gharmá) [is] kindled with fire, this thousand-slaying oblation (hóma); both Bhava and the spotted-armed one — O Çarva, slay ye (two) yonder army.

All the mss. read bhávas at beginning of c; our edition emends to bhavás. The common construction bhaváç ca . . . çárva . . . hatam (cf. the next verse) is much disturbed by the addition of pṛ́çnibāhus, which the second ca forbids to take as a mere epithet. Ppp. reads sahasraçaḥ and hatām at the end of the two lines respectively.

18. Let them go unto death's burning (?), unto hunger, debility, the deadly weapon, fear; by snare (ákṣu) and net, O Çarva, [do thou] and Indra slay yonder army.

Only P. and R.s.m. have óṣam, all the rest ā́ṣam, which must accordingly be regarded as the traditional text, though unintelligible. Further emendation to oṣám 'quickly' is hardly advisable. Ppp. has oṣam. Ppp. also differs much in c, d: indrasyā 'kṣamālābhyāṁ sarva senām amūṁ hatām. Part of our mss. also (W.O.D.T.) read sárva in d. ⌊Geldner discusses ákṣu, Ved. Stud. i. 136.⌋

19. Flee (tras) forth, O enemies, being conquered; run, ⌊being⌋ thrust by the charm (bráhman); of them yonder, thrust forth by Brihaspati, let none soever be freed.

The second half-verse is nearly repeated as xi. 10. 19 c, d, below. The pada-mss. absurdly read nuttā́ (not nuttā́ḥ) in b. Amitrās is metrically redundant in a. ⌊Rather 11 + 8 : 8 + 8.⌋ The pada-reading of bṛ́haspáti∘pranuttānām ⌊cf. iii. 6. 7⌋ is by Prāt. iii. 76, iv. 77, the commentary quoting it under each rule.

20. Let their weapons (ā́yudha) fall down; let them not be able to fit the arrow; then, of them fearing much let arrows strike in the vitals.

Ppp. reads çiṣaṁ for çakan in d.

21. Together let heaven-and-earth yell at them; together let the atmosphere, along with the deities; let them not find a knower, nor a foundation; mutually destroying one another let them go unto death.

The second half-verse is identical with vi. 32. 3 c, d, above. Ppp. puts enāṅ before kroçatām, and adds ubhe at the end of a.

22. The four quarters [are] the she-mules of the god-chariot; the sacrificial cakes [are] the hoofs, the atmosphere the seat (? uddhí), heaven-and-earth the two sides, the seasons the reins, the intermediate directions the attendants, speech the rim (? párirathya).

Ppp. reads çaphā 'ntarikṣa buddhiḥ and omits the clause antardeçāḥ kiṁkarāḥ. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 15. 11 ⌊see introd.⌋.

Ppp. reads, for the first part of the paragraph, ahorātre cakre māma ārāt saṁvatsaro adhiṣṭhānam: virāḍ etc. Savyaṣṭhā́s (p. savya∘sthā́ḥ) is a subject of Prāt. ii. 95. ⌊As for the "years," see n. to vi. 55. 3.⌋

24. On this side conquer thou; on this side conquer away, conquer completely, conquer; hail! let these here conquer, let those yonder be conquered; hail ⌊svā́hā⌋ to these! wail (durā́hā) to those! with the blue-red one I stretch down upon them yonder.

That is, probably, with Çiva's aid I bring the net down upon them. ⌊Ppp. omits all after the first svā́hā.⌋ Parts of the verse are quoted in Kāuç. 16. 18–20: 'with "hail to these" he makes a libation for his friends; with "wail to those" [he pours] with the left hand iñgiḍa on the [staff] of badhaka; having stuck in a branch of red açvattha north of the fire, having surrounded it with two blue and red threads, he pulls it up toward the right with "with the blue-red one"': evidently artificial adaptations of ceremonies to the words of the text. ⌊For the whole matter, see introd.⌋

9. Mystic: extolling the virā́j.

[Atharvan.—ṣaḍvin̄çam. kā́çyapeyam uta sarvārṣaṁ chāndasam. trāiṣṭubham: 2, 3. pan̄kti (3. āstārapan̄kti); 4, 5, 23, 25, [26]. anuṣṭubh; 8, 11, 12, 22. jagatī; 9. bhurij; 14. 4-p. atijagatī.]

Found also (except vss. 19, 20) in Pāipp. xvi. ⌊with vs. 23 after vs. 24⌋. The Kāuç. takes no notice of the hymn; ⌊but the Vāit. (33. 8) allows the use of 21 vss. (from vs. 6 to the end) in the sattra sacrifice at the celebrant's option⌋.

Translated: Ludwig, p. 439; Henry, 26, 65; Griffith, i. 416.—See also Muir, v. 370.

1. Whence [were] those two born? which side (árdha) was that? out of what world? out of which earth? the two young (vatsá) of the virā́j rose out of the sea (salilá); of those I ask thee: by whether [of them was] she milked?

The 'which' is both times katama, implying the existence of more than two; but Ppp. has instead katarasyāḥ pṛthivyāḥ.

2. He who caused the sea to resound (krand) with greatness, making a threefold lair (yóni) as he lay, the desire-milking young of the virā́j; he made his bodies secret (gúhā) in the distance.

Ppp. combines yo 'krand- at the beginning, and reads in b tyabhijaṁ çayānaṁ.

3. What three great ones (bṛhát, n.) there are, the fourth of which [one] disjoins [as] speech—the priest (brahmán) may know it by penance, the inspired one, in which one (ékam) is joined, in which one [is joined].

Ppp. reads catvāri instead of trīṇi in a. Caturthám 'fourth' might also be subject of 'disjoins.' Compare ix. 10. 27 (RV. i. 164. 45).

4. Forth out of bṛhát [as] sixth five sāmans [were] fashioned; bṛhát was fashioned out of bṛhatī́; out of what was bṛhatī́ made?

Ppp. reads ṣaṣṭhaḥ instead of -ṭhā́t.

5. Bṛhatī́ the measure (mā́trā) was fashioned forth out of measure [as] a mother; illusion (māyā́) was born from illusion, Mātalī out of illusion.

The desire to play upon the root mā 'measure, fashion,' is the leading motive in the making of this verse. The pada-text gives the absurd reading māyā́ḥ at beginning of c; Ppp. reads after it hi instead of ha.

6. Vāiçvānara's counterpart [is] the sky above, as far as Agni forced (bādh) apart the two firmaments; from that sixth yonder come the stómas; up from here they go unto the sixth of the day.

For ā́ 'múto, in c, Ppp. reads āmico. The remainder of the hymn, from this verse on, is by Vāit. 33. 8 allowed to be introduced at pleasure in the navarātra ceremony.

7. We these six seers ask thee, O Kaçyapa, for thou didst join what is joined and what is to be joined; they call (ah) virā́j the father of the bráhman; distribute (? vi-dhā) it to us [thy] friends according to [our] numbers.

Ppp. reads pṛchāmi ṛṣ- in a.

8. After whom, when removed, the sacrifices remove (pra-cyu), [whom], when attending, they attend on (upa-sthā), in whose course (vratá) ⌊and ?⌋ impulse the monster (? yakṣá) stirs — that, O seers, is the virā́j in the highest firmament.

9. Breathless, she goes by the breath of breathing ones (f.); virā́j goes unto svarā́j from behind; virā́j that touches, that is adapted to, everything — some see her, some see her not.

No ms. ⌊of ours⌋ inserts t between -rā́ṭ and sva- in b ⌊but four of SPP's do so⌋, as required by Prāt. ii. 8 (under which this is one of the passages quoted). In d we ought properly to have emended to tve . . . tve (accentless); all the mss. accent the two words, against the uniform usage elsewhere; and the pada-mss. commit the further blunder of giving both times tvé íti, as if the word were the Vedic locative of the 2d pers. pronoun (as in v. 2. 3).

10. Who understandeth (pra-vid) the pair-ness of virā́j? who the seasons, who the ordering (kálpa) of her? who her steps (kráma), how many times milked out (vi-duh)? who her abode (dhā́man), how many times dawnings (vyùṣṭi)?

The version is much more literal than intelligent, especially at the end, where we expect rather vyùṣṭam than -ṭīs. 'Pair-ness,' mithunatvám, means especially the condition of being a pair of opposite sexes.

11. This same is she that first shone forth; among these other ones (f.) she goes about having entered; great mightinesses [are] within her; the woman, the new-going generatrix, hath conquered.

This verse occurred above, as iii. 10. 4. It is found also in other texts in connection with the four verses which follow it here. Ppp. has ⌊in a, b⌋ the same readings as in iii. 10. ⌊4 a, b⌋; ⌊and, here also, it inverts the order of c and d⌋.

12. The two meter-winged dawns, greatly adorning themselves, move on together toward the same lair (yóni); spouses of the sun, they move on together, understanding, having ensigns, unaging, having abundant seed.

The Pet. Lexx. give the first word in the form chándaspakṣa, although Prāt. ii. 62 expressly requires -aḥpa-, and all the mss. read it except Bp., which has -aṣpa-. The verse is found also in TS. iv. 3. 11[1], MS. ii. 13. 10, K. xxxix. 10. Both TS. and MS. have at the beginning chándasvatī; MS. reads uṣásāu, and at the end -retasāu; at end of b, MS. gives anusáṁcarete and TS. ánu saṁcárantī; both have ví for sám in c, and TS. ketúṁ kṛṇvāné for ketumátī in d. Ppp. reads carati in c.

13. Three (f.) have come along the road of righteousness; three heats (gharmá) have come after the seed; one (f.) enlivens the progeny, one the refreshment (ū́rj); one defends the realm of the godly ones.

The verse follows the preceding in the other three texts also. TS.MS. rectify the meter of b by reading gharmā́sas, and for rétas MS. has rétasā and TS. jyótiṣā; TS. gives rákṣati for jínvati in c; and for rāṣṭrám in d TS. has vratám and MS. kṣatrám.

14. She that was fourth set Agni-and-Soma; the seers arranging the (two) wings of the sacrifice — gāyatrī́, triṣṭúbh, jágatī, anuṣṭúbh, bṛhadarkī́, bringing heaven (svàr) for the sacrificer.

The meter-names in the second half-verse are all in the accusative, possibly as coördinate with 'wings' in b; but comparison with the other texts indicates that the verse is very corrupt. The translation implies emendation of adadhus to adadhāt in a; it would not be absolutely impossible to take 'the seers' as subject in a, and 'her that was fourth' as joint object with 'Agni-and-Soma.' Of the other texts (as above), TS. begins with catuṣṭomó abhavad, and MS. with catuṣṭomám adadhād; both rectify the meter of a by omitting ā́sīt; in b both have ṛṣayas as vocative, and after it bhávantī, and MS. has pakṣā́ (for -ṣāú) before it; in c, MS. has virā́jam for anuṣṭúbham; in d, TS. begins with bṛhád arkám, MS. with arkám alone; and both follow it with yuñjānā́ḥ svàr (TS., of course, súvar) ā́ 'bharann idám. Ppp's only variant is bṛhadarkīr in d.

15. Five milkings after five dawnings; five seasons after the five-named cow; five quarters arranged by the fifteenth — those (f.) [are] one-headed toward one world.

'The fifteenth' (masc. or neut. sing.) might mean also 'fifteen-fold, of fifteen parts,' etc. The verse is found in the three other texts (as above), but in TS.MS. (also in K.?) separated at some distance from those that here precede; also in PGS. iii. 3. 5: all read samānámūrdhnīs instead of ékamū- in d.

16. Six [are] born the beings first-born of righteousness; six sā́mans carry the six-day (?) [sacrifice]; after the six-yoked plough (sīra) severally a sā́man; six they call (ah) the heavens and earths, six the wide [spaces].

The translation implies in b the reading ṣaḍahám; this is given in our text, against the authority of our pada-mss. ⌊which have ṣáṭ : ahám⌋; the saṁhitā-mss. (except O.p.m.) have ṣaḍ-. All the latter read in a -já ṛtásya (p. prathama○jā́ : ṛtásya ⌊cf. JAOS. x. 451⌋.

17. Six they call the cold, and six the hot months; tell ye us the season, which one [is] in excess (átirikta); seven eagles (suparṇá), poets, sat down; seven meters after seven consecrations.

None of the mss. read çītā́nṭ ṣáḍ in a, as demanded by Prāt. ii. 9. In d the construction of the two nouns is reversible.

18. Seven [are] the offerings (hóma), the fuels seven, the sweet things (mádhu, n.) seven, the seasons seven; seven sacrificial butters (ā́jya) went about the existent thing (bhūtá); those (f.) are seven-vultured, so have we heard.

The version is as literal as possible; to modify it would imply an understanding of it. The nearest fem. word for 'those' in d to relate to is 'fuels' in a. All the saṁhitā-mss. combine saptá rtávo in b. Ppp. reads in b nu for ha, and has instead of our c, d: sapta jyāyāṁ paruhūta gāyaṁ saptahotā ṛtudayajetitās sapta gṛdhrā iti çuçravā 'haṁ. Nearly all the mss. (all of ours save E.) read āyam (the saṁhitā-mss. -aṁ) at end of c.

19. Seven [are] the meters increasing (-úttara) by four, the one set upon the other: how do the praises (stóma) stand firm in them? how are they set in the praises?

The gender of anyás at beginning of b speaks strongly for a compound like the later anyo 'nya; but the double accent and the pada-reading (anyáḥ : anyásmin) are against it. The pada-text divides ā́rpitāni (ā∘árp-) at end of b, but not at end of d. The verse is wanting in Ppp.

20. How did gāyatrī́ permeate (vi-āp) the triple [stóma]? how is triṣṭúbh adapted to that of fifteen? how jágatī to that of thirty-three? how [is] anuṣṭúbh that of twenty-one?

This verse, like the preceding, is wanting in Ppp.; and they are in a manner interruptions of the progress of the hymn.

21. Eight [are] born the beings first-born of righteousness; eight, O Indra, are the priests (ṛtvíj) who are of the gods; Aditi has eight wombs (yóni), eight sons; the oblation (havyám) goes unto the eighth night.

With a compare 16 a above; here as there all the saṁhitā-mss. combine -já rtásya, as in b all combine indra rtv-. Ppp. reads from the beginning: aṣṭāu dhāmāni prathamajaṁ tasyā 'ṣṭe 'ndra ṛtv-; and, in d, api for abhi.

22. Thus thinking what is better have I come hither; in your friendship I am auspicious (çéva); being of the same birth, your skill is propitious; it (m.), understanding, goes about to you all (f.).

The adjectives in a, b are fem., seeming to indicate that the virāj is regarded as speaking. Ppp. has ā 'gaṁ at end of a, and nas for vas both times in c, d. 'It' in d apparently refers to 'skill.'

23. Eight of Indra, six of Yama, seven of the seers, seven-fold; waters, men (manuṣyà), herbs — them five followed (sac) after.

The nouns in c are accusatives, and are apparently summed up in 'them' (tā́n). All the mss. this time read with our text yamásya ṛ́ṣ- in a–b. Ppp. puts the verse after our 24.

24. Since the heifer milked solely (kévalī) for Indra [his] will (váça), the beestings, [when] first milked, then [she] gratified in four ways the four — gods, men, Asuras, and seers.

Ppp. reads at the end atha ṛṣīn; all our mss. save O. make the combination utá ṛ́ṣīn as in the printed text.

25. What now [is] the ox (gó), who the sole seer, what the abode (dhā́man), what the blessings (āçís)? the monster on the earth [is] simple (ekavṛ́t); the sole season — which now is that?

Ppp. reads sāma for dhāma in b. All our mss. combine ekarṣís in a, but all ekartús (also Ppp.) in d. It is necessary here and in the next verse to render gāús 'ox,' because the accompanying adjectives are masculine. 'Which' in d is the superlative katamá. ⌊Over "simple" W. has interlined "single."⌋

26. One [is] the ox, one the sole seer, one the abode, singly the blessings; the monster on the earth [is] single; the sole season is not in excess.

Again Ppp. reads sāma for dhāma, and all the mss. (with Ppp.) have ekarṣís but ekartús.

10. Extolling the virā́j.

[Atharvācārya. — ṣaṭ paryāyā virāḍdevatyās.]

This curious piece of prose is (with the exception of paragraphs here and there) found also in Pāipp. xvi. ⌊Pāipp. has the order 22, 24, 23, 26, 25.⌋ ⌊This is the first of the paryāya-sūktas. For the paryāya-hymns in general, see introduction to book viii., pages 471–2, above.⌋

⌊Neither Kāuç. nor Vāit. makes use of the hymn; but one of the "committals" in the upanayana (Kāuç. 56. 13) is to mārtyum̐jaya mārtyava: cf. vs. 23.⌋

Translated: Henry, 29, 71; Griffith, i. 421. — See also Muir, v. 370.

[Paryāya I. — trayodaçakam. 1. 3-p. ārcī pañkti; a of 2–7. yājuṣī jagatī; b of 2, 5. sā́mny anuṣṭubh; b of 3. ārcy anuṣṭubh; b of 4, 7. virāḍgāyatrī; b of 6. sāmnī bṛhatī.]

1. Virā́j verily was this [universe] in the beginning; of her when born everything was afraid, [thinking] "this one indeed will become this [universe]."

Ppp. reads 'jāyata for āsīt, and, after tasyās, jātāyā 'bibhed eka sarvam: yam eve 'dam bhaviṣyati na vayam iti.

2. She ascended (ut-kram); she descended (ni-kram) in the householder's fire (gā́rhapatya); house-sacrificing (gṛhamedhín) house-holder ⌊gṛhápati⌋ becometh he who knoweth thus.

This paragraph and the one following are wanting in Ppp.

3. She ascended; she descended in the fire of offering (āhavanī́ya): to his god-invocation the gods go, dear to the gods becometh he who knoweth thus.

The introductory clause só 'd akrāmat, which belongs to the paragraphs from here on to 29 inclusive (8–17 counting in this respect as a single paragraph), is omitted by the mss., according to their custom, almost without exception, until the last paragraph, 29, where all give it; it is restored throughout in our edition. R. alone gives it in this paragraph.

4. She ascended; she descended in the southern ⌊dákṣiṇa⌋ fire: justified (? -ṛtá) by the offering, fit for sacrificial gifts ⌊dakṣiṇī́ya⌋, fit for refuge (vā́sateya) becometh he who knoweth thus.

Our pada-mss. divide yajñártas into yajña°ṛ́taḥ, which is evidently wrong, for yajñá° ṛtaḥ ⌊as indeed two of SPP's read⌋; and the quotation of the word under Prāt. iii. 64 also indicates that the latter is the true accent. Ppp. reads instead yajñāntas, and omits after it dakṣiṇīyas.

5. She ascended; she descended in the assembly (sabhā́): [men] go to his assembly, fit for the assembly becometh he who knoweth thus.

6. She ascended; she descended in the gathering (sámiti): [men] go to his gathering, fit for gatherings becometh he who knoweth thus.

This superfluous equivalent of § 5 is wanting in Ppp.

7. She ascended; she descended in address (? āmántraṇa); [men] go to his address, fit for address becometh he who knoweth thus.

By the connection, āmántraṇa ought to involve the idea of a locality. Instead of ⌊line 2?⌋, Ppp. repeats yajñānto vāsateyo bhavati etc. from § 4.

[Paryāya II. — daçakam. 8, 16. sāmny anuṣṭubh (8. 3-p.); 9. uṣṇiggarbhā 4-p. upariṣṭādvirāḍ bṛhatī; 10. 1-p. yājuṣī gāyatrī; 11 [?], 14. sāmnī pañkti (11. 1-p.); 12. virāḍ gāyatrī; 13. ārcy anuṣṭubh; 15. āsurī gāyatrī; 17. sāmnī bṛhatī.]

8. She ascended; she stood striding (? víkrāntā) fourfold in the atmosphere.

The phrase 'she ascended' is prefixed by only one or two of the mss. (P.s.m.R.), but is implied in the metrical description of the Anukr.

9. Of her gods and men said: "she verily knoweth that upon which we of both classes may subsist; let us call to her."

Ppp. reads at the end hvayāmahi (without iti).

10. They called to her:

11. "O refreshment, come! O svadhā́, come! O pleasantness, come! O thou rich in cheer (írā), come!"

Ppp. combines svadhe 'hi and sūnṛte 'hi, and omits iti at the end (as in § 9).

12. Of her Indra was the young (vatsá), gāyatrī́ the halter, cloud the udder;

Ppp. begins tasyā 'gnir vat-. Accent in our text, with all the mss., ā́sīt.

13. Both bṛhát and rathantará were two teats; both yajñāyajñíya and vāmadevyá [were] two.

Ppp. prefixes a tasyās at the beginning. Accent again in our text ā́stām, with all the mss.

14. Herbs did the gods milk [from her] by rathantará, expansion (vyácas) by bṛhát;

15. Waters by vāmadevyá, the sacrifice by yajñāyajñíya.

16. Herbs doth rathantará milk, expansion doth bṛhát,

17. Waters doth vāmadevyá, the sacrifice doth yajñāyajñíya, for him who knoweth thus.

[Paryāya III.—aṣṭāu. a of 18. 4-p. virāḍ anuṣṭubh; b of 18. ārcī triṣṭubh; a of 19–21. 4-p. prājāpatyā pañkti; b of 19–21. ārcī bṛhatī.]

18. She ascended; she came to the forest trees; the forest trees slew her; she in a year came into being; therefore what is cut of the forest trees grows over in a year; cut off (vraçc) is his unfriendly foe (bhrā́tṛvya) who knoweth thus.

Only P.s.m. and R. give here the first phrase, and only R. in the three following paragraphs. Ppp. puts vanaspatīnām after saṁvatsare. ⌊For vṛçcáte, see note to vi. 136. 3.⌋

19. She ascended; she came to the Fathers; the Fathers slew her; she in a month came into being; therefore to the Fathers they give in a month the monthly [oblation]; he understandeth the road that goes to the Fathers who knoweth thus.

Again Ppp. puts pitṛbhyas after māsi ⌊R's collation, masi⌋, and then reads dadhatas svadhāvān pitṛṣu bhavati pitṛyāṇaṁ etc. O.R. accent jānā́ti.

20. She ascended; she came to the gods; the gods slew her; she in a half-month came into being; therefore for the gods they make váṣaṭ in a half-month: he understandeth the road that goes to the gods who knoweth thus.

Ppp. reads tasmād ardhamāse devebhyo juhoti: juhoty agnihotraṁ pra devay-. O.R. again accent jānā́ti.

21. She ascended; she came to men (manuṣyà); men slew her; she at once (sadyás) came into being; therefore on both days they present (upa-hṛ) to men; in his house do they present who knoweth thus.

'Present,' i.e. 'food'; 'on both days' is a queer expression for 'every day.' Ppp. is corrupt, but perhaps means ahar-ahar manuṣyāṇām upa h-.

[Paryāyas IV. and V. —dve ṣoḍaçake. a of 22, 23, 26, 29. 4-p. sāmnī jagatī; b of 22–24, 28, 29. sāmnī bṛhatī; c of 22, 26. sāmny uṣṇih; d of 22, 23, 26, 29. ārcy anuṣṭubh; c of 23. āsurī gāyatrī; a of 24, 25, 28. 4-p. uṣṇih; c of 24. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; d of 24, 25, 27. ārcī triṣṭubh; b of 25, 26. sāmny uṣṇih; c of 25, 27, 28. virāḍ gāyatrī; a of 27. 4-p. prājāpatyā jagatī; b of 27. sāmnī triṣṭubh; d of 28. 3-p. brāhmī bhurig gāyatrī; c of 29. sāmny anuṣṭubh.]

22. She ascended; she came to the Asuras; the Asuras called to her: O illusion (māyā́), come! of her Virochana son of Prahrāda was young (vatsá), the metal-(áyas-)vessel [was] vessel; her Dvimūrdhan son of Ṛitu milked; from her he milked illusion; that illusion the Asuras subsist upon; one to be subsisted on becometh he who knoweth thus.

R. alone gives the first phrase in §§ 22–28. In this and the following paragraphs to 29 inclusive, the text should accent ā́sīt, with all the mss. Ppp. reads vāirocanas instead of vir-. Single points in these paragraphs find correspondences in MS. iv. (p. 21, l. 14 ff.; p. 36, l. 8 ff.) and in TB. ii. 2.9^6 ff. ⌊cf. i. 5.9^1⌋.

23. She ascended; she came to the Fathers; the Fathers called to her: O svadhā́, come! of her king Yama was young, the silver-vessel [was] vessel; her Antaka son of Mṛityu milked; from her he milked svadhā́; that svadhā́ the Fathers subsist upon: one to be subsisted upon becometh he who knoweth thus.

The saṁhitā-mss. vary a good deal over mārtyavò 'dhok: P.M. read mārtvyò, R. mārtvyó, E.O.K. mārtyavó, T. mārtyávo; ⌊cf. introd.⌋. Ppp. has instead ādityo; and it omits rājā after yamas; it puts the paragraph after our 24.

24. She ascended; she came to men (manuṣyà); men called to her: O rich in cheer, come! of her Manu son of Vivasvant was young, earth [was] vessel; her Pṛithī son of Vena milked; from her he milked both cultivation (kṛṣí) and grain; upon those two, both cultivation and grain, men subsist; successful by what is cultivated (kṛṣṭá-), one to be subsisted upon, becometh he who knoweth thus.

Té at beginning of d is rendered in accordance with the paragraphs that precede and follow; but the pada-text reads té simply (not té íti), as if it qualified manuṣyàs. Ppp. reads pṛthus for pṛthī. An accent-mark has dropped out in our edition under the va of irāvaty in a.

25. She ascended; she came to the seven seers; the seven seers called to her: O rich in bráhman, come! of her king Soma was young, meter [was] vessel; her Brihaspati son of Añgiras milked; from her he milked both bráhman and penance; upon that, both bráhman and penance, the seven seers subsist; possessed of bráhman-splendor, one to be subsisted upon, becometh he who knoweth thus.

Ppp. puts this paragraph after our 26, and omits rājā after somas in b.

26. She ascended; she came to the gods; the gods called to her: O refreshment, come! of her Indra was young, the bowl [was] vessel; her god Savitar milked; from her he milked refreshment; upon that refreshment the gods subsist; one to be subsisted upon becometh he who knoweth thus.

Ppp. reads dārupātram instead of camasas in b, and omits devas in c.

27. She ascended; she came to the Gandharvas and Apsarases; the Gandharvas and Apsarases called to her: O thou of sweet (púṇya) odor, come! of her Chitraratha son of Sūryavarchas was young, the blue-lotus leaf [was] vessel; her Vasuruchi son of Sūryavarchas milked; from her he milked sweet odor; upon that sweet odor the Gandharvas and Apsarases subsist; of sweet odor, one to be subsisted upon, becometh he who knoweth thus.

Ppp. has kāuvero vāiçravaṇo ⌊cf. our 28 b⌋ and dārupātraṁ in b, and rājatanābhiḥ kāuverako ⌊cf. our 28 c⌋ in c. Restore in our text the lost accent-mark under the ti of jīvanti in d.

28. She ascended; she came to the other-folks; the other-folks called to her: O concealment (tirodhā́), come! of her Kubera son of Viçravaṇa was young, the raw vessel [was] vessel; her Rajatanābhi son of Kubera milked; from her he milked concealment; upon that concealment the other-folks subsist: he concealeth all evil, becometh one to be subsisted upon, who knoweth thus.

Ppp. gives everywhere puṇyajana instead of itarajana ⌊twice: third occurrence not noted⌋, and reads in b vasuruciḥ sūryavarcaso and puṣkaraparṇaṁ ⌊cf. our 27 b⌋. P.p.m. and K. read kúveras in b, and Bp.K. read kāverakás in c.

29. She ascended; she came to the serpents; the serpents called to her: O poisonous one, come! of her Takshaka descendant of Viçāla was young, the gourd-vessel [was] vessel; her Dhṛitarāshṭra son of Irāvant milked; from her he milked poison; upon that poison the serpents subsist; one to be subsisted upon becometh he who knoweth thus.

All the mss. give the first phrase in this verse, where it is for the last time repeated. Āirā∘vatáḥ is quoted under Prāt. iv. 55 as an example of a word divided in the pada-text notwithstanding its secondary formation with initial vṛddhi. Ppp. reads viṣābhayas for vāiçāleyas in b, and combines -rāṣṭrāi "rāv- in c ⌊R's collation has -rā́ṣṭrāirāv-⌋.

30. Then for whomsoever that knoweth thus one shall pour out with a gourd, he should reject [it].

A gourd, apparently, being a too simple vessel to be respectful. ⌊The connection of the gourd with serpents (vss. 29, 32, 33), would seem to be the reason for rejection, as Dr. Ryder suggests.⌋ The readings of Ppp. in this division of the hymn are "confused but apparently essentially accordant" with those of our text. Read tád for yád at the beginning in our text.

31. Should he not reject [it], he should reject [it] by [thinking]: with the mind I reject thee.

32. In that he rejects [it], he thus rejects poison.

33. Poison is poured out after the unfriendly foe of him who knoweth thus.

⌊The quotations from the Old Anukr. for the paryāya-sūkta are given piecemeal at the end of each paryāya. For brevity they may here be given together: I. trayodaça; II. daça; III. aṣṭāu ca; IV. tataḥ ṣoḍaça; V. ṣoḍaça; VI. catuṣkas.⌋

⌊This ninth book is the second of the second grand division of the Atharvan collection. For a general statement as to the make-up of the books of this division, see page 471. The Old Anukramaṇī describes the length of hymns 1, 3, and 5 by stating in each case the excess over 20 verses — perhaps assuming 20 as the normal length. The whole book has been translated by Victor Henry, Les livres VIII et IX de l'Atharva-véda traduits et commentés, Paris, 1894. The bhāṣya is lacking for this book.⌋

⌊Paryāya-hymns: for details respecting them, see pages 471–2. The paryāya-hymns of this book are hymn 6 (with 6 paryāyas) and hymn 7 (with 1 paryāya).⌋

⌊The anuvāka-division of the book (as is explained on page 472 also) is into five anuvākas of two hymns each. The "decad"-division likewise is as described on page 472. A tabular conspectus for book ix. follows:

Anuvākas	1		2		3		4		5
Hymns	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Verses	24	25	31	24	38	62¶	26¶	22	22	28

Here ¶ means "paragraph of a paryāya" (such as is numbered as a "verse" in the Berlin edition) and P means "paryāya." The last line shows the "decad"-division. These divisions are shown also in both editions. Of these "decads," anuvākas 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 contain respectively 5, 5, 4, 2, and 5 (in all, 21 "decads"); while anuvākas 3 and 4 have respectively 6 paryāyas and 1. Translated: Henry, 81, 115; Griffith, i. 427; Bloomfield, 229, 587.

1. Verily from sky, from earth, from atmosphere, from ocean, from fire, from wind was born the honey-whip; noting (cāy) it, [as] putting on immortality, all creatures (prajā́) rejoice to meet it with their hearts.

The irregularities of meter in a and c may be rectified ⌊very unsatisfactorily⌋ by combining pṛthivyā́ 'nt- (as Ppp. actually reads) and resolving cāyitu-ā́. Divás p- is prescribed by Prāt. ii. 68.

2. Great, all-formed [is] the milk of it; also they call thee the seed of ocean; whence the granting honey-whip cometh, thither breath, thither immortality (amṛ́ta) hath entered in.

Ppp. puts payas in a after viçvarūpam ⌊and combines payo 'syās⌋ and puts tvā in b after uta; and it reads at the end diviṣṭaṁ. It also gives the verse after our vs. 3. The metrical definition of the Anukr. is wrong, since a fair triṣṭubh is restorable by a little resolution (viçu-a, pr-āṇas).

3. Men, manifoldly meditating (mīmāṅs-) severally see its movement (caritá) on the earth; verily from fire, from wind was born the honey-whip, the formidable daughter (naptí) of the Maruts.

Pāda c is identical with 1 b, pādas c, d with 10 c, d. Ppp. reads at end of a pṛthivyāṣ; at end of d, ugrā anapatiḥ (also in vs. 10).

4. Mother of the Ādityas, daughter of the Vasus, breath of creatures (prajā́), navel of immortality (amṛ́ta), gold-colored, dripping with ghee (ghṛtā́cī), the honey-whip moves among mortals [as] a great brightness (bhárga).

Bp.p.m.,Bp.²T. read gárbhas in d, and our edition follows them, doubtless erroneously. ⌊All of SPP's authorities give bhárgas.⌋ With a, b compare RV. viii. 101 (90). 15 a, b ⌊and MB. ii. 8. 15 a, b⌋. The Anukr. does not heed the redundant syllable in c. ⌊Correct gárbhaç to bhárgaç.⌋

5. The gods generated the whip of honey; of it there came to be an all-formed embryo; this, when born [and] tender, its mother fills; it, [when] born, looks abroad on all existences.

Ppp. has at the end bhuvanā 'bhi vaste.

6. Who knows (pra-vid) that, who understands (cit) that which [is] the unexhausted soma-holding vessel of the heart of it? The priest (brahmán) of excellent wisdom — he may revel in it.

'Of it' (b) is fem., and so relates to the 'honey-whip'; 'in it,' at the end, relates to the 'vessel.' Akṣitas (Ppp. akṣatas) at the end of b is plainly an intrusive addition to the pāda; the Anukr., wrongly reckoning the initial a of asyās as unelided, counts 15 syllables in the pāda, and calls both this and the next verse by the unusual and indefinite name mahābṛhatī.

7. He knows those two, he understands them that [are] its two unexhausted, thousand-streaming breasts; they milk out refreshment (ū́rj), unresisting.

'Its,' i.e. of the 'honey-whip.' Ppp. reads again akṣatāu in b, and it puts this verse before our vs. 6.

8. She that, crying much, great, vigor-bestowing, loud-noised, goes unto her course (?vratá), bellowing at three gharmás — she lows a lowing, she abounds (pī) with milk (páyas).

'Crying loudly,' lit. 'making to excess the sound hiṅg'; 'abounds with milk,' perhaps rather 'gives milk in streams.' The verse is very obscure; it is in part identical with 10. 6 below (= RV. i. 164. 28). Its irregular meter (11 + 10 [11?]: 9 + 11 = 41 syllables) is very ill defined by the Anukr. ⌊which seems to scan as 11 + 9 : 9 + 11⌋.

9. Whom, when fattened, the waters wait upon, the mighty (çākvará) bulls that are self-ruling, they rain, they cause to rain, for him who knows this, his desire, refreshment, waters.

'Whom' is fem.; 'they' (c) is masc., = the bulls. Parts of this verse and the following one are lost in Ppp. The Anukr. ⌊seems to scan as 11 + 11 : 9 + 9⌋.

10. Thunder [is] thy voice, O Prajāpati; a bull, thou castest (kṣip) vehemence (?çúṣma) over the earth; verily from fire, from wind was born the honey-whip, the formidable daughter of the Maruts.

The latter half-verse we had above, as 3 c, d; the former half-verse is repeated below, as 20 a, b ⌊with divi for ádhi at the end⌋. ⌊Bloomfield thinks çuṣma is 'lightning': ZDMG. xlviii. 566.⌋ O. reads at the beginning stanayitnúṣ ṭe. The metrical description of the Anukr. means only that the syllables are 40 in all (10 + 12 : 11 + 7), and that one pāda contains seven.

11. As at the early pressing soma is loved (priyá) of the Açvins, so, O Açvins, let splendor be maintained in my self.

12. As at the second pressing soma is loved of Indra-and-Agni, so, O Indra-and-Agni, let splendor be maintained in my self.

13. As at the third pressing soma is loved of the Ṛibhus, so, O Ṛibhus, let splendor be maintained in my self.

This group of three verses is specially quoted at Vāit. 21. 7 to accompany an offering of ājya. It is one of the passages forming the varcasya gaṇa (see note to Kāuç. 13. 1); and at Kāuç. 139. 15 it is prescribed to be used, with many others, in the ceremony of initiation of a Vedic student. The verses are not metrical, though the Anukr. calls them anuṣṭubh (as having 31 and 32 syllables). In 12 a the accent-mark under ye has dropped out.

14. May I generate honey; may I win honey; rich in milk, O Agni, have I come; unite me here with splendor.

The second part of the verse we have had above as vii. 89. 1 c, d. The edition reads, with all the mss., vañçiṣīya, but it should be emended to vaṅsiṣīya (root van); cf. the similar misreading at xvi. 9. 4. Ppp. reads madhu janiṣī manu mambikīyaḥ; and it combines agnā "gamam. By reckoning the first part of the passage as metrical (which it is not) the Anukr. counts out a good purauṣṇih.

15. Unite me, O Agni, with splendor, with progeny, with life-time; may the gods know me as such; may Indra know, together with the seers.

We had the verse above, as vii. 89. 2.

16. As the honey-makers bring together honey upon honey, so, O Açvins, let splendor be maintained in my self.

Ppp. reads, for the second half-verse, evā me 'çvinā balam ojaç ca dhriyatām : cf. our 17 c, d. The line is, like the corresponding parts of 11–13, not metrical as it stands.

17. As the flies (mákṣā) smear down here honey upon honey, so, O Açvins, let my splendor, brilliancy, strength, and force be maintained.

In a, delete the superfluous accent-mark under dhu. Ppp. has quite another version of a, b: yathā makṣā mayuntyujaṁ dakṣiṇām adhi: and it omits balam ojas in d. The omission of any one of the three nouns in our d would rectify the meter.

18. What honey on hills (girí), on mountains, what in kine, in horses, in strong drink (súrā) as poured out, what honey [is] there, [be] that in me.

With this verse and the next are to be compared vi. 69. 1, 2 ⌊where the use by Vāit. is given⌋. Ppp. has only yadi giriṣyavipāṁ citviṣī in place of this verse, and puts it before our 16.

19. O ye Açvins, lords of beauty! anoint me with the honey of bees (sāraghá), that I may speak splendid words among the people.

This verse differs only by one word from vi. 69. 2.

20. Thunder [is] thy voice, O Prajāpati; a bull, thou castest vehemence on the earth, on the sky; upon that live all cattle; with this it lavishes (pṛ) food (íṣ) [and] refreshment.

The first half-verse is the same with 10 a, b, saving diví for ádhi at the end. 'That' in c is fem. (tā́m), and might refer either to 'voice' or to 'earth'; 'this' is masc. (or neut., téna), and might refer either to 'vehemence' or to 'sky'; while 'it' is again fem. The obscurity of the verse baffles interpretation. The Pet. Lex. suggests 'seed' as a possible rendering of çúṣma ('vehemence'). The metrical description of the Anukr. is, as usual in such an irregular case (10 + 12 : 11 + 9 [11?] = 42), quite worthless. Ppp. omits the first pāda, reads divas for divi at the end of the second, and goes on thus: madhoṣ kaçayoṣ pṛthivīm anakṣi tāṁ dātāraṁ paçava upa jīvanti: sarve tena vo çeṣaṁ ūrjaṁ bibharti.

21. Earth [is] the staff, atmosphere the embryo, sky the whip, lightning the snapper (?prakaçá), of gold the globule (bindú).

The Pet. Lex. conjectures "Peitschenriemen" for prakaçá. Ppp. leaves the initial of antarikṣam unelided, and for prakaças has prakāçā madhokaçā ci ghṛtācī.

22. He who knows the seven honeys of the whip becomes rich in honey: the Brahman, and the king, and the milch-cow, and the draft-ox, and rice, and barley; honey the seventh.

One does not see why the Anukr. calls the passage brāhmī purauṣṇih ⌊that is $\frac{6}{4}$ of 12 : 8 + 8 = 18 : 12 + 12 = 42⌋ rather than simply brāhmī uṣṇih ⌊$\frac{6}{4}$ of 8 + 8 : 12 = 12 + 12 : 18 = 42⌋; it is the only example of either name in the treatise. ⌊The not very sufficient reason for the preference would seem to be the position of the avasāna, which divides the "vs." as 18 : 24 and not as 24 : 18.⌋ ⌊Ppp. has in a madhukaçāyās for kaç- and sapta madhumatīm for madhumān bhavati; then follows madhumato lokāṅ jayati (cf. vs. 23).⌋

23. Rich in honey he becomes; rich in honey becomes his provision (āhāryà); worlds rich in honey he conquers, who knows thus.

24. When it thunders in a clear sky, that is Prajāpati himself becoming manifest to his creatures; therefore I stand with the sacred cord over the right shoulder, saying: O Prajāpati, take notice (anu-budh) of me: creatures [take notice], Prajāpati takes notice of him who knows thus.

In order to make an aṣṭi (64 syll.) of this piece of prose, we have to restore ánu and separate íti in d, and to resolve ánu enam in e; and to make six pādas the last line has to be violently divided; the pada-text intimates a division after the second ánu. ⌊Ppp. in a–b has a tat also before prajāpatis and in e it reads prajā budhyante for prajāp- budhyate.⌋

2. To Kāma: for various blessings.

⌊Partly prose—"vs." 13.⌋ Found also (except vs. 4) in Pāipp. xvi. ⌊with vs. 16 before 12 and vs. 24 before 20⌋. The hymn (vs. 1) is prescribed in Vāit. 24. 10 to be recited, with homage to Kāma, in a part of the Agniṣṭoma ceremony; and in Kāuç. 49. 1 it (vs. 1) accompanies the release of a bull in a witchcraft ceremony.

Translated: Muir, v. 404 (nearly all); Ludwig, p. 519; Scherman, Philosophische Hymnen, p. 76 (part); Henry, 84, 118; Griffith, i. 430; Bloomfield, 220, 591.—Cf. Hillebrandt, Veda-Chrestomathie, p. 40.

1. The rival-slaying bull Kāma do I desire to aid (?çikṣ) with ghee, with oblation, with sacrificial butter; do thou, praised with great heroism, make my rivals to fall downward.

Kāma, lit. ‘desire, love,’ is so thoroughly personified throughout the hymn that the word is better transferred than translated.

2. What of my mind or my sight is not agreeable (priyá), what of me gnaws, does not enjoy (abhi-nand), that evil-dreaming do I fasten on my rival; praising Kāma, may I shoot up.

The sense of a, b is very doubtful; without b added, a would naturally mean ‘what is not agreeable to my mind or sight’; the Pet. Lex. proposes to help the difficulty rather by emending b to yasmād bībhatse yac ca nā ’bhinande. This verse and the following one are included in the duḥsvapnanāçana gaṇa: see note to Kāuç. 46. 9. There is an irregularity in every pāda, but the Anukr. does not heed them. Ppp. has, for b, yan me hṛdaye nā ’bhinandanti; and, for d, kāmaṁ juṣṭa hānudaṁ bhideyam — thus giving us no help. ⌊Pischel treats the vs., Ved. Stud. ii. 61. Aufrecht, KZ. xxxiv. 459, sees here a root bhas ‘verdriessen, taedere.’⌋

3. Evil-dreaming, O Kāma, and difficulty, O Kāma, want of progeny, homelessness, ruin do thou, formidable, masterful, fasten on him who shall seek to devise (cikits-) distresses for us.

Ppp. combines yo ’smabhyam in d.

4. Thrust, O Kāma; thrust forth, O Kāma; let them who are my rivals go to ruin; of them, thrust to lowest darknesses, do thou, O Agni, burn out the abodes (vástu).

The Anukr. takes no notice of the deficiency of two syllables in d, which in 9 d is made up by the addition of anu. In Vāit. 4. 5 the verse is strangely used to accompany the separation of two sacrificial ladles; in Kāuç. 48. 5 it accompanies the driving away of something with a branch.

5. That daughter of thine, O Kāma, is called a milch-cow, what utterance (vác) the poets name viráj; with that do thou avoid them that are my rivals; let breath, cattle, life avoid them.

Or a might be ‘that milch-cow is called thy daughter.’ O. reads páry eṇān in d; but the passage is quoted under Prāt. iii. 80 as one in which the lingualization of n does not take place.

6. With the strength of Kāma, of Indra, of king Varuṇa, of Vishṇu, with the impulse of Savitar (‘the impeller’), with the priestship (hotrá) of Agni I thrust forth my rivals, as a skilful pole-man (?çambín) a boat on the waters (udaká).

Çambín occurs nowhere else, and the meaning of çámba is doubtful. Ppp. reads in c piçācān instead of sapatnān.

7. Let Kāma, my valiant (vājín) formidable overseer, make for me freedom from rivals; let the all-gods be my refuge; let all the gods come to this call of mine.

'All' is viçve in c, and sárve in d. The verse is called jagatī by the Anukr., though only d is a jagatī pāda ⌊and that only by count⌋. Ppp. combines at the end of d māi 'mam ⌊and thus suggests the true metrical rendering of d as a triṣṭubh: similarly at ix. 3. 15⌋.

8. Enjoying this sacrificial butter rich in ghee, do ye, with Kāma as chief (-jyéṣṭha), revel here, making for me freedom from rivals.

Ppp. reads ghṛtam id in a, and kṛṇvantu in c. The verse is a perfectly good virāṇnāmagāyatrī, but the Anukr. calls it an ārcī pañkti, as if it had 30 syllables.

9. Becoming, O Kāma, in alliance (sarátham) with Indra-and-Agni, may ye make my rivals to fall downward; of them, fallen to lowest darknesses, do thou, O Agni, burn along out the abodes.

With c, d compare 4 c, d above. The first half-verse presents various anomalies: sarátham demands an instrumental case; we should expect rather a plural verb (but compare vi. 104. 3 a, b); and it should be accented after hí. Emending indrāgní to índreṇa, and reading pādáyāthas, would make everything right.

10. Slay thou, O Kāma, those that are my rivals; make them fall down to blind darknesses; be they all senseless (?nírindriya), sapless; let them not live any day soever.

Ppp. combines sapatnā 'ndhā in a–b, combines and reads nirindriyā 'ravāḥ in c, and has for d yathā nu jīvāt katamac ⌊-maç?⌋ cane 'ṣāṁ.

11. Kāma hath slain (vadh) them that are my rivals; he hath made for me wide space, prosperity; let the four directions bow to me; let the six wide ones ⌊fem.⌋ bring ghee to me.

The third pāda was found above as v. 3. 1 c. It is unusual for the Anukr. to note as bhurij a triṣṭubh containing a jagatī-pāda. ⌊Cf. Bergaigne, Rel. Véd. ii. 122.⌋

12. Let them float away downward, like a boat severed from its mooring; of them, thrust forth by missiles, there is no return again.

13. Agni [is] a repeller (?yáva), Indra a repeller, Soma a repeller; let the repelling (?yavayā́van) gods repel (yu) him.

⌊Prose.⌋ This translation is altogether questionable. Perhaps the verse accompanies a ceremony in which barley (yáva) is used, a play on words being intended between yáva 'barley' and the root yu 'repel'; yavayā́van would then be 'going in barley.' Ppp. has for second half yavayanty amum āmuṣyāyaṇam amuṣyāṣ putraṁ jīvalokaṁ mṛtalokaṁ katā 'mum. It is strange that the Anukr. does not note the paragraph as dvyavasānā.

14. With his heroes not safe ⌊á-sarvavīra⌋ let him go on, thrust forth, to be hated of friends, to be avoided of his own kin; on earth also stay (ava-sā) thunderbolts; may the formidable god massacre your rivals.

The sense of c is obscure; vidyútas might also be object of the verb: 'they let loose thunderbolts.' Ppp. puts dveṣyas after mitrāṇām in b. The Anukr. calls the verse a jagatī, although it is a triṣṭubh with one jagatī-pāda (like 11). ⌊W. usually renders sárvavīra by 'with all [his, our, etc.] heroes.'⌋

15. This great [earth], both stirred and unstirred, bears the lightning and all the thunders; let the Āditya, arising with property, with brilliancy, thrust downward my rivals, he the powerful one.

The first half-verse is wholly obscure, and the version given commits the grammatical solecism of taking vidyút as neut. accus. But for the last ca, vidyut might be taken as subject of the sentence. The verse has a triṣṭubh-pāda (a), of which the Anukr. makes no account.

16. What sufficient (udbhú) triply-guarding defense thou hast, O Kāma, worship (bráhman) as extended protection (várman), made unpierceable, with that do thou avoid them that are my rivals; let breath, cattle, life avoid them.

The last half-verse is ⌊nearly⌋ identical with 5 c, d above, and O. again reads eṇān in d. Ppp. puts the verse next before our 12. The description of the meter by the Anukr. is unintelligible, since we have (12 + 14 : 12 + 14) 52 syllables, or an atijagatī; perhaps parājagatī is a misreading for this.

17. Wherewith the gods thrust forth the Asuras, wherewith Indra conducted the barbarians (dásyu) to lowest darkness, therewith do thou, O Kāma, thrust forth far from this world those who are my rivals.

Ppp. reads at end of b tamo 'pabādhe, and at end of d sarvān for dūram. The verse (11 + 13 : 11 + 11 = 46) is a queer sort of "jagatī."

18. As the gods thrust forth the Asuras, as Indra drove (bādh) the barbarians to lowest darkness, so do thou, O Kāma, thrust forth far from this world those who are my rivals.

Ppp. has again tamo 'pabādhe, but this time dūram. The "jagatī" meter is like that of vs. 17.

19. Kāma was first born; not the gods, the Fathers, nor mortals attained (āp) him; to them art thou superior (jyā́yāṅs), always great; to thee as such, O Kāma, do I pay homage.

Ppp. reads in a, b prathamo nā 'nyat puro nāi 'naṁ devāsaṣ pitaro no 'ta martyāḥ; and it combines in d namāi 't. The verse (9⌊10?⌋ + 10 : 12 + 11 = 42) is a queer "triṣṭubh."

20. How great in width are heaven-and-earth; how far the waters flowed, how far fire — to them art thou etc. etc.

With a is identical iv. 6. 2 a. Some saṁhitā-mss. read sisyadúr in b (O.s.m.R.). ⌊I find no note of R.⌋ The meter is described by the Anukr. in accordance with that of vs. 11.

21. How great are the divergent (víṣvañc) quarters [and] directions; how great the regions (ā́çā), on-lookers of the sky — to them art thou etc. etc.

The verse lacks two syllables of being a real jagatī.

22. How many the humble-bees (bhṛ́ñga), the bats, the kurū́rus; how many have been the vághās, the tree-creepers — to them art thou etc. etc.

The verse is a jagatī in number of syllables (12 + 13 : 12 + 11 = 48). Bp. accents jatváḥ in a.

23. Superior art thou to him that winks, that stands; superior to the ocean art thou, O Kāma, fury — to them art thou etc. etc.

24. Verily no wind soever attains (āp) Kāma, not fire, sun, also not moon; to them art thou etc. etc.

Ppp. puts this verse before our 20, and reads for c, d na vāpaç cana kāmam āpur nā 'horātrāṇi nihatāni yan̄ti na vāi puṇyajāç ⌊intending puṇyajanāç?⌋ cana kāmam āpur na gandharvāpsaraso na sárpāḥ. The Anukr. accounts the verse simply a triṣṭubh ⌊perhaps counting b as 10 and balancing it with the 12 of c⌋.

25. What propitious excellent bodies thou hast, O Kāma, with which what thou choosest becometh real, with them do thou enter wholly into us; make evil devices (dhī́) enter away elsewhere.

The combination tā́bhiṣ ṭvám is an example under Prāt. ii. 84, and is quoted in the commentary there. Ppp. reads vṛṇīte at end of b, upa- for abhi- in c, and upa for apa in d. The Anukr. pays no heed to the extra syllable in d. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 24. 29 in the āgrahāyaṇī ceremony, to accompany the act of lying down (apparently merely on account of the occurrence of -saṁ-viç in c).

3. To accompany the releasing of a house.

[Bhṛgvañgiras. — ekatrin̄çatkam. çā́lādevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 6. pathyāpañkti; 7. paroṣṇih; 15. 3-av. 5-p. atiçakvarī; 17. prastārapañkti; 21. āstārapañkti; 25, 31. 3-p. prājāpatyā bṛhatī; 26. sāmnī triṣṭubh; 27–30. pratiṣṭhānāmagāyatrī; 25–31. 1-av. 3-p.]

⌊Partly prose — 25 to end.⌋ Found also in Pāipp. xvi. (in the verse-order 1–3, 5, 4, 6–10, 14, 16, 11, 12, 13, 15, 17, 21, 18, 20, 19, 24, 23, 22, 25–31). The hymn is not noticed in Vāit.; but several verses (1, 15, 18, 22, 24) are quoted in Kāuç. 66. 22–30, in connection with an inauguration-ceremony (savayajña) in which a house (a toy house?) is an object given.

Translated: Ludwig, p. 464; Zimmer, p. 151 (vss. 1–24); Grill, 60, 188 (vss. 1–24); Henry, 87, 121; Griffith, i. 434; Bloomfield, 193, 595. — Cf. also Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 179.

1. Of the props (upamít), of the supports (pratimít), and also of the connectors (?parimít) of the dwelling (çā́lā) that possesses all choice things, we unfasten the tied (naddhá) [parts].

Ppp. reads upamitaṣ pratimito 'tho parimitaç ca yaç çālāyā viçvavārāyā te naddhān vi cṛtāmasi.

2. What of thee is tied, O thou that possessest all choice things, what fetter and knot is made, that with a spell (vā́c) I make fall apart, as Brihaspati [did] Bala.

All the mss. read balám (not valám) in c, as also Ppp. (bṛhaspatiṁ vahaṁ balam). Our Bp. has in d srañçayāmi : tvát. The Anukr. seems to imply the abbreviation of iva to 'va in c.

3. He stretched (ā-yam), he combined (sam-bṛh), he made thy knots firm (dṛḍhá); with Indra we unfasten [them], as a knowing slaughterer the joints.

4. Of thy beams (vaṅçá), ties (náhana), and binding (prāṇāhá) grass, of thy sides (pakṣá), O thou that possessest all choice things, we unfasten the tied [parts].

Vaṅçá is properly a bamboo beam. Prāṇāhá (unchanged in pada-text) seems to occur only here, nor is root nah elsewhere combined with pra; I have ventured to render it as an adj., as tṛ́ṇa appears to call for a descriptive epithet. Ppp. reads naddhān vi in d.

5. Of the clamps (saṁdaṅçá), of the paladás, and of the embracer (páriṣvañjalya) — now of the mistress of the building do we unfasten the tied [parts].

Ppp. reads, in a, b, palidānāṁ pariṣvañcanadasya ca; and, for c, sarvā mānasya patni te; it also puts the verse before our 4.

6. What hanging vessels (?çikyà) they bound on to thee within for enjoyment, those we unfasten for thee; be thou, [when] set up, O mistress of the building, propitious to our self (tanū́).

Çikyà may be an ornamental hanging appendage of some kind.* All the mss. read mā́nasya patni in d; our edition emends to mān-. The pada-text has úddhitā, undivided, in e (as at xviii. 2. 34, and uddhiḥ at viii. 8. 22); the case ought to fall under Prāt. iv. 62, but root dhā is not mentioned there, though we find han superfluously included. Ppp. reads yāni te antaç cikyāny āmedho 'ntyāya kaṁ; and, for d, sarvā mānasya patnyā.

*⌊As to decorations of this kind, see John Griffiths, The Paintings in the Buddhist Cave-Temples of Ajantâ, London, 1896, plates 6, 10, and 13; cf. also Karpūra-mañjarī, iii. 27, ed. Konow, and my note thereon at p. 289. W. has interlined "slings" as an alternative rendering of çikyà.⌋

The paroṣṇih is regular, save for the common variant of a triṣṭubh instead of a jagatī-pāda at the end.

8. The thousand-eyed net (ákṣu), stretched out as opaçá on the division-line (viṣūvánt), tied down, put on, do we with worship (bráhman) unfasten.

Abhihita in c doubtless contains the suggestion of abhidhānī 'a halter.' Geldner (Ved. Stud. i. 136) wants to make of akṣu a 'stake' or 'pillar.' Viṣūvant probably means the 'parting of the hair, crown' (so Zimmer), here the ridge of the roof. Ppp. begins with yakṣmopiçam, and has in c the easier reading apinaddham apihitam.

9. He who, O dwelling, accepts thee, and he by whom thou art built — let both those, O mistress of the building, live to attain old age.

The mā́nasya of the mss. in c is again emended in our edition to mān-. Ppp. rectifies the meter of a by reading yaç citrā (ca tvā?) pr-. The Anukr. pays no heed to the irregularity of the verse (9 + 8 : 8 + 7).

10. Do thou, made firm, tied, adorned (pari-kṛ), go to him yonder — thou whose every limb, whose every joint we unfasten.

O. reads in a amútrāi 'nam. Páriṣkṛtā is unaltered in the pada-text, as prescribed by Prāt. iv. 58. Enam probably indicates the "acceptor" (9 a, 15). Ppp. reads in b tridhā for dṛḍhā, and begins c with tasyās. ⌊As to amútra, cf. Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 179.⌋

11. He who fixed (ni-mi) thee, O dwelling, [who] brought together the forest trees — unto progeny, O dwelling, he, [as a] most exalted Prajāpati, made thee.

Ppp. reads pūrvas for çāle in a.

12. Homage to him, homage to the giver, and to the lord of the dwelling we pay; homage to the forth-moving (pra-car) fire, and to thy spirit (?púruṣa) [be] homage.

Ppp. reads in b kṛṇmasi.

13. Homage to kine, to horses, whatever is born (vi-jā) in the dwelling; thou rich in births (vijā-), rich in progeny, we unfasten thy fetters.

Ppp. lacks, probably by an oversight, the second half-verse.

14. Thou coverest within the fire, the men together with the cattle (paçú); thou rich in births, rich in progeny, we unfasten thy fetters.

15. Between both heaven and earth what expanse [there is], therewith do I accept this dwelling of thine; the atmosphere that pervades (vimā́na) space (rájas), that do I make a paunch (udára) for treasures; therewith I accept the house for this man.

This verse in Kāuç. 66. 28 accompanies the "acceptance" of the house in question. The Anukr. calls it an atiçakvarī, though it contains only 57 syllables (12 + 12 : 11 + 11 : 11) instead of 60. Ppp. reads at end of b tāi 'mām (an abbreviation which is here acceptable, as making a good triṣṭubh-pāda ⌊such was the case at ix. 2. 7 also⌋), and in e yac chālām for tena ç-.

16. Rich in refreshment, rich in milk, fixed (ni-mi), built upon the earth, bearing all food, O dwelling, do not thou injure those accepting [thee].

17. Wrapped (ā-vṛ) with grass, clothing itself in paladás, the dwelling, place of rest (nivéçanī) of living creatures, like the night — built on the earth thou standest, like a she-elephant, having feet.

That is, apparently, heavy and big on the four corner posts, like an elephant (female because 'dwelling' is feminine) on its feet. With b compare xii. 1. 6 b. The verse as a prastārapañkti (11 + 12 : 8 + 8) has no irregularity which the Anukr. is wont to heed.

18. Of thy rush-work (íṭa) I unfasten what was tied on, uncovering; [thee] pressed together by Varuṇa let Mitra in the morning open out.

The verse in Kāuç. 66. 24 accompanies the letting down (ava-sṛ) of the door. ⌊Bergaigne has a note on the vs., Rel. Véd. iii. 122.⌋

19. The dwelling fixed with worship (bráhman), fixed, built by the poets — let Indra-and-Agni, immortal, defend the dwelling, the seat for soma (somyá).

P. reads nírmitām in b, and sāumyám in d. Ppp. has a quite different version: catussraktiṁ paricakrāṁ for a; viçvāna bibhratī çālām (cf. our 16 c) amṛto sāumyaṁ sadaḥ for c, d.

20. A nest (kulā́ya) upon a nest, a vessel (kóça) pressed together in a vessel — there a mortal is born (vi-jā), from whom all is generated (pra-jā).

Ppp. has martyas in c.

21. [The dwelling] which is fixed with two sides, with four sides, which with six sides — the eight-sided, the ten-sided dwelling, the mistress of the building, Agni lies in like an embryo.

The pada-text reads aṣṭā∘pakṣām in c, by Prāt. iii. 2; iv. 94. ⌊As to pakṣa, cf. iii. 7. 3.⌋ The verse is a good pañkti, involving only the resolution mā́nasi-a in d, but the Anukr. absurdly treats it as of four pādas; and, in accordance with this, the pada-mss. mark a pāda division after çā́lām.

22. I go forward, O dwelling, turned toward thee, uninjuring, that art turned toward me; for within [are] fire and waters, the first door of right (ṛtá).

Ppp. reads at the end prathamobhā. The mss. all have ca ṛtásya in c–d. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 66. 25, accompanying the action of 'going forward with (ādāya) water-pot [and] fire.'

23. I bring forward these waters, free from yákṣma, dispellers of yákṣma; I set forth unto the houses, together with immortal fire.

We had this verse above, as iii. 12. 9. Ppp. (which omitted it as part of that hymn) reads in a harāmi, and in c abhi (for upa).

24. Fasten thou not on us the fetter; a heavy burden, become thou light; like a woman (vadhū́), O dwelling, we carry thee where we will.

Quoted in Kāuç. 66. 30. ⌊Cf. again Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 179. — Over "woman" W. interlines "bride?"⌋

25. From the eastern quarter, homage to the greatness of the dwelling! hail to the gods that are to be hailed!

⌊Ppp. puts svāhā devebhyaḥ svāhyebhyaḥ before prācyāḥ: and has a similar order in the following vss.⌋

26. From the southern quarter, homage etc. etc.
27. From the western quarter, homage etc. etc.
28. From the northern quarter, homage etc. etc.
29. From the firm quarter, homage etc. etc.
30. From the upward quarter, homage etc. etc.
31. From every quarter, homage etc. etc.

In the last verse diçódiçaḥ should have been printed without space before the repetition, as is our usage elsewhere.

4. Accompanying the gift of a bull.

[Brahman.—caturviñçakam. ārṣabham. trāiṣṭubham: 8. bhurij; 6, 10, 24. jagatī; 11–17, 19, 20, 23. anuṣṭubh; 18. upariṣṭād bṛhatī; 21. āstārapañkti.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. (in the verse-order 1–3, 5, 4, 6, 8, 7, 9, 10–13, 15, 14, 16–22, 24, 23). Not noticed in Vāit., and not in Kāuç. in a way to cast any light whatever upon it; the hymn is quoted in Kāuç. 24. 19 (with vi. 111) in the ceremony of turning a bull loose, and vs. 24 separately in the same ceremony in Kāuç. 24. 21; also vs. 1 in 66. 18 in connection with a bull; the hymn is reckoned (see note to Kāuç. 19. 1) among the puṣṭika mantras.

Translated: Henry, 90, 128; Griffith, i. 438.—For some of the vss. the reader may consult Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth. i. 330, 516, 382, 358, 525.

1. The bright bull of a thousand, rich in milk, bearing all forms in his bellies, desiring to accomplish (?çikṣ) what is excellent for his giver, the sacrificer—he, the ruddy one of Brihaspati, hath stretched ⌊ā-tan⌋ the line (tántu).

That is, doubtless, 'has extended or performed the sacrifice.'

2. He who in the beginning became the counterpart (pratimā́) of the waters, prevailing (prabhū́) for everything, like the divine earth, father of young (vatsá), lord of the inviolable [kine]—let him set (kṛ) us in thousandfold prosperity.

3. A male (púmāñs), [yet] pregnant, big (sthávira), rich in milk, the bull bears a trunk (kábandha) of good (vásu); him, sacrificed to Indra, let Agni Jātavedas carry by the roads traveled by the gods.

W. reads in b vásoṣ ká-.

4. Father of calves, lord of the inviolable [kine], also father of great gulfs (gárgara); calf, afterbirth, fresh milk, beestings, curd, ghee—that [is] his seed.

The verse occurs also in TS. (iii. 3. 9^{2}), MS. (ii. 5. 10), and K. (xiii. 9). In b, MS. reads utā́ 'yám for átho; for d, TS. has āmíkṣā mástu ghṛtám asya rétaḥ, and MS. the same, save yóniḥ for rétaḥ.

5. The gods' portion [was] that load, the sap of waters, of plants, of ghee; the mighty one (çakrá) chose a drink of soma; a great stone became what [was his] body.

This verse also is found in TS. and MS. (as above), in both texts preceding our vs. 4 (in MS. one other verse intervenes, our xviii. 4. 28). Both have, for a, devā́nām eṣá upanāhá āsīt; for b, TS. has apā́ṁ gárbha óṣadhīṣu nyàktaḥ, and MS. apā́m pátir vṛṣabhá óṣadhīnām; in c, both have drapsám for bhakṣám and pūṣā́ for çakráḥ; in d, after abhavat, MS. has yát tád ā́sīt, and TS. tád eṣām.

6. Thou bearest a vessel filled with soma, shaper (tváṣṭṛ) of forms, generator of cattle; propitious to thee be these pudenda (?prajanū́) that are here; to us, O ax, confirm those that are yonder.

Ppp. reads at the beginning somasya; its second half-verse is unintelligible. The verse is with no propriety called a jagatī (11 + 11 : 13 + 12 = 47).

7. Sacrificial butter he bears; ghee [is] his seed; thousandfold prosperity — that they call the sacrifice; the bull, clothing himself in Indra's form — let him, O gods, come propitious to us, being given.

Ppp. reads in b sahasrapoṣas, and in d 'smā and çivāi "tu.

8. Indra's force, Varuṇa's two arms, the Açvins' two shoulders, of the Maruts this hump; they who are wise, poets, who are skilful (manīṣín), call him Brihaspati brought together.

The verse has two jagatī-pādas, though called by the Anukr. simply bhurij. Read at the end of b kakút.

9. Rich in milk, thou stretchest unto the people (víç) of the gods; thee they call Indra, thee Sarasvant; he gives a thousand [kine] with one face who makes offering (ā-hu) of a bull to a Brahman.

⌊Cf. Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 183.⌋

10. Brihaspati, Savitar bestowed on thee vigor (váyas); from Tvashṭar, from Vāyu was brought forth thy soul (ātmán); with mind in the atmosphere I make offering (hu) of thee; let heaven-and-earth both be thy barhís.

Ppp. reads manas for vayas in a. The Anukr. calls the verse jagatī, though two of its pādas are triṣṭubh.

11. He who goes speaking out greatly among the kine, like Indra among the gods — of that bull let the worshiper (brahmán) praise together the members excellently.

All our mss. (save O.) read, like the edition, tásya ṛṣa- in c, although the passage is quoted as example under the Prāt. rule (iii. 46) that a or ā + ṛ make ar. Ppp. reads in a āindrī 'va. The paddhati (note to Kāuç. 24. 19) has the verse whispered in the right ear of the released bull.

12. His sides were Anumati's; his flanks (?anūvṛ́j) were Bhaga's; of his knees (aṣṭhīvánt) Mitra said: those are wholly mine.

All the nouns are duals. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in c. ⌊Henry would emend thus: -vántābrav-, i.e. -vántā abrav-.⌋ Ppp. reads at the beginning pārçvay āstām.

13. His rump was the Ādityas'; his two thighs were Brihaspati's; his tail [was] the heavenly wind's; therewith he shakes the herbs.

Ppp. reads in b çroṇīy āstām.

14. His intestines (gúdā) were Sinīvālī's; they called his skin Sūryā's; they called his feet (pl.) the upstander's (utthātṛ́), when they prepared (kalpay-) the bull.

The pada-text reads, like the saṁhitā, utthātúḥ, by Prāt. iv. 62. Ppp. combines gudā "saṁ; it also makes our 14 c, d and 15 c, d exchange places. ⌊Ppp. puts yat before ṛṣabham, and for akalpayan it has vika . . . (gap).⌋

15. His breast (kroḍá) was Jāmiçaṅsa's; his vessel [was] maintained as Soma's, when all the gods, coming together, distributed (vi-kalpay-) the bull.

We had jāmiçaṅsa above (ii. 10. 1) as 'imprecation of sisters'; the word does not occur elsewhere. What part of the bull is his 'vessel' is obscure. The first pāda has a redundant syllable.

16. Those dew-claws (kúṣṭhikā) [were] Saramā's; they assigned the hoofs to the tortoises (kūrmá); the content of his bowels they maintained for the worms, the çavartás.

The mss. are divided between çavarta (P.s.m.I.O.R.p.m.T.D.Kp.) and çvavarta (Bp.E.R.s.m.); while M. and P.p.m. have çvaçavarta, and W. çaçavarta. The occurrence of çavartá in TS. (v. 7. 23^1: also in connection with ū́badhya) determined the reading of our text. But our pada-text divides the word (Bp. çva°vartá; D.Kp. ça°v-), which favors the reading çva-, since it implies a combination of the two recognizably independent words çvan and varta, 'occurring in dogs,' or something of the sort. Ppp. apparently has çivaratrebhyo. ⌊Roth suggests that çavarta may be for çavavarta 'Aaswurm, Made.'⌋

17. With his horns he pushes the demon; with his eye he slays ruin; with his ears he hears what is excellent — he who is the inviolable lord of kine.

Ppp. reads in a, b rakṣa riṣad rātī. The Prāt. (ii. 70) notes that the reading in d is not yás pát-. Some of the mss. (Bp.I.K.) accent aghnyàs.

18. With a hundred-fold sacrifice he sacrifices; the fires burn him not; all the gods quicken him, who makes offering of a bull to a Brahman.

The last pāda is the same with 9 d. Ppp. has sarve instead of viçve in c.

19. Having given a bull to Brahmans, one makes his mind wider; he beholds (ava-paç) prosperity of the inviolable [kine] in his own stall.

Ppp. reads in a brāhmaṇāya vṛṣabhaṁ, and in d vi paçyatu. In a, we have to combine (as not very rarely elsewhere) -bhya rṣ-.

20. Let there be kine, let there be progeny, also let there be own strength; let the gods approve all that for the giver of a bull.

Ppp. puts tat after sarvam in c.

21. Let this burly (pípāna) one, a very Indra, bestow conspicuous wealth; let this one [bestow] a well-milking cow, constantly with calf; let him yield (duh) inspired will beyond the sky.

Ppp. has very different readings, which in part are less unacceptable than those of our text: for a, b, ayaṁ pipānā indriyaṁ gayāṁ bibharti tejanī: in d, vipaçyataṁ puro divaḥ. ⌊For pípāna, cf. Bloomfield, AJP. xii. 443.⌋

22. Of reddish form, clouded (?nabhasá), vigor-giving, vehemence of Indra, all-formed, he hath come to us, assigning to us life-time and progeny; and with abundances of wealth let him attach himself to (abhi-sac) us.

The last half-verse agrees nearly with xviii. 4. 62 c, d, where dádhatas and sacadhvam make better meter. It is not impossible to resolve asmábhi-am in c, but sacantām, which some of the mss. read (P.p.m.W.D.), is forbidden by the sense. Ppp. has a wholly different line: prajām asmabhyaṁ dadhato rayiṁ ca dīrghāyutvāya çataçāradāya. ⌊Bloomfield translates the verse at ZDMG. xlviii. 566, but overlooks the accent of nabhasó: cf. támas-ā and tamasā́ (saṁhitā-form at xi. 9. 22).⌋

23. Here in this stall, O closeness (upapárcana), be thou close unto us; unto [us] what seed the bull has; unto [us], O Indra, thy heroism.

This is a variant of RV. vi. 28. 8 (with which TB. ii. 8. 8^{12} and LÇS. iii. 3. 4 precisely agree); RV. has, for a, b, úpe 'dáṁ upapárcanam āsú góṣū́ 'pa pṛcyatām, with rétasi for yád rétas in c, and vīryè at the end: a very different sense; the Pet. Lexx. understand upa-pṛc as signifying here sexual union. We have to combine irregularly goṣṭho 'pa in order to rectify the meter of b; the Anukr. does not heed the irregularity.

24. This young male we set toward you here; with him go ye (fem.) playing according to your wills; abandon us not with birth, ye well-portioned ones; and with abundances of wealth attach yourselves to us.

The last pāda is the same with xviii. 4. 62 d. The verse is found, in much more acceptable form, in TS. (iii. 3. 9^{1}, followed, after one intervening verse, by our vss. 5, 4 above) and PGS. (iii. 9. 6, disagreeing with TS. in only one word); they read, for a, etáṁ yúvānam pári (but PGS. patiṁ) vo dadāmi (omitting atra); in b, priyéṇa for váçāṅ ánu; in c, çāpta for hāsiṣṭa; and, for d, rāyás póṣeṇa sám iṣā́ madema (nearly our iii. 15. 8 c). Ppp. agrees with our text, only combining dadhmo 'tra in a. But for the accent of janúṣā (in TS. also), we might render, with Stenzler, 'ye who are by birth well-portioned.' Bp.R.p.m. have at end of c subhagās. The Anukr. weakly calls the verse (12 + 12 : 11 + 11) a jagatī, in spite of the triṣṭubh cadence of its first pāda. It is quoted in Kāuç. 24. 21, to accompany the sending away of an older bull and the release of a new one. ⌊See also note to Kāuç. 25. 24.⌋

5. With the offering of a goat and five rice-dishes.

⌊Partly prose — "vss." 16, 20–22, 31–36; also considerable parts of 23–30.⌋ Found for the most part also in Pāipp., but not all together, nor even all in the same book; the greater part of the vss. (1, 3–6, 8, 7, 11, 9, 12, 10, 13–15, 19–21, 23, 24, 2) occur in xvi.; vss. 16, 17, 37 (part) in iii.; vss. 27, 28 in viii.; vss. 24–26, 31–36 are represented by similar, but briefer and very corrupt material, in xvi.; vss. 18, 22, 37 (part), 38 are wanting ⌊apparently also 29–30⌋. Three of the verses are quoted in Vāit., and more in Kāuç.: see under the verses.

Translated: Muir, v. 304–6 (parts); Ludwig, p. 435; Henry, 93, 133; Griffith, i. 442.

1. Conduct him hither; take hold; let him go, foreknowing, unto the world of the well-doing; crossing the great darknesses variously, let the goat step unto the third firmament (nā́ka).

Ppp. has, in c, vipaçyaṁ for mahānti: cf. our 3 c. The first six verses of the hymn are quoted in their order in Kāuç. 64. 6–16 (vs. 1 also in 64. 27) in connection with the bringing in, slaughtering, and cooking of a goat; vss. 1 and 2 also in Vāit. 10. 14, 15, in connection with the sacrifice of an animal. This verse is called by the Anukr. simply a triṣṭubh, although its first half is very irregular (8 + 13).

2. I lead thee about as portion for Indra, as patron (sūrí) for the sacrificer at this sacrifice; whoever hate us, them take hold after; innocent (ánāgas) [are] the sacrificer's heroes.

The verse in Ppp. (as noted above) follows what corresponds to our vs. 24, and has, for a, b, ind. bh. çamitā kṛṇotvaṁ yajña yajñapatiç ca sūriḥ; and, for d, ariṣṭā vīrā yajamānāç ca sarve.

3. Away from his foot wash thou down the evil walk that he walked (car); with cleansed hoofs let him step on, foreknowing; crossing the darknesses, variously looking abroad let the goat step unto the third firmament.

Or padás in a may be accus. pl.; the redundancy of the pāda, in sense and meter, is an indication of intrusion; but the mode of its reduction to proper shape is not obvious, and Ppp. gives no help. Ppp. has, instead of our c, d, te jyotiṣmantaṁ sukṛtāl lokam īpsan tṛtīye nāke adhi vikramasva.

4. Cut along this skin with the dark [metal], O slaughterer, joint by joint with the knife (así); do not plot against [him]; do not be hostile to [him]; prepare him joint-wise; set him up apart in the third firmament.

Ppp. has, for d, sukṛtām madhye adhi vi çraye 'mam. The Anukr. weakly calls the verse a jagatī, although it is a triṣṭubh with three redundant syllables (doubtless çyāména or viçastar) in a. The pada-text divides paru°çaḥ, by Prāt. iv. 19.

5. With a verse I set the kettle upon the fire; pour thou on the water; set him down; set [him] about with fire, ye quellers; when cooked, let him go where is the world of the well-doing.

Ppp. has instead, for a, bhūmyāṁ bhūmim adhi dhārayāmi; and, in b, abhi for ava. The successive parts of the verse are quoted in Kāuç. 64. 11-15, to accompany corresponding acts. The Anukr. does not heed the redundant syllable in d.

6. Step up from here, if thou hast been completely heated, from the heated pot on to the third firmament; thou, a fire, hast come into being out of fire; conquer [thy way] unto that world of light.

The translation of a implies the emendation to átapthās, which seems very probable; nearly all the mss. read ataptās (only E. áta-, P.M. ataptas), which the edition has altered to átaptas. Of the reading in Ppp. I have no note; Ppp. reads for d jyotiṣmo acha sukṛtāṁ yatra lokaḥ; our d is found (nearly) as its 8 d.

7. The goat [is] Agni, and they call the goat light; they say that the goat is to be given by one living to a priest (brahmán); the goat, given in this world by one having faith, smites far away the darknesses.

For the first two words Ppp. reads ajam evā 'gnim; in b, it puts jīvatā after brahmaṇe. The redundant syllable in b is not noticed by the Anukr. ⌊See note under 8.⌋

8. Having five rice-dishes, let him step out five-fold, about to step unto the three lights; go thou forth to the midst of the well-doing that have made offerings; spread out (vi-çri) upon the third firmament.

The last pāda is the same with xviii. 4. 3 e; Ppp. has instead jyotiṣmantam abhi lokaṁ jayā 'smāi, with which compare our 6 d. The Anukr. passes in silence the irregularities of the second pāda. ⌊Cf. Oldenberg, ZDMG. l. 449.⌋

9. Ascend, O goat, to where is the world of the well-doing; like an expelled çarabhá mayest thou move (eṣ) across difficult places; given, with five rice-dishes, to a priest (brahmán), he shall rejoice the giver with rejoicing.

Ppp. reads kramasva instead of roha in a, and reads çalabhas 'locust,' which is more sensible, in b; our d is its 10 d, with dhātāram instead of dā-. The Anukr. treats the second pāda as regular, and it can, indeed, be read by violence into 11 syllables.

10. The goat sets him that has given it on the three-firmamented, three-heavened, three-backed back of the firmament; being given with five rice-dishes to a priest, thou art a single milch-cow, all-formed, wish-yielding.

Ppp. reads in b sukṛtāṁ loke for nākasya pṛṣṭhe; and our d is its 9 d, with the intrusive dhenus left out. The verse, in spite of its irregularity, is by the Anukr. reckoned simply a jagatī (11 + 12 : 11 + 12[13?]).

11. This third light of yours, O Fathers, the goat with five rice-dishes one gives to a priest; the goat, given in this world by one having faith, smites far away the darknesses.

The second half-verse is identical with 7 c, d above. Ppp. has, for d, pañcodano brahmaṇe dīyamānaḥ (our 9 c, 10 c).

12. Desiring to obtain the world of the well-doing that have made offerings, one gives to a priest a goat with five rice-dishes; do thou conquer complete attainment (vyā̀pti) unto that world; be he, accepted, propitious to us.

Ppp. begins pra jyotiṣmantaṁ sukṛtāṁ lok-; and reads c, d thus: sa vyāpo neṅṣ abhi lokaṁ jayā 'sme çivo 'smabhyaṁ pratigṛhyate 'dhi.

13. The goat verily was born from the heat of the fire, wise, of the wise (vípra), of power, he the inspired one; what is offered, is bestowed, is conferred (abhípūrta), accompanied with váṣaṭ — that let the gods prepare in due season (ṛtuçás).

The first pāda is identical with iv. 14. 1 a. Ludwig (also p. 370) proposes to emend in c to gūrtam abhigūrtam. Part of the mss. blunderingly accent ṛtuçàs in d. Ppp. has in b vayodhā instead of vipaçcit, and in c puts pūrtam before iṣṭam. The last two pādas are irregular, but the Anukr. takes no notice of it. ⌊Pāda c is a good jagatī; and d, a good triṣṭubh, if we read devā́sas, or (with Henry) tád íd.⌋

14. A home-woven garment he may give, also gold as sacrificial gift; so he fully obtains the worlds that are heavenly and that are earthly.

15. Unto thee, O goat, let these streams of soma (somyá) go, divine, ghee-backed, honey-dripping; establish thou earth and sky, upon the seven-rayed back of the firmament.

The mss. in general (not P.M.) accent ája in a. They are rather evenly divided between ádhi and 'dhi in d (W.I.O.R.T.K. have 'dhi). Compare with a, b the refrain to iv. 34. 5–7. Ppp. reads for a: etās tvā dadhārā 'cchamayanti viçvatās somyaṁ; ⌊somyaṁ would seem to be the beginning of Ppp's b;⌋ in c, d, for uta . . . pṛṣṭhe, it gives divaṁ sadasva nāke tiṣṭhāsy. Pādas b, c are metrically irregular, but the Anukr. does not heed it.

16. A goat art thou; O goat, heaven-going (svar-gá) art thou; by thee the Añgirases foreknew [their] world; that pure (púṇya) world would I fain foreknow.

⌊Prose.⌋ The translation of a is according to the accent of the vocative ája; there may be a play on words between ajá 'goat' and ajá 'unborn': 'unborn art thou, O goat' (emending to aja). Ppp. reads for c taṁ lokam anu pra jñeṣma. ⌊This vs. and the next are in its iii.⌋ The definition of the meter by the Anukr. seems senseless (7 [8 ?] + 11 : 8 = 26). The third pāda is VS. xx. 25 c.

17. Wherewith thou carriest a thousand; wherewith, O Agni, [the offering of] one's whole possession — therewith carry thou this our offering to go to heaven (svàr) among the gods.

The verse is found also in VS. (xv. 55), TS. (iv. 7. 13^4; v. 7. 7^3), MS. (ii. 12. 4), and K. (xl. 12 ⌊but Schroeder under the MS. passage refers to K. xviii. 18⌋). VS. and MS. put sahásram after váhasi in a, and VS. reads ⌊yéna in a, and⌋ naya for vaha in c;

TS. has in iv. for d devayā́no yá uttamáḥ (in v. it agrees throughout with our text). Ppp. begins with yena vā sah-. Vāit. quotes the verse in 29. 9, 23. ⌊MS. has yéna.⌋

18. The cooked goat, having five rice-dishes, driving off perdition, sets [one] in the heavenly (svargá) world; with it may we conquer worlds that possess suns.

As noted above, the verse is wanting in Ppp.

19. [The goat] which one deposited with the Brahman, and which among the people (vikṣú); what scattered drops (viprúṣ) [there are] of the rice-dishes, of the goat — all that of ours, O Agni, do thou later know in the world of the well-done, at the meeting of the ways.

20. The goat verily strode out here (idám) in the beginning; this [earth] became its breast, the sky its back, the atmosphere its middle, the quarters its (two) sides, the (two) oceans its paunches;

21. Both truth and right its eyes, all truth [and] faith its breath, the virā́j its head; this verily is an unlimited offering, namely (yát) the goat with five rice-dishes.

The second satyam in vs. 21 is doubtless a corrupt reading, and the Ppp. version indicates that we should have instead rūpám ('the universe its form,' instead of 'all truth'). Ppp. reads, for the two verses: ajaṣ pañcāudano vy akramata tasyo 'ra iyam abhavad udaram antarikṣam: dyāuṣ ṭe pṛṣṭhaṁ diçaṣ pārçve: diçaç cā 'tidiçaç ca çṛñge satyaṁ ca ṛtaṁ ca cakṣuṣī viçvarūpaṁ çraddhā etc. All the saṁhitā-mss. read ca rtáṁ (instead of ca ṛtáṁ) near the beginning of vs. 21. The text of the Anukr. is apparently defective, leaving out the metrical definition of vss. 20–22 and vs. 25.

22. An unlimited offering does he obtain, an unlimited world does he take possession of (ava-rudh), who gives a goat with five rice-dishes, with the light of sacrificial gifts.

Wanting in Ppp., as noted above.

23. He should not split its bones; he should not suck out its marrow; taking it all together, he should cause it to enter here and here.

Or, 'should cause this and this to enter'; the sense is obscure. Ppp. reads in c sarvāṇi for sarvam enam. By calling the verse a purauṣṇih, the Anukr. intends that its first two pādas be read as one, of 12 syllables. The Kāuç. quotes (66. 31, 32; next after quotations of verses from hymn 3) both halves of the verse, the latter to accompany the act of piercing an object and scattering it into a pit filled with water.

24. This and this verily becomes its form; therewith one makes it come together; food, greatness, refreshment it yields (duh) to him who gives a goat with five rice-dishes, with the light of sacrificial gifts.

Ppp. reads for the second half-verse svadhām ūrjam akṣatiṁ maho 'smāi duhe: ya evaṁ viduṣo 'jaṁ pañcāudanaṁ dadāti; and, as above noted, our vs. 2 then follows. The metrical description of the Anukr. (closely accordant with that of vs. 26, though the real construction of the verses is very different) implies the artificial division of the refrain (as in vs. 28 and other verses below) into two pādas, of 7 and 9 syllables, and counts 46 syllables in all; the natural number is 45 (12 + 8 : 10 + 15 = 45).

25. Five gold ornaments (rukmá), five new garments, five milch-cows milking his desire come to be his who gives a goat with etc. etc.

This verse, of which at least the first pāda is metrical (11 + 13 : 15 = 39) is left undescribed in the Anukr. It (or vs. 26, both having the same pratīka) is quoted in Kāuç. 64. 25. ⌊More nearly, 'Five milch-cows become wish-milking for him who,' that is, 'yield or grant to him his wishes who' etc.⌋

26. Five gold ornaments become light for him; his garments become a defense for his body, he attains the heavenly (svargá) world, who gives a goat with etc. etc.

Here are plainly four pādas, of which the first three are metrical, with the refrain added (11 + 11 : 8 + 15); the definition of the Anukr. seems to imply 11 + 10 : 8 + 7 + 9 = 45 syllables, or a bhurik triṣṭubh.

27. Whoever (fem.) having gained a former husband, then gains another later one — if (ca) they (dual) shall give a goat with five rice-dishes, they shall not be separated.

The mss., as usual in such cases, read vitvā́ in a; and all but Bp. strangely accent anyàm in b. Ppp. reads pacatas for dadātas in d. ⌊This vs. and the next are in Ppp's viii.⌋

28. Her later husband comes to have the same world with his remarried spouse who (masc.) gives a goat with five rice-dishes, with the light of sacrificial gifts.

The Anukr. treats the prose refrain of vss. 22, 24–26 as a half anuṣṭubh in the second line of this verse. Ppp. reads instead ajaṁ ca pañcāudanaṁ dadat.

29. A milch-cow having one calf after another, a draft-ox, a pillow, a garment, gold, having given, those go to the highest heaven (dív).

The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in b. ⌊Perhaps it balances the redundancy of b with the deficiency of c.⌋

30. Self, father, son, grandson, grandfather, wife, generatrix, mother, those who are dear — them I call upon.

Nor does the Anukr. heed the deficient syllables in b of this verse. ⌊We might render jánitrīṁ mātáram by 'the mother that bore [me].'⌋

31. Whoever knows the season "torrid" (nāídāgha) by name — that verily is the season "torrid" by name, namely (yát) the goat with five rice-dishes; he indeed burns out the fortune of his unfriendly foe (bhrā́tṛvya), he thrives (bhū) by himself, who gives a goat with five rice-dishes, with the light of sacrificial gifts.

In this and the following verses the mss. read nā́ma rtúm etc. throughout. The natural division is into four pādas instead of seven, and ⌊the paragraph, read as prose, has⌋ only 61 syllables instead of 64 (=aṣṭi); but the three missing syllables can easily be made out by resolutions. One would expect ní dahati, to correspond with nāídāgha. Read in b yád ajáḥ (an accent-sign slipped out of place).

32. Whoever knows the season "making" by name, each making fortune of his unfriendly foe he takes to himself; that verily is the season "making" by name, namely the goat with five rice-dishes; he indeed etc. etc.

33. Whoever knows the season "gathering" by name, each gathering fortune of his unfriendly foe he takes to himself; that verily is the season "gathering" by name, namely the goat etc. etc.

34. Whoever knows the season "fattening" by name, each fattening fortune of his unfriendly foe he takes to himself; that verily is the season "fattening" by name, namely the goat etc. etc.

35. Whoever knows the season "up-going" by name, each up-going fortune of his unfriendly foe he takes to himself; that verily is the season "up-going" by name, namely the goat etc. etc.

These four verses agree in number of syllables, and the name given them by the Anukr. (prakṛti) demands 84; this number it is possible to make out by resolutions of saṁdhi, though the natural reading gives only 80 (10 + 20 : 15 : 20 + 15 = 80). Saṁyatī́m°saṁyatīm in vs. 33 b is quoted by the commentary under Prāt. iv. 44, as an example of a repeated separable word which gives up in pada-text its individual separation in favor of that between the repetitions. Read in 32 c yád ajáḥ (an accent-sign gone), and supply an omitted mark of punctuation after datte in 33.

36. Whoever knows the season "overcoming" (abhibhū́) by name, each overcoming fortune of his unfriendly foe he takes to himself; that verily is the season "overcoming" by name, namely the goat etc. etc.

This verse has six more syllables than the preceding ones, and the Anukr. gives it a name (ākṛti) applying properly to 88 syllables. In c read eṣá for eṣā́.

37. Cook ye the goat and the five rice-dishes; let all the quarters, like-minded, united (sadhryàñc), with the intermediate directions, accept that of thee.

All the mss. (except D.) read at the end tá (pada-text té) before etám; our edition emends to ta; the word could better be spared altogether. Ppp. has (in iii.) only the first pāda. The Anukr. describes the verse as if this pāda as well as the other two were metrical.

38. Let them defend this of thine for thee; to them I offer (hu) sacrificial butter, this oblation.

'Them' is fem., designating the 'quarters' of vs. 37. The translation omits a te; it may be regarded as an ethical dative, anticipating the distincter túbhyam 'for thee' that follows.

⌊This hymn begins with ā́ naya; and, with its 38 vss., exceeds the norm by 18. The quoted Anukr. says aṣṭādaçā " "naya."⌋

⌊The twentieth prapāṭhaka ends here. As in the cases of the tenth and eighteenth (ending at v. 7 and viii. 5), the prapāṭhaka-division here fails to coincide with the anuvāka-division.⌋

6. Exalting the entertainment of guests.

[Brahman. — ṣaṭ paryāyāḥ. ātithyā uta vidyādevatyāḥ.]

This whole prose hymn is found in Pāipp. xvi., except a few verses, as noted below. It is not quoted by either Kāuç. or Vāit. In the Prāt., on the other hand, it has more than its fair share of notice. ⌊With regard to the paryāya-hymns in general, see pp. 471–2.⌋

Translated: Henry, 98, 137; Griffith, i. 448.

[Paryāya I. — saptadaçarcaḥ. 1. 3-p. gāyatrī; 2. 3-p. ārṣī gāyatrī; 3, 7. sāmnī triṣṭubh; 4, 9. ārcy anuṣṭubh; 5. āsurī gāyatrī; 6. 3-p. sāmnī jagatī; 8. yājuṣī triṣṭubh; 10. sāmnī bhurig bṛhatī; 11, 14–16. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 12. virāḍ gāyatrī; 13. sāmnī nicṛt pañkti; 17. 3-p. virāḍ bhurig gāyatrī.]

1. Whoever may know the obvious (pratyákṣa) bráhman, whose joints are the preparations (sambhārá), whose spine the verses (ṛ́c);

Ppp. reads, instead of our a, as follows: yo vā ekaṁ brahmā 'nuṣṭhā vidyāt sadya mahadvate, making an anuṣṭubh of the verse. The Anukr. is corrupt at this point, one ms. appearing to call the verse nāgī nāma tripād gāyatrī; one sees no reason why.

2. Whose hairs the chants (sā́man), [whose] heart the sacrificial formula (yájus) is called, [whose] litter (paristáraṇa) the oblation.

Ppp. reads chandāṅsi for sāmāni in a, and puts c before b. The unlingualized st of paristáraṇam is noted under Prāt. ii. 105. The 'obvious bráhman,' or 'bráhman in visible presence,' thus wondrously made up, is doubtless the guest, all attentions to whom the hymn proceeds to glorify by identifying them with sacred acts.

3. When in truth the lord of guests meets with his eyes the guests, he looks at a sacrificing to the gods.

Ppp. reads at the beginning yad atithipatiḥ preṣyate. The verse has one syllable too many for a regular sāmnī triṣṭubh; but the system of nomenclature affords no ⌊simple⌋ name for one of 23 syllables.

4. When he greets them, he enters upon consecration; when he offers (yāc) water, he brings forward the [sacrificial] waters.

Prá ṇayati is quoted as an example under Prāt. iii. 79. We have to read yā́cati apáḥ to make out the defined meter.

5. Just what waters are brought in at the sacrifice, those are the very ones.

Praṇīyánte also is quoted under Prāt. iii. 79.

6. When they fetch a gratification (tárpaṇa) — that is just the same as an animal for Agni-and-Soma that is bound [for sacrifice].

Ppp. adds after this verse yat khātam āharanti puroḍāçā eva te.

7. In that they prepare lodgings, they so prepare the seat (sádas) and oblation-holders (havirdhā́na).

8. In that they strew [a couch], that is a barhís.

Ppp. omits the second clause of vs. 7, and reads pari- for upa- in 8; it omits 9 here: see under 10, below.

9. In that they fetch a coverlet (? upariçayaná), thereby one gains possession of the heavenly (svargá) world.

Upariçayaná, lit. 'above-lying,' occurs only here; ⌊but cf. upariçaya, OB. iv. 296 c⌋. The minor Pet. Lex. renders it 'an elevated couch.' The verse lacks a syllable.

10. In that they fetch mattress and pillow, those are the enclosures (paridhí).

That is, the sticks laid about the altar-fire to shut it in. In this verse, the extra syllable is noted by the Anukr. Ppp. reads -barhaṇāni and paridhe 'va te; and it adds its version of 9: yat parṣeṇam (pariçayanam?) āharanti svar- etc.

11. In that they fetch ointment and unguent, that is sacrificial butter.

The pada-reading āñjana∘abhyañjaná is quoted under Prāt. iv. 42, as example of words that lose their own individual division in favor of separation from each other. Ppp. omits āñjana. The Anukr. reads 16 syllables, which may be obtained in more than one way (most probably -ranti āj-).

12. In that they fetch a morsel (khādá) before the serving-up (pariveṣá), that is the two sacrificial cakes.

Khādá is perhaps a special bit or bite, anticipatory of the proper meal. The verse is wanting in Ppp.

13. In that they call the food-maker (açanakṛ́t), they so call the maker of oblations.

Some of the mss. read haviḥkṛ́tam.

14. The grains of rice, of barley, that are scattered out — those are soma-shoots (aṅçú).

The Anukr. requires -yante aṅç- to be read, although the passage is quoted under Prāt. i. 69 as an example of the elision of initial a with the transfer of its nasalization to the eliding e. Ppp. reads at the end aṅçava eva te 'nūpyante.

15. The mortar and pestles — those are the pressing-stones.

The Anukr. expects us to read yā́ni ul-. Ppp. omits yāni and reads -musalam, which is easier; it also omits eva te at the end.

16. The sieve ⌊çū́rpa⌋ is the soma-strainer (pavítra); the chaff is the pomace (ṛjīṣá); the waters are those of pressing.

That is, ⌊the waters are⌋ those used in facilitating the pressing of the Soma. ⌊Is not çū́rpa rather 'winnowing-basket'?⌋ The 'pomace' is the refuse stalks from which the soma has been pressed. ⌊All of SPP's and of W's pada-mss. seem to agree in reading ṛjīṣā́ as fem.⌋ Ppp. reads rajīṣaḥ. It omits abhiṣavaṇīr āpaḥ here: but see vs. 17.

17. The spoon is the sacrificial spoon, the stirring-stick the spit (? nékṣaṇa), the kettles the wooden vessels, the drinking-vessels those of Vāyu, this [earth] itself the black antelope's skin.

Ppp. reads -kalaças kumbhīm eva kṛṣṇājinaṁ vāyavyāni pātrāṇi; and it also has abhiṣavaṇīr āpaḥ in this verse, after āyavanam, instead of in vs. 16. The Anukr. defines the verse as if it were metrical, and intends us to read it as 10 + 16 + 8 = 34 syllables.

[Paryāya II. — trayodaça. 18. virāṭ purastādbṛhatī; 19, 29. sāmnī triṣṭubh; 20. āsury anuṣṭubh; 21. sāmny uṣṇih; 22, 28. sāmnī bṛhatī (28. bhurij)*; 23. ārcy anuṣṭubh; 24. 3-p. svarāḍ anuṣṭubh; 25. āsurī gāyatrī;† 26. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 27. 3-p. ārcī triṣṭubh; 30. 3-p. ārcī pañkti.] *⌊Berlin ms.: 5-p. virāṭ purastādbṛhatī.⌋ †⌊Berlin ms.: sāmny anuṣṭubh.⌋

18. The lord of guests verily makes for himself a sacrificer's brā́hmaṇa in that he looks at the [portions] to be partaken of, saying "is this larger, or this?"

Several of the mss. (O.R.D.) accent at the end bhū́yā́s (D. bhū́yā́ḥ 3), which is the far preferable reading; bhū́yās (read by I.) could be borne, since in RV. and AV. the usage does not seem yet established that the protracted final syllable is acute, in addition to whatever accent the word may have on other syllables ⌊Skt. Gram. § 78⌋; but bhūyā́s, as our edition reads, in accordance with nearly all the mss. compared up to the time of its publication, is nothing but a blunder. The protracted words are quoted in Prāt. i. 105. The verse counts naturally 18 + 8 + 8 = 34 syllables (the second and third pādas being really metrical). ⌊Scan rather 10 + 8 + 8 + 8 with the Anukr.⌋ Ppp. reads kṛṇute and avekṣata.

19. In that he says "take up the larger one," he thereby makes his breath longer (várṣīyāṅs).

Ppp. has a quite different text: yad āha bhūyo 'ddhara te prajāṁ cāi 'va paçūṅç ca vardhayate . . . (?) prāṇaṁ kṛṇute : yat saṁpṛchati kāmam eva tenā 'va rundhe : kāmo ha pṛṣṭo yājāti : yad udakam upasiñcaty apa eva tenā 'va rundhe. ⌊Then follows 20.⌋

20. [In that] he presents [it], he brings libations near.

21. Of them, brought near, the guest makes libations in himself; —

22. With his hand as sacrificial spoon, at his breath as stake, with the sound of swallowing as utterance of váṣaṭ.

'The sound of swallowing,' lit. the sound sruk. Ppp. reads in 21 ātmani j- for ātmán j- and has in 22 çulkāreṇa vaṣaṭkāreṇa srucā hastena.

23. These same guests, both loved (priyá) and unloved, [as] priests (ṛtvíj), make [one] go to the heavenly world.

This verse is wanting here in Ppp.; but it is inserted below, just before our vs. 49 ⌊and without variant except cārtvijas, which may be a slip of Roth's pen for cartvijas⌋.

24. He who, knowing thus, shall partake, not hating, he shall not partake the food of one hating, not of one that is doubted, nor of one doubting (?).

We must emend at the end either to mīmāṅsamānasya or to mīmāṅsyámānasya; the translation assumes the former. Bp.[1] reads vidyā́t for vidvā́n, and it would be a welcome improvement; the same reads the first time açnīyā́t, which seems necessary if vidvā́n and not vidyā́t is read, and which is implied in the translation. Ppp. has instead tasmān na dviṣann adyān na dviṣato 'nnam adyān na mīm-. The two mss. of the Anukr. describe the verse differently but equivalently, both requiring 34 syllables (which implies restoration of 'nnam to ánnam).

25. Verily every such one has his sin devoured, whose food they partake of.

26. Verily every such one has his sin undevoured whose food they partake not of.

'Devoured,' doubtless 'destroyed, removed' by the eating of the guests. Ppp. reads for vs. 26 sarvā upaço jagdhapāpmānaṁ yasyā 'nnam açnāti. One of the Anukr. mss. (but doubtless by a misreading ⌊?⌋) calls 25 as well as 26 a sāmny anuṣṭubh ⌊16 syllables⌋. ⌊Vss. 25 and 26 have each 15 (āsurī gāyatrī).⌋ Read in 25 jagdhá- (an accent-sign slipped out).

27. Verily he who presents [the food] hath always his pressing-stones harnessed, his cleanser wet, his sacrifice extended, his ceremony of offering assumed.

Ppp. reads sutasomas instead of yuktagrāvā, and puts vitatādhvaras as last of the four epithets; it also sets the whole paragraph after our 28.

28. To Prajāpati, verily, is his offering extended who presents.

29. He who presents verily strides Prajāpati's strides after [him].

This verse is wanting in Ppp.

30. [The fire] that is the guests', that is the fire of libations (āhavanī́ya); the one in the dwelling (véçman), that is the householder's fire (gā́rhapatya); the one in which they cook, that is the southern fire (dakṣiṇāgní).

Ppp. reads sā "havanīyo yo 'nnakaraṇasya ⌊intending -karaṇas sa?⌋ dakṣiṇāgnir yo veç- sa gār-. The metrical definition of the Anukr. requires us to restore at the beginning yó átith-.

31. Verily both what is sacrificed and what is bestowed of the houses doth he partake of who partakes before a guest.

That is, doubtless, 'doth he eat up, devour, destroy.' Ppp. omits gṛhāṇām, and puts next vss. 34 and 33, omitting 35 and 39 ⌊and 32 and 36 also⌋. The Anukr. describes the paragraphs as if they were metrical, and defines them as if the text read pū́rvo átither.

32. Verily both the milk and the sap of the houses doth he etc. etc.

33. Verily both the refreshment and the fatness of the houses doth he etc. etc.

Ppp. reads payas instead of sphātim.

34. Verily both the progeny and the cattle of the houses doth he etc. etc.

35. Verily both the fame and the glory of the houses doth he etc. etc.

36. Verily both the fortune (çrī́) and the alliance (?saṁvíd) of the houses doth he etc. etc.

The Pet. Lexx. interpret saṁvid as 'possessions.'

37. He verily is a guest, namely (yát) one versed in sacred learning (çrótriya); before him one should not partake.

The meaning intended ought to be that a guest is the equivalent of such a sage; but the literal sense is as translated. The verse lacks one syllable (unless we read ná açnīyāt) of being full measure.

38. When the guest hath partaken he should partake, in order to the soulfulness of the sacrifice, in order to the integrity of the sacrifice; that is the [proper] course.

The verse is an uṣṇih only as containing (if we resolve açitā́vati át-) 28 syllables (11 + 14 + 3). The pada-text reads açitá○vati. Ppp. has açitāvaty açnīyāt tad vrataṁ yajñasyā 'vichedāya yajñasya guptaye yajñasya sātmatvāya. ⌊Cf. Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 184: also Skt. Gram. § 960.⌋

39. That verily is specially sweet which comes from the cow (adhigavá), either milk (kṣīrá) or flesh; that he should not partake of.

That is, doubtless, he should leave it for his guest. The verse is wanting in Ppp. The so-called gāyatrī is to be thus divided: 7 + 11 + 6 = 24.

[Paryāya IV. — daçakaḥ. a of 40–43. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; a of 44. bhurij; b of 40–43. 3-p. gāyatrī; b of 44. 4-p. prastārapañkti.]

40. He who, thus knowing, pouring out milk, presents [it] — as much as, having sacrificed with a very successful agniṣṭomá, one gets possession of, of so much thereby does he get possession.

The mss. are divided between reckoning ten verses (with the Anukr. ⌊cf. the quotations etc. at the end of the hymn⌋) in this section, or only five, with two parts to each; the latter method was adopted in our edition as the better. The second part in the first five verses, though doubtless meant only as prose, divides into three subdivisions of eight syllables each, like a real gāyatrī. Ppp. begins all the verses with yat, instead of sa ya evaṁ vidvān, and reads in 40 b yā. ag. saprṣṭhene 'ṣṭvā 'varundhe.

41. He who, thus knowing, pouring out butter (sarpís), presents [it] — as much as, having sacrificed with a very successful atirātrá, one gets etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b āhnena samṛddhena for atirātreṇa.

42. He who, thus knowing, pouring out honey, offers [it] — as much as, having sacrificed with a very successful session-sitting, one gets etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b rātreṇa samṛddhena. The Anukr. expects, of course, the resolution mádhu up-.

vidvā́n and not vidyā́t is read, and which is implied in the translation. Ppp. has instead tasmān na dviṣann adyān na dviṣato 'nnam adyān na mīm-. The two mss. of the Anukr. describe the verse differently but equivalently, both requiring 34 syllables (which implies restoration of 'nnam to ánnam).

55. He ⌊the guest?⌋, being invited (úpahūta), feeds (bhakṣay-) on the earth; in him ⌊locative⌋, invited ⌊nominative⌋, [he ⌊the host?⌋ feeds on] what of every form [there is] on the earth.

⌊Whitney's first "on" is intended as a rendering of the locative relation of "earth"; his second "on" goes with "feeds." He has tried to indicate this by putting the first after the parenthesis and the second within the brackets. The inherent ambiguity of the English combination is such that I do not know how to remove it for the non-Sanskritist save by an express statement.⌋

The sense of this and the following verses is very obscure; it is here translated as if the guest were the subject of the first bhakṣayati, and the entertainer (in recompense for the entertainment given) of the second ⌊bhakṣayati (supplied)⌋. Ppp. adds pṛthivyāṁ tat pṛthivyām ā bhāti svargo loko bhavati ya evaṁ veda. Only vs. 56 has the full number of syllables (27) belonging to an ārcī bṛhatī; 55, 58, 59 have only 26 syllables (a number for which the system affords no separate name), and 57 has only 24.

56. He, being invited, feeds in the atmosphere; in him, invited, [he feeds on] what of every form [there is] in the atmosphere.

Ppp. adds antarikṣe patanty antarikṣā "bhāti ⌊svargo etc.⌋.

57. He, being invited, feeds in the sky (dív); in him, invited, [he feeds on] what of every form [there is] in the sky.

Ppp. adds divi tapati divy ā bhāti ⌊svargo etc.⌋.

58. He, being invited, feeds among the gods; in him, invited, [he feeds on] what of every form [there is] among the gods.

Ppp. adds deveṣu patati ⌊intending tapati?⌋ deveṣu bhāti ⌊svargo etc.⌋.

59. He, being invited, feeds in the worlds; in him, invited, [he feeds on] what of every form [there is] in the worlds.

Ppp. adds lokeṣu patati lokeṣu bhāti ⌊svargo loko bhavati ya evaṁ veda⌋.

60. He, whoever invited, —

61. Obtains this world, obtains yon [world].

The translation implies emendation in 60 to úpahūta-upahūtaḥ (as repeated word); it seems impossible to give the verse a meaning as it stands. Vss. 60–62 are wanting in Ppp. The metrical definition of 61 demands the resolution -ti amúm.

62. Worlds rich in light conquereth he who knoweth thus.

⌊The quotations from the Old Anukr. for the six paryāyas may here be given together: I. yo vidyāyāṁ daça sapta ca pūrvaḥ syāt; II. dvitīyaḥ syāt trayodaça; III. tṛtīyo navako dṛṣṭaḥ; IV. and V. tasmād dvāu daçakāu parāu; VI. ṣaṣṭhaṁ tu caturdaçakam āhuḥ. — Cf. 1. Prajāpati and the most exalted one are his two horns, Indra his head, Agni his forehead, Yama his neck-joint.

The copula and the possessive, wherever read, are supplied in the translation. Ppp. omits yamaḥ kṛkāṭam. The verse has only 26 syllables (instead of 27).

2. King Soma his brain, the sky his upper jaw, the earth his lower jaw.

Ppp. inserts, after mastiṣkas, satyaṁ cakṣur ṛtaṁ çrotre prāṇāpānāu nāmivate, and reads adharā for -rahanuḥ, adding after it agnir āsyaṁ. We are required to resolve pṛthivī adh-.

Váha is properly the "carrying" part, that on which the yoke rests. The Revatīs and Kṛttikās, two asterisms, in Pisces and Taurus respectively; their connection with the parts to which they are assigned is, as in nearly all the other cases in this hymn, of the most purely imaginary and meaningless kind. Ppp. has only as far as dantā́ṣ, following it with pavamānaṣ prāṇaḥ. Read in our text grīvā́ḥ (visarga-sign omitted). The pada-text has kṛ́ttikāḥ, and some of the mss., as usual, retain the ḥ before the following sk. The verse has but 23 syllables (unless we analyze jihu-ā́).

4. Vāyu his all (víçvam), the heavenly world his kṛṣṇadrá, the whirlwind (?niveṣyà) his separator (?vidhā́raṇī).

The words here in part (and in the last clause the distinction of subject and predicate) are wholly obscure. The pada-text divides kṛṣṇa॰drám ('black-runner'?). Many of the mss. (E.O.D.R.T.K.) accent niveṣyáḥ. Ppp. reads viçvaṁ vāyuṣ kaṇṭhas svargo lokaṣ kṛṣṇadra vyadriṇī vivaçvaḥ; and then it adds the omitted part of our vs. 3 except vahaḥ at the end.

5. The falcon his breast (kroḍá), the atmosphere his belly (?pājasyà), Brihaspati his hump, the bṛhatī́s his vertebræ.

The sense of bṛhatī here is doubtful. Ppp. reads pājasyaṁ and inserts our vs. 7 after it ⌊continuing with bṛhasp-⌋. The required number of 24 syllables is made out by reading kroḍó ant- and pājast-am.

6. The spouses of the gods his side-bones (pṛṣṭí), the attendants (upasád) his ribs (párçu).

The distinction between pṛṣṭí and párçu is not clear.

7. Both Mitra and Varuṇa his (two) shoulders (áṅsa), both Tvashṭar and Aryaman his (two) shanks (doṣán), the great god his fore-legs.

By Ppp. the verse is inserted in our vs. 5, as there noted. The verse has 23 syllables, but is not 'ant-waisted,' as it divides 8 + 9 + 6.

8. Indrāṇī his buttock, Vāyu his tail (púcha), the purifying [soma] his whisk (vā́lās).

Some of the mss. (Bp.² s.m.E.I.O.D.R.T.Kp.) read bā́lāḥ, which is preferable, since all the other passages have it. Ppp. omits, making our vs. 9 follow our 6.

9. Both the Brahman-caste (bráhman) and the Kshatriya-caste (kṣatrá) his (two) hips, force his (two) thighs.

10. Both Dhātar and Savitar his (two) knee-joints (aṣṭhīvánt), the Gandharvas his calves (jáṅghā), the Apsarases his dew-claws (kúṣṭhikā), Aditi his hoofs.

Ppp. combines gandharvā 'ps-. The so-called purauṣṇih divides 10 + 12 + 5 = 27 syllables.

11. Thought (cétas) his heart, wisdom his liver, ceremony (vratá) his purītát.

12. Hunger his paunch, cheer (írā) his rectum (?vaniṣṭhú), the mountains his plāçís.

Ppp. reads at the end prāça, for plāçayaḥ, and adds next vss. 16, 17.

13. Anger his kidneys, fury his testicles, progeny his virile member.

The verse follows our vs. 17 in Ppp.

14. The stream (nadī́) his birth-giver (?sūtrī́), the lords of rain his teats, thunder his udder.

Ppp. prefixes samudro vastir, and puts varṣasya patayas stanās after ūdhas, then adding 15 without interpunction.

Ppp. reads carma oṣadhayo romāṇi, and follows with our vs. 18.

16. The god-folks his intestines, human beings his entrails, eaters (?atrá) his belly (udára).

Ppp. reads manuṣyā "ntrāṇy ātrā ud-, putting the verse after our 12. In order to make out 18 syllables, we have to resolve -ṣt-ā āntrā́ṇi at-.

17. The demons his blood, the other-folks the contents of his bowels.

Ppp. inverts the order of the two clauses, and reads ūvadhyam.

18. The cloud his fat, the conclusion (?nidhána) his marrow.

In Ppp. this verse follows our 15, and there is added bhūtyāṣ prajāyāṣ paçūnāṁ bhavati ya evaṁ veda.

19. [He is] Agni when sitting, the two Açvins when arisen;

20. Indra when standing eastward, Yama when standing southward;

21. Dhātar when standing westward, Savitar when standing northward;

The metrical definition requires the resolution dhātā́ 'údañ. Read savitā́ (an accent-sign slipped out of place).

22. King Soma when having obtained grass;

The pada-mss. have the false accent pra○ā́ptaḥ (for prá○āptaḥ). ⌊Ppp. reads tṛṇān prāptas somo rājā.⌋

23. Mitra when looking, delight (ānandá) when turned this way;

Ppp. unites this verse with the preceding, and inverts the order of the two clauses of this verse, reading rājā "nṛtā "nandaḥ īkṣamāṇo mitrāvaruṇo.

24. Belonging to all the gods when being yoked, Prajāpati when yoked, everything (sárvam) when released.

Ppp. reads vāiçvānaras instead of vāiçvadevas.

25. That verily is all-formed, of every form, of kine-form.

Ppp. reads vorūpam for viçvárūpam; ⌊it seems to omit sarvarūpaṁ gorūpam⌋.

26. Cattle all-formed, of every form come unto (upa-sthā) him who knoweth thus.

Ppp. reads upāi 'naṁ rūpaṁṇvataṣ paçavaḥ ⌊intending rūpavantaṣ⌋.

⌊The quoted Anukr. says ṣaḍviñço brāhmaṇo gavaḥ. The avasānarcas are summed up as 26.⌋

8. Against various diseases.

[Bhṛgvañgiras.—dvāviñçakam. ⌊anena⌋ sarvaçīrṣāmayādyāmayam ⌊apākarot⌋. ānuṣṭubham: 12. anuṣṭubgarbhā kakummatī 4-p. uṣṇih; 15. virāḍ anuṣṭubh; 21. virāṭ pathyābṛhatī; 22. pathyāpañkti.]

Found also (except vs. 4) in Pāipp. xvi. Not noticed in Vāit., but quoted (vs. 1) in Kāuç. 32. 18, in a remedial ceremony. ⌊The last two verses are specified (32. 19) as used "with worship of the sun."⌋.

Translated: Zimmer, p. 378; Henry, 105, 141; Griffith, i. 455; Bloomfield, 45, 600.

1. Headache, head-ailment, earache, anæmia (?vilohitá), every head-disease of thine, do we expel out [of thee] by incantation (nir-mantray-).

Ppp. reads in a çīrṣaktyaṁ, and in b tṛtīyakam for vilohitam. ⌊For çīrṣaktí, see references under i. 12. 3.⌋

2. From thy (two) ears, from thy káñkūṣas, the earache, the visálpaka, every head-disease etc. etc.

As to visalpakam, instead of the visalyakam of the edition, see under vi. 127. 1. For the obscure kañkūṣa Ppp. has kaṅkukha, and for b it reads çuktivalçaṁ vilohitam.

3. For reason of which the yákṣma removes from ears, from mouth — every head-disease etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b nāsatā "syata ⌊intending -tas -tas⌋.

4. Whatever one makes a man dumb (?pramóta), makes [him] blind — every head-disease etc. etc.

'Dumb' for pramóta is Zimmer's conjecture; the word is wholly obscure, and form, accent, and meter make it suspicious; one is tempted to conjecture prámohitam; but muh with prefix pra is not a Vedic combination. The Anukr. takes no notice of the defective pāda.

5. Limb-splitting, limb-wasting, and visálpaka of all the limbs — every head-disease etc. etc.

Ppp. reads instead, for a, b, çīrṣarogam añgarogaṁ viçvāñgīnaṁ viçalyakam. ⌊As to visálp-, see under vi. 127. 1.⌋ With a is to be compared v. 30. 9 a.

6. Of whom the fearful aspect makes a man tremble — the takmán of every autumn we expel out [of thee] by incantation.

Ppp. reads pāuruṣam in b, and, for c, d, takmānaṁ çītaṁ rūraṁ ca taṁ tve nir man-: cf. v. 22. 10, 13.

7. The yákṣma that creeps along the thighs, that goes also to the groins, from thy limbs within we expel etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in c balāsam for yakṣmaṁ te ⌊cf. our 8 c and under 9⌋.

8. If it is born out of desire, of aversion, of the heart — the balása from thy heart, thy limbs we expel etc. etc.

9. Yellowness from thy limbs, apvā́ from thy belly within, the yákṣma-maker from thy self within we expel etc. etc.

The pada-text reads in c yakṣmaḥ°dhā́m. The Prāt. takes no notice of the irregular form of the first member of the compound, as it does, superfluously (ii. 56), of the contrary treatment of çepas in çepa°harṣaṇīm. In Ppp. our third pāda becomes the second, and for third we have nearly our 7 c: yakṣmaṁ te sarvam añgebhyo.

10. Let the balása become ash, let it become sickening urine; the poison of all yákṣmas have I exorcised from thee.

11. Forth at the orifice let it run out, the káhābāha, from thy belly; the poison of all etc. etc.

⌊Literally 'to the orifice'; Henry "vers le trou," i.e. "par l'anus."⌋ The Pet. Lexx. plausibly conjecture kāhābāha to be an imitative term for rumbling in the bowels; it may also possibly be understood as used adverbially, like bāl in i. 3. Ppp. has a quite different reading for b: kahāvalaṁ tvaṅdarā.

12. Out of thy belly, lung, navel, heart, the poison of all etc. etc.

Ppp. rectifies the meter of a by inserting pari before klomnas, and makes c, d agree with our 9 c, d. The Anukr. brings out an uṣṇih (28 syll.) by unnaturally refusing to make the resolutions nābhi-ās and tu-at ⌊and scanning as 6 + 7 : 8 + 7⌋.

13. They that break apart the crown, rushers against the head (mūrdhán) — not injuring, free from disease, let them run out, out at the orifice.

The 'they' in this and the following verses (13–18) is fem. The Pet. Lexx. take arṣaṇī in b as an independent noun (it is found only here), and conjecture it to mean 'pricking pains.'

14. They that rush unto the heart, that stretch along the vertebræ — not injuring etc. etc.

Prāt. iii. 47 prescribes the form uparṣánti (instead of upārṣánti: p. upa◦ṛṣánti) in this and the two following verses. Ppp. reads every time upadiçanti.

15. They that rush unto the two sides, that stab (nikṣ) along the ribs — not injuring etc. etc.

The Anukr. intends pārçvé to be read unresolved.

16. They that rush on crosswise, rushers in thy belly (vakṣáṇā) — not injuring etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b vakṣaṇābhyaḥ, and omits the following te.

17. They that creep along the intestines, and confound the entrails — not injuring etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b yāpayanti for mohayanti. ⌊Roth most ingeniously suggests that the Ppp. reading may mean āntrā ni-y-āmayanti. Or is yāpayanti to be taken in a sense quite like our English 'cause (the bowels) to move,' i.e. 'produce diarrhœa'?⌋

18. They that suck out the marrow, and break apart the joints — not injuring etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in a anusarpanti for nirdhayanti. We are to resolve maj-jñ-o to fill out the measure.

19. They that intoxicate (maday-) the limbs, the yákṣmas, thy gripers — the poison of all yákṣmas have I exorcised from thee.

Ppp. reads in b ropaṇā saha. Some of our mss. (P.M.O.p.m.) read yé 'ñgāni.

20. Of the visalpá, of the vidradhá, or of the vātīkārá, of the alají — the poison etc. etc.

Ppp. again reads viçalyasya ⌊cf. under vi. 127. 1⌋; also, in b, vātīkālasya.

21. Forth from thy feet, knees, hips, buttock, spine, nape the pangs, from thy head the disease have I made disappear.

Ppp. reads, after te, gulphābhyāṁ jañghābhyāṁ jānubhyām ūrubhyāṁ çro. p. bh.; it reads ānūkyāt in c, and inserts before çīrṣṇas, grīvābhyas skandhebhyas. It is apparently the intrusion of arṣaṇīs that spoils the meter in our c.

22. Together the bones (kapā́la) of thy head, and the discussor (vidhú) of thy heart — arising, O Āditya, thou with thy rays hast made disappear the disease of the head, hast pacified the limb-splitter.

The first two pādas seem independent; an unfinished construction. The pada-text reads vi°dhúḥ in b, as if it recognized in the word the root dhū + vi; this is not implausible, and the translation follows it (the simple "beat" of the Pet. Lexx. seems quite unacceptable; it might be 'palpitation'). But Ppp. reads instead vidus, and so do a part of our mss., namely, W.O.s.m.D.Kp. ⌊W. interlines a query over "discussor," which word he coins and uses in the sense 'shaker asunder.' "Discuss" in this sense is "obsolete except in surgical use."⌋ Ppp. further has, for our c etc.: udyat sūryādityo an̄gāni roma nakhāni sarvāṇi sadanāni nīnaçat.

9. Mystic.

[Brahman. — dvāvin̄çakam. vāmīyam ādityadevatyam adhyātmakaram. trāiṣṭubham: 12, 14, 16, 18. jagatī.]

This hymn and the following (except a few verses of the latter) are one Rig-Veda hymn, namely, i. 164, and but a small part of them occur in any other Vedic text. Both are found in Pāipp. xvi., in somewhat changed verse-order, as will be noted under the different verses below. Vāit. takes no notice of this hymn; in Kāuç. it (vs. 1) is quoted in 18. 25, with various others, in a ceremony for prosperity; and the gaṇamālā (see note to Kāuç. 18. 25) reckons it as belonging to the salila gaṇa.

Translated: as RV. hymn, by Ludwig, no. 951; and Grassmann, ii. p. 456–460; also by M. Haug, under the title, Vedische Räthselfragen und Räthselsprüche, Sb. der philos.-philol. Classe der k. bairischen Ak. der Wiss., Bd. II., Heft 3, für 1875, München, 1876 (the essay, says Whitney, "casts extremely little light upon its labored obscurities"); further, with an elaborate comment touching the significance of its philosophic content, by Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 105–119; parts also by Muir, v. (see Index, p. 484), and Hillebrandt, Ved. Mythol., i. (see Index, p. 542); and under the title, Zwei Sprüche über Leib und Seele, ZDMG. xlvi. 759 f., Roth explains two verses answering to our ix. 10. 8 and 16. Under the title, Das Räthsel vom Jahre, ZDMG. xlviii. 353, E. Windisch discusses the RV. verse answering to our vs. 12.

Translated, moreover, as AV. hymn, by Henry, 107, 143; Griffith, i. 458. The critical remarks of Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 180–183, may also be consulted. — Further, von Schroeder, Der Rigveda bei den Kaṭhas, WZKM. xii. 282, reports variants for certain vss. of the RV. hymn which correspond to our vss. ix. 9. 9, 12, 17, 22 and ix. 10. 16. — Finally, A. Wünsche's essay, Das Rätsel vom Jahr und seinen Zeitabschnitten in der Weltlitteratur, may be cited in this connection; it is found in Zeitschrift für vergl. Litteraturgeschichte, N.F., ix. 425–456.

1. Of this pleasant (vāmá) hoary invoker — of him the brother is the midmost stone (? áçna); his third brother [is] ghee-backed; there I saw the lord of the people who hath seven sons.

The three brothers are explained as the three forms of Agni, in heaven, in the atmosphere (lightning), and on earth (sacrificial fire); the 'seven sons' are most probably his many flames. ⌊The collocation of madhyamó with bhrā́tā would seem more natural, considering the phrase tṛ́tīyo bhrā́tā.⌋

2. Seven harness (yuj) a one-wheeled chariot; one horse, having seven names, draws (vah) [it]; of three naves [is] the wheel, unwasting, unassailed, whereon stand all these existences.

Doubtless the sun. The verse is repeated as xiii. 3. 18. It occurs also in TA. iii. 11. 8, with anarvāṁ yene ’mā v. bhuvanāni t. in c, d (the accent of the verse is too corrupt to heed).

3. The seven that stand on this chariot — seven horses draw it, seven-wheeled; seven sisters shout at [it] together, where are set down the seven names of the kine.

RV. reads navante in c, and nā́ma in d.

4. Who saw it first in process of birth, as the boneless one bears (bhṛ) him that has bones? where forsooth the earth's life (ásu), blood, soul? who shall go to ask that of him who knows?

‘Bears,’ not in the sense of ‘gives birth to,’ but of ‘carries’ or ‘supports’ or the like.

5. Let him who truly knows ⌊here⌋ tell (brū) the set-down track of this pleasant bird; the kine extract (duh) milk from his head; clothing themselves in a wrap, they have drunk water with the foot.

Explained as relating to the clouds and the sun. The verse is vs. 7 in RV., and also in Ppp.; the latter reads çīrṣṇā in c.

6. Simple, not discerning (vi-jñā) with the mind, I ask about the thus set-down tracks of the gods; over the yearling (? baṣkáya) calf have the poets stretched out seven lines (tántu) for weaving.

7. I, not understanding (cit), ask here the understanding poets, I unknowing (vid), them that know; he who propped asunder these six spaces (rájas), in the form of the goat (? ajá) — was that also alone?

The sense of the last pāda is utterly obscure, and the version given only tentative; ajá is perhaps here really the ‘unborn one,’ as the translators render it. RV. reads in a ácikitvāñ cik-, and, in b, vidmáne, for which our vidvánas is apparently a mere corruption.

8. The mother portioned the father in righteousness, for with meditation (dhītí), with mind, came together in the beginning she, repugnant, womb-sapped, pierced; paying homage, verily, they went unto encouragement.

The version is in part only mechanical. Ppp. combines ṛtā ’’babh- in a, and reads jajñe at end of b.

9. The mother was yoked to the pole of the sacrificial gift; the embryo stood among the wiles (? vṛjanī́); the calf bleated, looked after the cow of all forms, in the three distances (yójana).

10. The one, bearing three mothers [and] three fathers, stood upright; verily they do not exhaust him; on the back of yon sky the all-knowing ones talk a speech not found by all.

RV. reads glāpayanti at end of b ⌊and the translation follows that reading⌋, and, for d, viçvavídaṁ vā́cam ávíçvaminvām. The pada-text reads glapayanta; Prāt. iv. 93 notes the case. Ppp. agrees with RV. in glāpayanti and viçvavidam.

11. On the five-spoked circumvolving wheel on which stood all existences — its axle, much-burdened, is not heated; even from of old it is not severed with the nave.

RV. and Ppp. count this verse as 13, our version inverting the order of 11–13. In b, RV. reads tásminn ā́ tasthur bh. v., and Ppp. samārohanti bh. v.; and RV. has çīryate for chidyate in d.

12. The five-footed father, of twelve shapes (-ā́kṛti), they call rich in ground (purīṣín) in the far (pára) half of the sky; then these others call [him] set (árpita) in the lower outlook that is seven-wheeled, six-spoked.

RV. and Ppp. have the easier and better reading vicakṣaṇám in c, and Ppp. reads before it upari. ⌊The Kaṭha reading also is úpari, WZKM. xii. 282.⌋ Read in b páre (an accent sign slipped out of place). ⌊See Roth, KZ. xxvi. 66, and Windisch as cited in the introduction; cf. also IFA. vi. 181, as noted above.⌋

13. The twelve-spoked wheel — for that is not to be worn out — revolves greatly about the sky of righteousness; there, O Agni, stood the sons, paired, seven hundred and twenty.

Here the 'twelve' and the 'seven hundred and twenty' are plainly the months, and the days and nights, of the year of 360 days. The verse, as noted above, is vs. 11 in RV. and Ppp. The more proper reading in b would be várvartti.

14. The unwasting wheel, with rim, rolls about; ten harnessed ones draw upon the outstretched one (fem.); the sun's eye goes surrounded with the welkin (rájas), in which stood all existences.

Ppp. has vrajanti for vahanti in b, and, for d yasminn ārpitā bhuvanāny ārpitā; RV. has tásminn ā́rpitā for our yásminn ātasthúḥ. The Anukr. calls the verse simply a jagatī, though only two of its pādas have 12 syllables.

15. Them, being women, they declared (ah) to me to be men; he who hath eyes may see, [but] the blind will not distinguish (vi-cit); the son that is a poet, he verily understood (ā-cit); whoever knows those things apart, he shall be [his] father's father.

RV. and Ppp. put this verse after our vs. 16. It is found also in TA. i. 11.4, with tā́ u in a, imā́s in c for īm ā́, and savitúḥ p- in d. Some of our mss. (P.s.m.O.K.T.) read pitúḥ p- in d; we had the phrase once before, at ii. 1.2, and the combination falls under Prāt. ii. 73. We might expect, in d, tā́ḥ, referring to strī́yaḥ, but the pada-texts have tā́, as neuter pl.

16. Of those born together the seventh they call sole-born; six, they say, are twins, god-born seers; the sacrifices (? iṣṭá) of them, distributed according to their abodes, quake in their station, being altered (vi-kṛ) in respect to form.

Iṣṭā́ni in c might equally mean 'things desired.' Sthātré in d is most probably loc. of -trá, since, if from sthātṛ́, we should expect instead the ablative. ⌊The vs. recurs at TA. i. 3. 1 with udyamā́s for íd yamā́s.⌋

17. Below the distant (pára), thus beyond the lower, bearing (bhṛ) her calf with her foot, the cow hath stood up; whitherwards, to what quarter (árdha) hath she forsooth gone away? where giveth she birth? for [it is] not in this herd.

The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in a; we may suppose pará enā́- to be combined to parā́t 'nā́-. ⌊The verse is repeated below as xiii. 1. 41. RV. ends with antáḥ for asmín. The Kaṭha variant párākāt for párāgāt (WZKM. xii. 282) shows an exchange of surd and sonant, the reverse of that noted at ii. 13. 3.⌋

18. Below the distant whoever knows his father, below the distant, thus beyond the lower — who, playing the poet, shall proclaim [him] here? from whence [is] heavenly mind produced?

RV. and Ppp. read, in a, b, yó asyā 'nuvéda pará enā́-, rectifying the meter and lightening the construction. Only the first two pādas have any "jagatī" character, and they are very irregular. But by giving this name the Anukr. shows that it reads our version; in RV. and Ppp. the verse is a pure triṣṭubh. Read in d kúto (for kṛ́to).

19. Them that are hitherward they call off-ward; them, again, that are off-ward they call hitherward; what things, O Soma, thou and Indra have done, those they draw, harnessed as it were with the pole of the welkin.

The verse is found also in JB. i. 279, with no various readings that are not evident corruptions. The 'them' of a, b is masc., probably the same with the 'they' of d (yuktā́ḥ, p.). Ppp. reads niyuktā instead of na yuktā.

20. Two eagles (suparṇá), joint companions, embrace the same tree; of them the one eats the sweet berry; the other looks on all the time, not partaking.

Ppp. reads in a suyujā. Here and in the next verse, as everywhere else, some of our mss. read piṣpalam. ⌊The vs. plays a rôle in the Upanishads: cf. Çvet. iv. 6; Muṇḍ. iii. 1. 1. Hillebrandt, Ved. Mythol., i. 466, 399, treats this and the following vss.⌋

21. On what tree the honey-eating eagles all settle and give birth — what they call the sweet berry in the top of it, that cannot he attain who knoweth not [his] father.

RV. has íd āhuḥ instead of yád āhúḥ in c, and so also Ppp. (but āhúṣ). In RV. this verse follows after our vs. 22. There is a redundant syllable in c of which the Anukr. takes no notice (and the pāda is also capable of being crowded together into eleven syllables).

22. Where the eagles, with counsel (vidátha), sound incessantly (ánimeṣam) unto the draught of amṛ́ta, — thus the shepherd of all existence, he the wise one entered there into me that am simple.

RV. reads bhāgám for bhakṣám in a. For enā́ in c, RV. has inás, and Ppp. yo no; ⌊Ppp's yo no seems to be an attempt to make sense out of the rare and probably unintelligible inó⌋. ⌊The Kaṭha variant (WZKM. xii. 282) is ánimiṣam.⌋

⌊The quoted Anukr. says navadaçe ca.⌋

10. Mystic.

[Brahman. — aṣṭāviṅçakam. govirāḍadhyātmadāivatyam (23. māitrāvaruṇī). trāiṣṭubham : 1, 7, 14, 17, 18. jagatī ; 21. 5-p. atiçakvarī ; 24. 4-p. puraskṛtir bhurig atijagatī ; 2, 26, 27. bhurij.]

This hymn is in RV. a continuation of the preceding; but our vss. 9 and 23 are not found in the RV. with the rest (9 is RV. x. 55. 5 and 23 is RV. i. 152. 3); ⌊while of 19, only d is found in RV., making, with the odd fifth pāda of our vs. 21, the first half of RV. i. 164. 42 (42 a, b = 21 e + 19 d); and our 24 (prose) does not occur in the RV. at all⌋. The first 23 verses are found also in Pāipp. xvi. The hymn is not quoted in Kāuç. (except as vs. 20 is also vii. 73. 11); but a few verses (9, 13, 14) are cited in Vāit.

Translated: as AV. hymn, by Henry, 110, 150; Griffith, i. 464. — For other translations etc. see the introduction to hymn 9.

1. That the gāyatrī́-verse is set (ā-dhā) in the gāyatrī́-verse, or that they fashioned the triṣṭúbh-verse out of the triṣṭúbh-verse, or that the jágatī step is set in the jágatī (jágat) — whoever know that, they have attained immortality.

RV. ⌊vs. 23⌋ and Ppp. read in b trāiṣṭubhād vā trāiṣṭubhaṁ.

2. By the gāyatrī́-verse he measures off the song (arká), by the song the chant (sā́man), by the triṣṭúbh-verse the hymn (vāká), by the hymn of two feet [or] of four feet the hymn; by the syllable they measure the seven tunes (vā́ṇi).

The words 'song,' 'hymn,' 'tune' are used rather loosely in rendering here.

3. By the jágatī he established (skabh) the river in the sky; in the rathaṁtará he beheld (pari-paç) the sun; they call the three kindlers (samídh) the gāyatrī́-verse's; it was superior to them by bulk, by greatness.

The translation of the last pāda is not without uncertainties; tátas is here understood as quasi-object of prá ririce. RV. ⌊vs. 25⌋ reads in a astabhāyat.

4. I invite that well-milking milch-cow; a skilful-handed milker also shall milk her; may the impeller impel us the best impulse; the hot drink is kindled about: that may he kindly proclaim.

We had this verse above as vii. 73. 7. The only variant in RV. ⌊vs. 26⌋ is the better vocam at the end. ⌊Oldenberg discusses verses 4–7, IFA. vi. 182.⌋

This verse, again, is vii. 73. 8, above, excepting that the latter reads nyā́gan at end of b. Our pada-text has here abhi∘ā́gāt, while that of RV. ⌊vs. 27⌋ gives abhí : ā́ : agāt; both yield the same saṁhitā-reading.

6. The cow lowed toward the winking calf; she uttered hiṅg at [its] head, in order to lowing; bellowing the mouth (? sṛ́kvan) unto the hot drink, she lows a lowing, she abounds with milk.

Compare 1. 8, above; the second line is nearly identical in the two verses. It is quite differently rendered by the translators at one and another point, being very obscure. For abhí in a, RV. reads ánu, Ppp. apa.

7. This one here twangs, by whom the cow is surrounded; she lows a lowing, being set (çritá) on the sparkler (dhvasáni); since she put down mortals by her thoughts (cítti), becoming the lightning, she threw (ūh) back the wrap.

Both RV. ⌊vs. 29⌋ and Ppp. read mártyam in c.

8. Breathing lies the swift moving thing, living, stirring, fixed, in the midst of the abodes (pastyā̀); the living one moves at the will (? svadhā́bhis) of the dead one; the immortal one [is] of like source with the mortal.

The verse is excessively obscure, and Hillebrandt's translation of the second half, and reference to the moon (Ved. Mythol., pp. 336, 498), very forced and implausible. The verse lacks a syllable in a (and the pada-text sets its mark of pāda-division after éjat); perhaps we are to resolve -ga-ātu. Ppp. puts the verse after our vs. 9. ⌊RV., vs. 30, shows no variant. Roth's most interesting interpretation (ZDMG. xlvi. 759) makes of the verse a riddle whose answer is "the body and the soul." He emends to ánanac in a. Böhtlingk, Berichte der sächsischen Gesell., 1893, xlv. 88, reviews Roth's interpretation.⌋

9. The shaker-apart (? vidhú) that runs on the back of the sea, being young, the hoary one swallowed; see thou the poesy of the heavenly one with greatness; today he died, yesterday he received breath (sam-an).

This verse is RV. x. 55. 5; also SV. i. 325 etc.; TA. iv. 20. 1; MS. iv. 9. 12. All alike read sámane bahūnā́m for salilásya pṛṣṭhé (MS., except in its pada-text, has other slight differences which are palpable blunders). Vidhú is (as at 8. 22, above) divided in pada-text vi∘dhú. It doubtless designates here the moon, however it may have won the right to do so. Ludwig and Hillebrandt (Ved. Mythol. i. 465) translate d 'today (he died yesterday) he has come to life'; but this is in the highest degree forced, and may be pronounced even inadmissible. Ppp. reads vidyudūdrāṇā at the beginning. ⌊See Kaṭha-hss., p. 82.⌋ The verse is quoted in Vāit. 40. 7; 41. 12.

10. He who made him knows not of him; [he is] verily out of sight now of him who saw him; he, enveloped within his mother's womb, with his much progeny, entered into perdition (nírṛti).

The translation follows the RV. reading, nírṛtim, in d, since the nom. -tis seems unconstruable. Both RV. ⌊vs. 32⌋ and Ppp. put the verse after our vs. 11, and the latter reads so 'sya in a. Haug interprets the lightning to be intended.

11. I saw the shepherd, not lying down, moving both hither and thither upon his roads; he, clothing himself in the collecting, he in the dispersing ones, rolls greatly on among existences.

Doubtless the sun. The verse ⌊RV. vs. 31⌋ is found a second time in RV. as x. 177. 3; and also at VS. xxxvii. 17; TA. iv. 7. 1; MS. iv. 9. 6; AA. ii. 1. 6^{6-10} — all accenting in a ánipadyamānam, which is alone acceptable. ⌊Our d recurs, with sá prefixed, at x. 2. 7 c. If we read varīvartti there, we ought also to do so here.⌋ ⌊Cf. Kaṭha-hss., p. 101.⌋

12. The heaven our father, generator, navel here; this great earth our connection, mother; the womb (yóni) within the (two) outstretched cups (camū́); here the father hath set (ā-dhā) the daughter's embryo.

'Navel,' i.e. 'central point, place of union.' RV. ⌊vs. 33⌋ reads me for nas in a and b.

13. I ask of thee the extreme (pára) end of the earth; I ask the seed of the male (vṛ́ṣan) horse; I ask the navel of all existence; I ask the highest (paramá) firmament (vyòman) of speech.

RV. ⌊vs. 34⌋ exchanges the place of b and c, and rectifies the meter by inserting another tvā before vṛ́ṣṇo, and reading pṛchā́mi yátra bhúvanasya nā́bhiḥ. Ppp. follows RV. in the former case, but in the latter has pṛchāmi tvāṁ bh. n.; it makes ⌊as between b and c⌋ the same inversion of order as RV.; and it begins d with vācaṣ pṛchāmi. The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregularity of our meter. The verse, with the following one, is found also in other texts: VS. xxiii. 61, 62; TS. vii. 4. 18^2; LÇS. ix. 10. 13, 14. VS. reads in both verses precisely as RV., and LÇS. differs from it only by having pṛchāmas instead of -mi four times in vs. 13. TS. has for 13 b pṛchā́mi tvā bhúvanasya nā́bhim. The two verses are quoted in Vāit. 37. 3.

14. This sacrificial hearth is the extreme end of the earth; this soma is the seed of the male horse; this sacrifice is the navel of all existence; this priest (brahmán) is the highest firmament of speech.

RV. ⌊vs. 35⌋ (also VS. LÇS.: see above) and Ppp. read for b, c: ayáṁ yajñó bhúv. nā́.: ayáṁ sómo etc. (our b). TS. has védim āhuḥ páram ántam pṛthivyā́ yajñám āhur bhúvanasya nā́bhim: sómam āhur vṛ́. áç. ré. brahmā́ 'vá vācáḥ etc. The Anukr. absurdly calls the verse a jagatī on account of the two redundant syllables in the AV. version of c.

15. I do not distinguish what this is that I am; I go secret, fastened together with mind; when the first-born of righteousness hath come to me, then indeed I attain a share of this speech.

Ppp. agrees with RV. ⌊vs. 37⌋ in putting this verse ⌊and the next⌋ after our vs. 17. The RV. pada-text has in c ā́ : ágan ⌊so Müller's five editions and Aufrecht's first: Aufrecht's second, ā́ : agan⌋; our ā○ágan is better. Ppp. reads balinā for manasā in b.

16. Offward, forward goes, seized by svadhā́, the immortal one, of like source with the mortal; the two, constantly going separate apart — the one they noted, the other they noted not.

Haug and Hillebrandt (Ved. Mythol., i. 336, note) both understand svadhā here as meaning the offering to the manes, but their conjectural interpretations of the verse are totally discordant. ⌊The vs. is RV. vs. 38 without variant. See the interpretations of Roth and of Böhtlingk as cited under vs. 8 above. — The Kaṭha variant (WZKM. xii. 282) is áprān̄ for ápān̄. — The vs. is found at AA. ii. 1. 8.⌋

17. Seven half-embryos, the seed of existence, stand in front (? pradíçā), in Vishṇu's distribution; they, by thoughts (dhītí), by mind, they, inspired, surround on all sides the surrounders.

Or, 'being surrounders.' As noted above, the verse in RV. ⌊vs. 36⌋ and Ppp. stands before our vs. 15. Both 17 and 18 are defective as jagatīs. ⌊Cf. Oldenberg, IFA. vi. 184; also Henry, Actes du dixième Congrès intern. des Orientalistes, Section I, Inde, p. 45–50, "Cruelle énigme."⌋

18. In the syllable of the verse (ṛ́c) in the highest firmament, on which all the gods sat down: he who knoweth not that, what will he do with the verse? they who know that sit together yonder.

RV. ⌊vs. 39⌋ reads imé instead of amī́ in d. O. combines vidúṣ ṭé just before it. The verse is found also in TB. iii. 10. 9^{14} and TA. ii. 11. 1 — in both, with the RV. reading. Its pratīka occurs also in GB. i. 22. Read véda in c.

19. Shaping (kalpay-) with measure the step of the verse, they shaped by the half-verse all that stirs; the bráhman of three feet, many-formed, spread out (vi-sthā); by that do the four quarters live.

The comm. to the Prāt. (ii. 93) quotes ví taṣṭhe at end of c as an example of the s of sthā lingualized after ví even though the reduplication intervenes; and that establishes ví taṣṭhe as the true reading. The majority of the saṁhitā-mss. have it; but W.E.O. give caṣṭe; Ppp. also has parirūpaṁ vi caṣṭe. Only the fourth pāda is found in RV., being i. 164. 42 b (we have 42 a as our 21 e); the same occurs below as xi. 5. 12 d.

20. Mayest thou be well-portioned, feeding in excellent meadows; so also may we be well-portioned; eat thou grass, O inviolable one, at all times; drink clear water, moving hither.

21. The cow verily lowed, fashioning the seas; one-footed, two-footed [is] she, four-footed; having become eight-footed, nine-footed, thousand-syllabled, a series (pan̄tí) of existence; out from her flow apart the oceans.

The five pādas are vs. 41, and 42 a, of the RV. hymn; which, however, reads gāurī́s for gāúr íd in a, and paramé vyòman for bhúvanasya pan̄tíḥ in d. The RV. vs. 41 occurs also in TB. ii. 4. 6^{11} ⌊and it is there followed by the RV. vs. 42 entire⌋ and TA. i. 9. 4, with the RV. readings, excepting gāurī́ at the beginning ⌊and tásyām in TB. for tásyās⌋. Our pādas b–e, again, are repeated as xiii. 1. 42 below. The verse (12 + 12 : 12 + 11 + 11 = 58) lacks two syllables of being a proper atiçakvarī (60 syllables).

22. Black the descent, the yellow eagles, clothing themselves in waters, fly up to the sky; they have come hither from the seat of righteousness; then, forsooth, with ghee they deluged the earth.

The verse occurs also above as vi. 22. 1, and pādas a–c below in xiii. 3. 9. For parallel passages etc. see the note to vi. 22. 1. It is RV. i. 164. 47, the last verse of the RV. hymn that is included in the AV. text here (RV. vss. 43–46 are our 25–28 below), although of the remaining five RV. vss. all but one (51) are found in other parts of our text.

23. She that is footless goes first of them (fem.) that have feet: who understood (ā-cit) that of you, O Mitra and Varuṇa? the embryo brings (ā-bhṛ) the burden of her; she (?) fills (? pṛ) truth, protects (ni-pā) untruth.

The last pāda is especially obscure: he? or she? or it? and which root pṛ, 'fill' or 'pass'? The verse is RV. i. 152. 3, where we read tārīt instead of pāti at the end, and asya for asyās at end of c. Ppp. also has tārīt, but, instead of ā̦́ cid asyāḥ (or asya), it reads ād ṛtasya.

24. Virā́j [is] speech, virā́j earth, virā́j atmosphere, virā́j Prajāpati; virā́j became death, the over-king of the perfectibles (sādhyá); in his control are what was, what is to be; let him put in my control what was, what is to be.

⌊Prose.⌋ This verse, with all that follows it, is wanting in Ppp. The Anukr. reckons the whole first part to the pause as one pāda (20 syllables, a kṛti-pāda); the pada-text understands it as two, dividing after pṛthivī.

25. The dung-made smoke I saw from far, with the dividing one, thus beyond the lower; the heroes cooked a spotted ox (ukṣán); those were the first ordinances.

The construction and sense of b are very obscure. The verse is 43 of RV. i. 164, and the remaining three follow in order. ⌊Henry, Mém. de la Soc. de linguistique, ix. 247, cites the vs.⌋

26. Three hairy ones look out seasonably; in the (a?) year one of them shears itself; another looks upon all with might (çácībhis); of one is seen the rush, not the form.

The RV. version ⌊vs. 44⌋ has in c víçvam éko abhí caṣṭe; our abhicáṣṭe is a regular case of antithetical accent. The RV. pada-text does not divide saṁvatsare. Haug interprets the verse of the three forms of Agni; Hillebrandt (Ved. Mythol., i. p. 472), of the moon (!?), sun, and wind.

27. Speech [is] four measured out quarters (padá); those are known by Brahmans who are skilful; three, deposited in secret, they do not set in motion (ĩñgay-); a fourth of speech human beings speak.

This verse is found, without variant, in TB. (ii. 8. 8⁵) and ÇB. (iv. 1. 3¹⁷), as well as in RV. ⌊vs. 45⌋. Our Bp.²D.Kp. read ná : ĩñgayanti in c.

28. They call [him] Indra, Mitra, Varuṇa, Agni; likewise he [is] the heavenly winged eagle; what is one the sages (vípra) name (vad) variously; they call [him] Agni, Yama, Mātariçvan.

Book X.

⌊This tenth book is the third of the second grand division of the Atharvan collection. For a general statement as to the make-up of the books of this division, reference should again be made to page 471. The Old Anukramaṇī describes the length of hymns 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 10 by giving the overplus of each hymn over 30 verses. The assumed normal length in the case of book ix. seems to be 20 verses. The whole book has been translated by Victor Henry, Les livres X, XI, et XII de l'Atharva-véda traduits et commentés, Paris, 1896. The bhāṣya again is lacking. There are no paryāya-hymns in this book.⌋

⌊The anuvāka-division of the book (as noted above, page 472) is into five anuvākas of two hymns each. The "decad"-division likewise is as described on page 472. A tabular conspectus for this book also may be acceptable:

Hymns	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Verses	32	33	25	26	50	35	44	44	27	34
Decad-div.	10+10+12	10+10+13	10+10+5	10+10+6	5 tens	3 tens+5	3 tens+14	3 tens+14	10+10+7	10+10+14

Sum of verses, 350. The sum of "decad"-sūktas is 35. In this book, therefore, the average length of the "decad"-sūktas is precisely 10 verses.⌋

1. Against witchcraft and its practisers.

[Pratyan̄girasa.—dvātrin̄çat. kṛtyādūṣaṇadevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 1. mahābṛhatī; 2. virāṇ nāma gāyatrī; 9. pathyāpan̄kti; 12. pan̄kti; 13. urobṛhatī; 15. 4-p. virāḍ jagatī; 17, 20, 24. prastārapan̄kti (20. virāj); 16, 18. triṣṭubh; 19. 4-p. jagatī; 22. 1-av. 2-p. ārcy uṣṇih; 23. 3-p. bhurig viṣamā gāyatrī; 28. 3-p. gāyatrī; 29. madhyejyotiṣmatī jagatī; 32. dvyanuṣṭubgarbhā 5-p. atijagatī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. The hymn (vs. 1) is quoted in Kāuç. 39. 7, with several others, in a ceremony against witchcraft, and several of its verses or parts of verses elsewhere. The Vāit. uses only one half-verse (21 c, d).

1. She whom the adepts (cikitsú) prepare, all-formed, hand-made, like a bride at a wedding — let her go far off; we push her away.

'She,' because kṛtyā 'witchcraft' is feminine. The name, mahābṛhatī, given to the verse, is improperly applied, ⌊if we understand it as defined by RV. Prāt. xvi. 48: here is meant rather that defined as of three jāgata pādas (12 + 12 : 11) at Ind. Stud. viii. 243⌋.

2. Having a head, having a nose, having ears, put together, all-formed, by the witchcraft-maker — let her go far off; we push her away.

The addition of a ca at the end of a would rectify the meter, and justify the Anukr. The pada-reading çīrṣaṇ°vátī is by Prāt. iv. 99, and the word is quoted there in the comment as an example. Ppp. puts the adjectives in the accus., and reads, instead of our c: pratyak pra hiṇmasi yaç cakāra tuṁ ṛcchatu: cf. vs. 5 c and v. 14. 11 c.

3. Çūdra-made, king-made, woman-made, made by Brahmans (brahmán), like a wife expelled (nuttá) by her husband, let her go to her maker, as connection.

Either 'as her' or 'as his connection'; Ppp. decides for the former, reading bandhum ⌊for our bándhu⌋. ⌊W's alternative seems to be: bándhum must be in apposition with kartā́ram; but bándhv (p. bándhu) must be a neuter (as at v. 13. 7) and so in apposition with the subject-nominative, kṛtyā́ understood.⌋

4. With this herb have I spoiled all witchcrafts — what one they have made in the field, what in the kine, or what in thy men.

This is a repetition of iv. 18. 5, above. The Anukr. here, as there, takes no notice of the defective last pāda.

5. Let evil be to the evil-doer, a curse to the curser; backward we send [her] forth back, that she may slay the witchcraft-maker.

Ppp. reads for a kṛtyās santu kṛtyākṛte, and, for c, d pratyak pratipravartaya yaç cakāra tuṁ ṛcchatu. To read in our c hiṇmasi (as Ppp. in vs. 2 c) would rectify the meter, of whose irregularity the Anukr. takes no notice. The pada-reading prati°prahiṇmaḥ is by Prāt. iv. 95; the word is quoted there in the comment as example.

6. Opposed [is] the Āñgirasa, our appointed (puróhita) overseer; do thou, having turned the witchcrafts in the opposite direction, slay yonder witchcraft-makers.

Ppp. is corrupt, mixing up our verses 6 and 7. It combines pratīcīnā "ñgi- in 6 a.

7. He who said to thee "go forth," against the current, up-stream, him, O witchcraft, do thou return against; seek not us who are innocent.

Of this verse is legible in Ppp. udāyyam in b; as for our mss., they cannot be relied upon in the least to distinguish pya and yya, but the majority rather favor udāyyàm, while P. reads -āryyàm, D. -ājyàm (?), W. -āhyam. Neither word has been found anywhere else, but doubtless udāpyàm is the true form.

8. He who put together thy joints, as an ṛbhú [those] of a chariot with skill (dhī́), unto him go thou; there is thy going; this person is unknown to thee.

All the saṁhitā-mss. read -va rbhur in b.

9. They who, having made, took hold of thee, cunning sorcerers — this is a healthful (çambhú) spoiler of witchcraft, counteracting, reverting; therewith do we bathe thee.

The address changes, as often elsewhere, from the witchcraft to the bewitched person. Ppp. reads, in c, vidma for çambhu, and, in d, pratisaram. Our text ought to read in c çambhv ìdám, although all the mss. happen to agree here in lengthening the i.

10. In that we have come upon the ill-portioned one (fem.), bathed forth, whose young (-vatsá) is dead — let all ill (pāpá) go away from me; let property come unto (upa-sthā) me.

The pada-mss. have in b upa∘eyimá, and combination to upeyimá falls under the rule Prāt. iii. 38, although the ā contained in eyimá (= ā-īyimá) does not appear ⌊as ā⌋ in the pada-text. ⌊Ppp. ends a corruptly with pṛṣṇipathāṁ.⌋

11. In that they have taken (grah) the name of thee giving to the Fathers, or at the sacrifice — let these plants free thee from all ill that is designed (? saṁdeçyà).

It might be also (in a, b) 'those giving to the Fathers have taken the name of thee' (Ludwig, 'thy Fathers'). Saṁdeçyà is very obscure. The first half-verse is wholly corrupt in Ppp.

12. From sin against the gods, against the Fathers, from name-taking, that is designed, that is devised against [any one], let the plants free thee by their energy (vīryà), with spell (bráhman), with verses, with milk of the seers.

'Milk' (páyas) in the last pāda looks like a corrupt reading, but Ppp. appears to have the same; Bp.E. accent payasā́. ⌊As for the combinations of -ā ṛ-, see note to Prāt. iii. 46.⌋ Several mss. (Bp.O.p.m.R.T.K.) read pitryàt in a. The verse, which ought to be called an anuṣṭubgarbhā triṣṭubh (11 + 8 : 11 + 11 = 41), is very foolishly described by the Anukr. as a pañkti, because it contains nearly (and can easily be reduced to precisely) 40 syllables.

13. As the wind sets in motion the dust from the earth and the cloud (abhrá) from the atmosphere, so from me may everything of evil nature go away, pushed by the spell (bráhman).

14. Step away, making much noise, like an unfastened she-ass; attain thy makers, pushed hence by an energetic spell.

Some of the mss. (O.p.m.K.) read kartrén in c, as in other such cases.

15. Saying "this is the road, O witchcraft," we conduct thee; thee that wast sent forth against [us] we send forth back again; by that [road] go against [them], breaking, like a draft-cow with a cart, all-formed, wearing a wreath (? kurūṭín).

The last word is found only here, and has to be rendered conjecturally (with the Pet. Lexx.). All the saṁhitā-mss. ⌊or rather, most of them: see also note to Prāt. iii. 35⌋ combine kṛtyé 'ti ⌊and thus indeed the meter requires us to pronounce⌋; but our edition restores the more correct reading ⌊kṛtya íti⌋, since the Prāt. does not countenance the irregularity; we should expect to find it with vandane 'va (in ii. 56). Ppp. reads at the beginning ayaṁ panthā 'pinayāmi tvā kṛtye prahitāṁ prati etc.; in c ⌊or rather c–d⌋, tuñjaty anasvinī 'va. In the Anukr. it seems as if catuṣpadā must be a misreading for pañcapadā (11 + 11 : 8 + 8 + 8 = 46): but compare vs. 19.

16. Offward is light for thee, hitherward is no road for thee; make thy goings elsewhere than [toward] us; go thou by a distant [road] beyond ninety difficult navigable streams; do not wound thyself; go away.

One would like to emend kṣaṇiṣṭhās in d, perhaps to kṣamiṣṭhās 'be patient' i.e. 'linger'; Ppp. has instead ghāniṣṭhās, which unfortunately gives no help. Ppp. also combines nāvyā 'ti in c; and the description of the Anukr. appears to sanction it.

17. As the wind the trees, do thou crush (mṛ) down, cause to fall; do not leave of them cow, horse, man; turning back, O witchcraft, from here to thy makers, awaken them unto childlessness.

Here, in c, even a majority of the mss. (W.I.O.D.T.K.) read kartrén. Ppp. combines at the beginning vāte 'va, as the meter demands, and as the Anukr. assumes; úchiṣāi 'ṣām is doubtless also the real reading in b.

18. What [witchcraft] they buried for thee in the barhís, what in the cemetery, [what] witchcraft or secret spell (valagá) in the field, or practised against thee in the householders' fire — they, being wiser, [against thee] who art simple, innocent.

Ppp. helps both meter and sense by inserting cakrus before barhiṣi in a; it also arranges kṛtyāṁ kṣetre in b, combines dhīratarā 'nāg- at the end, and adds, to complete the verse, tam ⌊so Roth's Collation! for tām?⌋ ito nāçayāmasi. The Anukr. notices neither the deficiency in a nor the redundancy in d.

19. We have found out (anu-vid) the hostile sneaking magic (? kártra) that was applied, perceived (? anu-budh), buried: let that go whence it was brought; there let it roll about like a horse; let it slay the progeny of the witchcraft-maker.

Ppp. reads in c āgatam for ābhṛtam, and combines in d açve 'va, as called for by the meter. The Anukr. is as bad in its treatment of this verse as of 15.

20. There are knives of good metal in our house; we know thy joints, O witchcraft, how many they are; just stand up; go away from here; unknown one, what seekest thou here?

That is, 'thou who art no acquaintance of ours.' The Anukr. is much more scrupulous than usual in calling the verse (12 + 11 : 8 + 8 = 39) virāj ⌊scanning a perhaps as 11⌋. Ppp. begins with svayasā. The third pāda is quoted in Kāuç. 39. 19.

21. Thy neck-bones (grīvā́), O witchcraft, and thy (two) feet I will cut up; run thou out; let Indra-and-Agni defend us, they who are of progeny rich in progeny.

Prajā́vatī at the end looks like a corruption of prajā́patī, which Ppp. reads ⌊R's collation has prajapatī⌋. Ppp. also has in c enāṁ vṛçcatā. But Kāuç., which quotes the last half-verse in full in 5. 2, reads prajāvatī. The same half-verse appears also by pratīka in Vāit. 8. 6 (unless Vāit. takes it rather from Kāuç.).

22. King Soma [is] our over-ruler and favorer (mṛḍitṛ́); let the lords of being favor us.

The verse properly contains 22 syllables (11 + 11), and should therefore be called a sāmnī triṣṭubh. Ppp. reads in b ṛtasya naṣ.

23. Let Bhava-and-Çarva hurl (as) at the evil-doer, the witchcraft-maker, the ill-doer, the missile of the gods, the lightning.

Ppp. reads in a pāpakṛtvane ⌊which is metrically much better⌋. The definition of the verse by the Anukr. is very stupid; it is plainly two triṣṭubh pādas, with an intruded word of three syllables (either duṣkṛ́te or vidyútam; either could be spared). The mss. insert a cesura-mark after kṛtyākṛ́te.

24. If thou camest [as] biped, as quadruped, put together by the witchcraft-maker, all-formed, do thou, becoming octoped, go away again from here, O misfortune!

The verse has the same structure as 20. The pada-text here and in vs. 28 reads ā○iyátha.

25. Anointed, smeared, well-adorned, bearing all difficulty, go thou away; recognize (jñā), O witchcraft, thy maker, as a daughter her own father.

The definition of this verse appears to be omitted in the Anukr., as we can hardly be meant to take it for an anuṣṭubh. The first pāda is capable of being crowded together into 8 syllables, or expanded into 12 (either procedure being about equally strained), making the verse either an urobṛhatī or a prastārapañkti. It is quoted in Kāuç. 39. 18.

26. Go away, O witchcraft; stand not; lead, as it were, the track of one pierced; it is a deer, thou a deer-hunter; it is unable to put thee down.

'Lead,' in b, appears to be used in the sense of 'follow'; the 'track' is doubtless that of the maker: ⌊cf. note to xi. 2. 13⌋. The pada-text divides mṛga○yúḥ: cf. Prāt. iii. 18.

27. Also the after one (ápara) slays with an arrow, fitting it (?), the one shooting (-āsin) in front; also of the front one, smiting down, the after one smites down in return.

This obscure and probably corrupt verse gets no help from Ppp., which merely reads uto for uta in c. The Pet. Lex. suggests emendation of -dā́ya to -dhā́ya in b, and the translation implies the change.

28. Hear thou, verily, these words of mine; then go whence thou camest, to meet him who made thee.

Ppp. reads at the end punaḥ for prati.

29. The slaying of an innocent person is indeed fearful, O witchcraft; slay thou not our cow, horse, man; wheresoever thou art set down, from there we make thee stand up; become thou lighter than a leaf.

The pada-text has in d út : sthāp- ; the example of the omitted s is quoted under Prāt. ii. 18. The verse (10 + 10 : 8 + 8 + 8 = 44) is very badly defined by the Anukr. Ppp. reads in a -hatyam and bhīmam.

30. If ye are covered (ā-vṛ) with darkness, like those who are girt (abhi-dhā) with a net — having torn up (sam-lup) all witchcrafts from here, we send them forth again to the maker.

The pada-text strangely reads ā́°vṛtā in a, instead of -tāḥ.

31. The progeny of the witchcraft-maker, of him of secret spells, of him that devises against [others], O witchcraft, do thou kill; do not leave [them alive]; slay yonder witchcraft-makers.

Ppp. uses the singular in d.

32. As the sun is freed out of darkness, [and] quits the night and the ensigns of the dawn, so do I quit all evil-natured magic made by the witchcraft-maker, as an elephant the difficult haze (?rájas).

Ppp. puts tamasas before mucyate in a, reads ketum at end of b, and omits d altogether. The verse (12 + 11 : 8 + 8 + 11 = 50) lacks two syllables of being a full atijagatī (52). The pratīka (yathā sūrya) is quoted in Kāuç. 39. 26 ; but the comm. regards vii. 13. 1, and not this, as the verse intended.

2. The wonderful structure of man.

[Nārāyaṇa. — trayastrin̄çat. pārṣṇisūktam ; pāuruṣam ; brahmaprakāçisūktam (31, 32. sākṣātparabrahmaprakāçinyāu). ānuṣṭubham : 1–4, 7, 8. triṣṭubh ; 6, 11. jagatī ; 28. bhurig bṛhatī.]

Found also (except vss. 8, 18, 23, 28) in Pāipp. xvi. (in the verse-order 1–7, 26, 27, 9–12, 17, 15, 13, 14, 16, 22, 19, 24, 25, 20, 21, 30, 29, 31, 32, 33). Quoted (vs. 1) in Vāit. 37. 19, together with the other puruṣasūkta (xix. 6), in the puruṣamedha or human sacrifice ; not noticed in Kāuç.

Translated : Muir, v. 375 (nearly all) ; Ludwig, p. 398 ; Scherman, Philosophische Hymnen, p. 41 (nearly all) ; Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 265 ; Henry, 5, 45 ; Griffith, ii. 6.

1. By whom were brought the two heels of a man (púruṣa)? by whom was his flesh put together? by whom his two ankle-joints (gulphá)? by whom his cunning (péçana) fingers? by whom his apertures? by whom his (two) uchlakhás in the midst? who [put together] his footing (pratiṣṭhā́)?

The pada-text divides ut°çlakhāú, as if there were such a word as çlakha. Ppp. reads, instead of keno 'chlakhāu, keno 'cchinaṁ ko ; also, in a, pārṣṇīy ābhṛte pāuruṣasya ; and, in c, peçinīṣ. Péçana is more literally 'arranging, adorning.'

2. From what, now, did they make a man's two ankle-joints below, his two knee-joints above? separating (?nir-ṛ) his two back-thighs (jáṅghā), where, forsooth, did they set them in? the two joints of his knees — who indeed understands (cit) that?

Nirṛ́tya is a difficult and doubtful expression here. Ppp. reads nirṛtijan̄ghe ni dadhuḥ; also, in d, saṁdhīm ū ca jānā. In b it has again pāuruṣasya.

3. There is joined, fourfold (cátuṣṭaya), with closed (sáṁhita-) ends, above the two knees, the pliant (çithirá) trunk; what the hips are, the thighs — who indeed produced (jan) that, by which the body (kúsindha) became very firm?

Ppp. reads saṁhatantaṁ in a, and sudhṛtam in d.

4. How many gods [and] which were they, who gathered (ci) the breast, the neck-bones of man? how many disposed the two teats? who the two collar-bones (? kaphoḍá)? how many gathered the shoulder-bones (pl.)? how many the ribs?

Ppp. has again pāuruṣasya in b. In c it reads ni dadhuṣ kaṣ kapolāu. The mss. are extremely discordant as to the form of the word which our edition gives as kaphāuḍāú; that is the reading of Bp.W.D.; P.M.R.s.m. have kapheḍāú, I. kaphāujhāú, E.O.R.p.m.T.K. kaphoḍāú (which accordingly has the most authority in its favor ⌊all SPP's mss. read so⌋); several saṁhitā-mss. (P.M.T.O.p.m.R.s.m.) have káṣ before it. The meaning given is, of course, conjectural only; 'collar-bone' is Ludwig's guess, and seems to suit the connection (though that is a rather weak ground of preference) better than the 'perhaps elbow' of the Pet. Lexx. The Anukr. takes no notice of the lacking syllable in a.

5. Who brought together his two arms, saying "he must perform heroism"? what god then set on his two shoulders upon the body (kúsindha)?

⌊Ppp. has kṛṇavān for karavāt in b, and, for d, kvasindhād adhādadhi.⌋

6. Who bored out the seven apertures in his head — these ears, the nostrils, the eyes, the mouth? in the might of whose conquest (vijayá) in many places quadrupeds [and] bipeds go their way.

Bp. reads at the end yā́man. Ppp. puts nāsike after cakṣaṇī, and reads in c vijāyasya mahamani, and at the end yomūn. The Anukr. does not heed that d is a triṣṭubh pāda.

7. Since in his jaws he put his ample (purūcī́) tongue, then attached (adhi-çri) [to it] great voice; he rolls greatly on among existences, clothing himself in the waters: who indeed understands that?

With c is to be compared ix. 10. 11 d; the irregularity of the pāda is not noticed by the Anukr. Ppp. reads instead of c: sa ā varīvarti mahinā vyomaṁ : avasānaṣ kata cit pra veda. Our text ought to read varīvartti.

8. Which was that god who [produced] his brain, his forehead, his hindhead (? kakā́ṭikā), who first his skull, who, having gathered a gathering in man's jaws, ascended to heaven?

D. reads cityám in c; all the mss. agree in ruroha, although ruróha is obviously required. ⌊Otherwise Henry.⌋ The verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp.

9. Numerous things dear and not dear, sleep, oppressions and wearinesses, delights and pleasures — from where does formidable man bring (vah) them?

Ppp. reads in b -tandriyaḥ, and in d again pāur-.

10. Whence now in man [come] mishap, ruin, perdition, misery, accomplishment, success, non-failure? whence thought (matí), uprisings (úditi)?

The minor Pet. Lex. suggests for úditi 'end, disappearance.' Ppp. reads in b kuto 'dhi pur-. Vyṛddhis instead of ávy- would improve both sense and meter.

11. Who disposed in him waters, moving apart, much moving, produced for river-running, strong (tīvrá), ruddy, red, dark and turbid, upward, downward, crosswise in man?

Ppp. reads in a āpo dadhāt, and in c combines (as the meter requires us to read) tīvrā 'ruṇā. The verse (8 + 8 + 7 : 11 + 11 = 45) is very stupidly defined as jagatī by the Anukr.

12. Who set form in him? who both bulk (mahmán) and name? who [set] in him progress (gātú)? who display (ketú)? who [set] behaviors (carítra) in man?

Ppp. again pāuruṣe at the end.

13. Who wove in him breath? who expiration and respiration (vyāná)? what god attached (adhi-çri) conspiration (samāná) to man here?

Ppp. reads adadhāt for avayat in a, and again pāuruṣe.

14. What one god set sacrifice in man here? who [set] in him truth? who untruth? whence [comes] death? whence the immortal?

Ppp. reads, for b etc., eko 'gre adhi pāuruṣe : ko anṛtaṁ ko mṛtyuṁ ko amṛtaṁ dadhāu.

15. Who put about him clothing (vā́sas)? who prepared (kalpay-) his life-time? who extended to him strength? who prepared his swiftness?

Ppp. reads for a ko vāsasā pari dadhāt, and elides ko 'syā- in d.

16. With what did he stretch the waters along? with what did he make the day to shine? with what did he kindle (anu-idh) the dawn? with what did he give the coming-on of evening?

The pada-text reads ā́paḥ (as in 11 a) in a. Ppp. elides 'nv after it. ⌊For āindha, cf. Gram. § 684 c.⌋

17. Who put in him seed, saying "let his line be extended"? who conveyed into him wisdom? who gave (dhā) [him] music? who dances?

Ppp. has, for a, ko 'smin reto 'dadhāt; at end of b, itaḥ; for d, ko vāçāṁ ko anṛtaṁ dadhāu.

18. With what did he cover this earth? with what did he surround the sky? by what is man a match for (abhí) mountains in greatness? by what, for deeds?

This verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp.

19. With what does he go after Parjanya? with what [after] the out-looking Soma? with what [after] both sacrifice and faith? by whom was mind put in him?

Ppp. reads āpnoti for anv eti, and has for c, d our 20 c, d (but puruṣaḥ in c).

20. Wherewith does he obtain one learned in revelation (çrótriya)? wherewith this most exalted one? wherewith does man [obtain] this Agni? wherewith did he measure (make?) the year?

Ppp. has for b our 19 b again; also puruṣaḥ in c.

21. The bráhman obtains one learned in revelation, the bráhman this most exalted one; the bráhman [as] man this Agni; the bráhman measured the year.

Here and in vss. 23 and 25 an instrumental is distinctly and strongly called for, instead of the nominative bráhma; yet to call bráhma an instr., and translate it as such, does not seem possible. ⌊Cf. Caland, KZ. xxxi. 261.⌋ Ppp. reads, for c, d, brahma yajñasya çraddhā ca brahmā 'smi ca hataṁ manaḥ.

22. Wherewith does he dwell upon (?anu-kṣi) the gods? wherewith [upon] the people of the god-folk? wherewith this other asterism? whereby is authority (kṣatrá) called real (sát)?

The sense here is very obscure, and the rendering mechanical. ⌊Griffith suggests that the point may lie in using nakṣatram as if it were na kṣatram, 'non-power,' in opposition to kṣatram in d.⌋ Ppp. has, for b, kena devīr ajanayad diçaḥ. The meter requires in a kṣyati, as the forms are written in some texts. The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregularity.

23. The bráhman dwells upon the gods, the bráhman [upon] the people of the god-folk; the bráhman this other asterism; the bráhman is called real authority.

This verse is wanting in Ppp.

24. By whom is this earth disposed? by whom the sky set above? by whom this atmosphere, the expanse, set aloft and across?

Ppp. reads, for a, kene 'daṁ bhūmir nihataḥ.

25. By the bráhman is the earth disposed; the bráhman [is] the sky set above, the bráhman this atmosphere, the expanse, set aloft and across.

Ppp. reads, for a, b, brahmaṇā bhūmir niyatā brahma dyām uttarāṁ dadhāu, thus relieving in b the difficulty as to the construction of brahma. ⌊Cf. note to vs. 21.⌋

26. Atharvan, having sewed together his head, and also (yát) his heart — aloft from the brain the purifying one sent [them] forth, out of the head.

'The purifying one' (pávamāna) is soma; it is perhaps identified here with Atharvan; but the whole sense is extremely obscure. Ppp. reads at the end çīrṣṇaḥ.

27. Verily that head of Atharvan [is] a god-vessel, pressed together; breath defends that, the head, food, also mind.

For samubjita, as said of a koça, compare ix. 3. 20 above. Ppp. reads prāṇo 'bhi in c, and çrīm for çiras in d. The three nouns in d might be nom. instead of accus.

28. Was he now created upward (ūrdhvá)? [or] was he now created crosswise? did man grow unto (ā-bhū) all the quarters? — he who knoweth the bráhman's stronghold, from which man is [so] called.

The meaning of the protracted final syllables here is unquestionable, although it has been overlooked by both Muir and Ludwig. The cases of protraction call out much treatment from the Prāt.: see the rules i. 70, 97, 105; iv. 6, 120, 121, and the notes upon them. The mss. differ in regard to accenting or leaving unaccented the final syllable of b; nor is the usage of either RV. or AV. sufficiently settled to determine which reading ought to be preferred. Puruṣa in this verse and the sequel seems to approach its later meaning of 'supernal Person or Spirit.' There is no apparent connection between the two halves of the verse: for the second, see vs. 30. The whole verse is wanting in Ppp. The Anukr. should have called it a prastārapañkti; bhurig bṛhatī is purely mechanical (10 + 11 : 8 + 8 = 37).

29. Whoever indeed knoweth that bráhman's stronghold, covered with amṛ́ta — unto him both the bráhman and the Brahmans have given sight, breath, progeny.

The verse is found also in TA. (i. 27. 3), which reads purīm at end of b, brahmā for brāhmāç in b, and āyuḥ kīrtim for cakṣuḥ prāṇam in d (the accentuation is corrupt and worthless through the whole verse). Ppp. has also in d āyuṣ for cakṣuḥ, and at the end dadhuḥ.

30. Him verily sight doth not desert, nor breath, before old age, who knoweth the bráhman's stronghold (púr), from which man (púruṣa) is [so] called.

The latter half-verse is identical with 28 c, d. Ppp. reads puraḥ at end of b, and yasmāt in d.

31. Eight-wheeled, nine-doored, is the impregnable stronghold of the gods; in that is a golden vessel, heaven-going (svargá), covered with light.

The verse is found also in TA. (i. 27. 2-3), which reads hiraṇmayas in c, and inserts lokás after svargás in d. ⌊Reminiscences of this verse are seen in x. 8. 43 a, b.⌋

32. In that golden vessel, three-spoked, having three supports — what soul-possessing monster (yakṣá) there is in it, that verily the knowers of the bráhman know.

Ppp. reads in b tridive for tryare, and, in c, antar for yakṣam. ⌊Pādas c, d recur at x. 8. 43 c, d.⌋

33. The bráhman entered into the resplendent, yellow, golden, unconquered stronghold, that was all surrounded with glory.

The verse is found also in TA. (i. 27. 3–4), which again reads hiraṇmayīm, and brahmā́ vivéça ⌊so both ed's⌋ (the accent has no authority, as it is full of faults in this vicinity; but the comm. explains brahmā́ as = prajāpatiḥ: which also does not go for much). ⌊TA. has further vi- for pra- at the beginning and ends with -jitā (which the comm. explains as -jitām).⌋ Ppp. likewise has hiraṇmayīm; and further, in d viveçā ca parājitaḥ.

⌊The quoted Anukr. says for this second hymn tisraḥ (i.e. 3 above the norm of 30). — Here ends the first anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 65 verses.⌋

3. With an amulet of varaṇá.

[Atharvan. — pañcaviṅçakam. mantroktavaraṇadevatyam uta vānaspatyaṁ; cāndramasam. ānuṣṭubham: 2, 3, 6. bhurik triṣṭubh; 8, 13, 14. pathyāpaṅkti; 11, 16. bhurij; 15, 17–25. 6-p. jagatī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. (in the verse-order 1–7, 9, 8, 10–13, 15, 14, 16, 17, 19, 22, 21, 20, 18, 24; 23 and 25 are wanting). Quoted (vs. 1) in Kāuç. 19. 22, with three other hymns, in connection with the binding on of amulets for welfare. Not noticed in Vāit.

1. This varaṇá [is] my rival-destroying, virile (vṛ́ṣan) amulet; with it do thou take hold of thy foes, slaughter thy injurers (durasy-).

The varaṇa is a tree, the Cratæva Roxburghii found throughout India. The name comes doubtless from the root vṛ 'cover, protect, ward off'; and the hymn is full of allusions to a connection with that root; ⌊cf. the play in iv. 7. 1 and vi. 85. 1⌋. Ppp. reads throughout varuṇa, which is also in later Skt. recognized as a form of the tree-name.

2. Crush them, slaughter, take hold; be the amulet thy forerunner in front; the gods by the varaṇá warded off the hostile practice (abhyācārá) of the Asuras from one morrow to another.

The comm. to Prāt. iii. 80 quotes the beginning of the verse as example of eṇa after pra. It is unnecessary to view, with the Anukr., the verse as redundant. Ppp. combines te 'stu in b.

3. This amulet, the varaṇá, all-healing, thousand-eyed, yellow, golden — it shall make thy foes go downward; do thou, in front, damage them that hate thee.

Ppp. reads hiraṇmayaḥ at end of b, and yas for sa at beginning of c. The verse is rather svarāj than bhurij.

4. This varaṇá [shall ward off] the witchcraft extended for thee; this shall shield thee against fear arising from men, this against all evil.

Ppp. preserves unity of construction through the verse, by reading, for b, c: pāuruṣeyam ayaṁ vadham: ayaṁ te sarvaṁ pāpmānaṁ.

5. The varaṇá, this divine forest-tree, shall ward off; the yákṣma that has entered into this man — that have the gods warded off.

We had this verse above, as vi. 85. 1. The Anukr. takes no notice in either place of the deficient syllable in a. Ppp. reads here, for b, idaṁ devo bṛhaspatiḥ; and, for c, yakṣmā pratiṣṭhā yo 'smin; ⌊and then taṁ u etc.⌋.

6. If, having slept, thou shalt see an evil dream; if a wild beast (mṛgá) shall run a disagreeable course — from overmuch (? pari-) sneezing, from the evil utterance of a bird (çakúni), this amulet, the varaṇá, shall shield thee.

The translation implies in b emendation of yáti to yádi, which seems unavoidable. Ppp., however, appears to have yati; it reads further in b mṛgaçrutaṁ and ajuṣṭaṁ, in c paricchavā, ⌊and in d vārayātāi⌋. The verse is included in the duḥsvapnanāçana gaṇa: see note to Kāuç. 46. 9.

7. From the niggard, from perdition, from sorcery, also from fear, from the more violent deadly weapon of death, the varaṇá shall shield thee.

Ppp. reads, for d, tvaṁ varuṇo vāraya.

8. What sin my mother, what my father, and what my own brothers, what we ourselves have done, from that shall this divine forest-tree shield us.

Ppp. reads tasmāt for tatas in d, and, for e, idaṁ deva bṛhaspatiḥ: compare its version of 5 b.

9. Driven (vyath) forth by the varaṇá, my enemies (bhrā́tṛvya) [who are my] kinsmen have gone unto unlighted (? asū́rta) space (rájas); let them go to lowest darkness.

10. Unharmed [am] I, with unharmed kine, long-lived, having all my men; let this amulet, the varaṇá, protect me, being such, from every quarter.

Ppp. reads in b -pāuruṣaḥ (as usual, where pūr- and not pur- is meant).

11. This varaṇá on my breast, king, divine forest-tree — let it drive (bādh) away my foes, as Indra the barbarians, the Asuras.

The verse is quoted in the schol. to Kāuç. 10. 2. Ppp. combines varuṇo 'rasi, as the meter requires, but as the Anukr. takes pains not to authorize. Ppp. also exchanges the second halves of vss. 11 and 12.

12. I bear this varaṇá being long-lived, one of a hundred autumns; may it assign to me both kingdom and authority, to me cattle and force.

Ppp., as noted above, reads for the second half of this verse our 11 c, d, and vice versa.

13. As the wind breaks with force the trees, the forest-trees, so do thou break my rivals, those born before and after; let the varaṇá defend thee.

Ppp. reads jīrṇān for vṛkṣān in b; and, in c, -tnāñs tvaṁ bhañdhi. ⌊With d, cf. the Ppp. vs. cited under iii. 6. 2.⌋

14. As both wind and fire devour (psā) the trees, the forest-trees, so do thou devour my rivals, those born etc. etc.

Ppp. again relieves the redundancy of expression by reading sarvān instead of vṛkṣān in b; also it has in c -tnāñs tvam for -tnān me.

15. As, destroyed by the wind, the trees lie prostrate (nyàrpita), so do thou destroy, prostrate my rivals, those born etc. etc.

Ppp. is quite corrupt in this verse, but does not appear to offer any variant. Prá kṣiṇīhi properly ought to be divided in our text.

16. Them, O varaṇá, do thou cut off (pra-chid), before what is appointed (diṣṭá), before [the end of] their life-time — them who strive to damage him in respect to cattle, and who are intent to damage his kingdom.

Ppp. reads, for b, purā dṛṣṭān parā "yuṣaḥ. ⌊In c, pronounce yāī 'nam.⌋

17. As the sun shines exceedingly, as in it brilliancy is set, so let the varaṇá amulet fix (ni-yam) in me fame [and] growth; let it sprinkle me with brilliancy; let it anoint me with glory.

Part of the mss. (P.M.D.) accent asmín in b. Ppp. reads, for c etc., evā sapatnāñs tvaṁ sarvān ati bhāhi syaçvo varuṇas tvā 'bhi rakṣatu. ⌊Either Mr. Whitney took me as locative (Gram. § 492 a); or else his 'in me' is an inadvertence for 'for me.'⌋

18. As glory [is] in the moon, and in the men-beholding Āditya, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

From here on, Ppp. has the same refrain ⌊as the Berlin text⌋, only reading at the end mām.

19. As glory [is] in the earth, as in this Jātavedas, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

20. As glory [is] in the maiden, as in this constructed (sáṁbhṛta) chariot, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

21. As glory [is] in Soma-drink, as in honey-mixture [is] glory, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

22. As glory [is] in the agnihotrá, as in the váṣaṭ-utterance [is] glory, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

All the mss. save P.M.O. have yaço 'gnihotre in a, and this is accordingly the better-supported reading.

23. As glory [is] set in the sacrificer, as in this sacrifice, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

Wanting in Ppp., as above noted.

24. As glory [is] in Prajāpati, as in this most exalted one, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

Ppp. reads jātavedasi instead of parameṣṭhini.

25. As in the gods [is] immortality (amṛ́ta), as in them is set truth, so let the varaṇá amulet etc. etc.

4. Against snakes and their poison.

[Garutman.—ṣaḍvinçati. takṣakadāivatam. ānuṣṭubham: 1. pathyāpañkti; 2. 3-p. yavamadhyā gāyatrī; 3, 4. pathyābṛhatī; 8. uṣṇiggarbhā parātriṣṭubh; 12. bhurig gāyatrī; 16. 3-p. pratiṣṭhā gāyatrī; 21. kakummatī; 23. triṣṭubh; 26. 3-av. 6-p. bṛhatīgarbhā kakummatī bhurik triṣṭubh.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. (with one or two changes of order: see below). Not noticed in Vāit. Quoted (vs. 1), as addressed to Takṣaka (king of the serpent-divinities), in Kāuç. 32. 20, and also 139. 8, in the ceremonies of beginning Vedic study (see further under vss. 25, 26).

Translated: Ludwig, p. 502; Henry, 11, 56; Griffith, ii. 14; Bloomfield, 152, 605.

1. Indra's [was] the first chariot, the gods' the after chariot, Varuna's the third one; the snakes' chariot, the furthest one (?), hath run against the pillar: then may it come to harm (?).

There are very questionable points here; the translation of d implies emendation of apamā́ (p. apa॰mā́) to apamás; yet apa-mā́ might perhaps be understood adverbially (like upamā́, p. upa॰mā́: twice in RV.). Ppp. reads upamā here. The translation of the last clause implies the reading áthā riṣat, which is given by several mss. (P.M.I.K.) and by Ppp., and which the meter favors; but such variants as ariṣat for arṣat are found elsewhere, and the ms. authority is decidedly in favor of arṣat, as the pada-texts read (but Kp. ardvyat, by a curious blunder)—if only we knew what to make of it. No indicative form not an aorist can be coördinated with ārat.

2. Darbhá-grass, brightness, young shoot (?tarū́ṇaka); horse's tail-tuft, rough-one's tail-tuft; chariot's seat (?bándhura).

The translation, of course, is only mechanical. ⌊Henry, Mém. de la Soc. de Ling., ix. 238, corrects an error of his version.⌋ We should have expected the Anukr. at least to add bhurij to its definition of the verse as a gāyatrī (8 + 11 : 6 = 25). O. (and E. in margin) read puruṣasya in b.

3. Smite down, O white one, with the foot, both the fore and the hind; like water-floated wood, sapless [is] the snakes' poison, fierce water (vā́r).

Ppp. puts the verse after our 4, and reads at the end vār id ugram. Part of our mss. (T.D.K.) read vā́r, accented, in both verses, and that seems most likely to be the true reading; the translation adopts it. ⌊Pischel takes it as "halte auf," Ved. Stud.,

ii. 75.⌋ The first half-verse is read in several gṛhya-sūtras (AGS. ii. 3. 3; PGS. ii. 14. 4; ÇGS. iv. 18; HGS. ii. 16. 8), as part of a verse in a charm against serpents; they all begin with apa instead of ava. ⌊Cf. also MGS. ii. 7. 1 a.⌋ The verse (8 + 8 : 8 + 8 + 3) would be more properly called upariṣṭād bṛhatī. ⌊Cf. xviii. 1. 32 n.⌋

4. The araṁghuṣá, having immerged, having emerged, said again: like water-floated wood, sapless is the snake's poison, fierce water.

The pada-text divides aram°ghuṣáḥ in a, and the Pet. Lexx. conjecture the meaning accordingly to be 'loud-sounding.' ⌊Pischel discusses the vs., Ved. Stud., ii. 74.⌋ Ppp. is corrupt at the beginning, but seems to read udañghojyonmajya punar etc.; ⌊again it ends with vār id ugram⌋.

5. Pāidva slays the kasarṇī́la (snake), Pāidva the whitish and the black; Pāidva hath split altogether the head of the ratharvī́, of the pṛdākū́.

Pāidva 'of Pedu' is the white snake-destroying horse given by the Açvins to Pedu (RV. i. 117–119). ⌊Cf. Bergaigne, Rel. Véd. ii. 451.⌋ For kasarṇīlam Ppp. reads kvaṣarṣṇīlam, and, for ratharvyās, rathavrihā. The exceptional accent of pṛdākvā́ḥ is noted in the comm. to Prāt. iii. 60. The pada-text divides neither kasarṇī́la nor ratharvī́.

6. Go forth first, O Pāidva; we come after thee; cast thou out the snakes from the road by which we come.

7. Here was Pāidva born; this [is] his going-away; these [are] the tracks of the snake-slaying vigorous steed.

⌊For the difficult and debatable form ahighnyo, BR. and W. assume a stem ahighnī́. This is probably to be considered, not as a feminine formation (cf. my Noun-Inflection, JAOS. x., p. 384), but rather as a masculine, like the masc. proper names Tiraçcī́ (l.c., p. 367 end), or, better, like the masculines ahī́, āpathī́, prāvī́, starī́ etc. (about a dozen of them, l.c., p. 369, middle: genitive ahyò etc.). In the latter case we might regard the printed accent ahighnyó, when contrasted with the ahyò of the RV., as characteristic of the AV. (cf. l.c., p. 369 top): but both W's and SPP's authorities are here uncertain as to the accent: the majority have ahighnyó, p. ahi°ghnyáḥ; K. and three of SPP's have ahighnyò; while W's D. and SPP's P.^{2} have áhi°ghnyaḥ. — Or have we, after all, to assume a stem ahighnī́ (cf. sahasraghnī́, xi. 2. 12), of which this would be a genitive like ary-ás? — One wonders why the reading is not simply ahighnó; but not a ms., either of W's or of SPP's, gives that reading. — Cf. atighnyàs, xi. 7. 16.⌋

8. What is shut together may it not open; what is opened may it not shut together; in this field [are] two snakes, both a female and a male; those [are] both sapless.

The first half-verse we had above as vi. 56. 1 c, d ⌊see note for suggested emendation⌋, also applied to a snake. The curiously irregular verse (7 + 7 : 8 [7?] + 11 = 33) is strangely defined by the Anukr.

9. Sapless here [are] the snakes, they that are near and they that are far; with a club (ghaná) I slay the stinger (vṛ́çcika), with a staff the snake that has come.

The second half-verse is found in a suppl. to RV. i. 191; see Aufrecht's RV.^{2}, p. 672; instead of ahim is there read aham. Ppp. reads ye 'nti te ca in b; and all our mss. ⌊save D., which has áti⌋ leave anti unaccented (it is emended to ánti in our text), as if by some carelessness yé 'nti had been changed to yé anti; it is one of the strangest of the many strange blunders of the AV. text. ⌊One might think that this vs. or one much like it was had in mind by Karṇa in his address to Çalya, MBh. viii. 40. 33 = 1848.⌋

10. This is the remedy of both, of the ill-horse (aghāçvá) and of the constrictor; the mischievous (aghāy-) snake hath Indra, the snake hath Pāidva put in my power (randhay-).

The Anukr. takes no notice of any deficiency in b; it can only be supplied by the violent resolution su-dj-. Ppp. rectifies the meter by the better reading vṛçcikasya ca ⌊cf. our 15 c, d, below⌋.

11. We reverence Pāidva, the staunch one, of staunch abode (-dhā́man); here behind sit pṛ́dākus, plotting forth.

Ppp. combines at the end -dhyatā ''sate. The Anukr. treats b as regular, thus sanctioning the resolution -dhā-ma-naḥ.

12. Of lost lives, of lost poison [are they], slain by the thunderbolt-bearing Indra; Indra hath slain, we have slain.

13. Slain [are] the cross-lined ones, crushed down the pṛ́dākus; slay thou the whitish [snake] that makes a great hood, the black snake, in the darbhá-grasses.

'Hood,' dárvi, lit. 'spoon.' Ppp. reads in c kanikradam. ⌊The first half recurs as the second of vs. 20.⌋

14. The little girl of the Kirātas, she the little one, digs a remedy, with golden shovels, upon the ridges (sā́nu) of the mountains.

15. Hither hath come the young physician, slayer of the spotted ones, unconquered; he verily is a grinder-up of both, the constrictor and the stinger.

16. Indra hath put the snake in my power, [also] both Mitra and Varuṇa, and Vāta ('wind') and Parjanya, both of them.

The name given by the Anukr. to the verse is of uncertain value; it is possible to read the last pāda either as 8 or as 6 syllables. Ppp. reads in a me 'hīn ajambhayat. Many of our mss. (P.I.O.R.T.K.) ⌊and the majority of SPP's⌋ read in c -janyò 'bhā́, but it is contrary to all rule and analogy; ⌊and W's Bp. and SPP's pada-text give -janyà ubhā́⌋.

17. Indra hath put the snake in my power, the pṛ́dāku and the she-pṛdākū́, the constrictor, the cross-lined one, the kasarṇīla, the dáçonasi.

The accent pṛdākvám (instead of -kvàm) is read by all the mss., and hence by our text; but it is incontestably wrong. The Anukr. takes no notice of the lacking syllable in c. Ppp. reads ⌊for a⌋ pāidvo me 'hīn ajambhayat, and ⌊for d⌋ kuçirṇīlaṁ naçonaçīṁ.

18. Indra hath slain first thy progenitor, O snake; of them, being shattered, what forsooth can be their sap?

Ppp. reads vas instead of u in c.

19. Since I have grasped together their heads, as a fisherman the kárvara; having gone away to the middle of the river, I have washed out the snake's poison.

The mss. do not in general distinguish ṣṭ and ṣṭh, and pāuñjiṣṭa would be equally correct here. Ppp. reads pāuñjiṣṭhī 'va.

20. The poison of all snakes let the rivers carry away; slain [are] the cross-lined ones, crushed down the pṛ́dākus.

21. I choose as it were the filaments of herbs successfully; I conduct as it were mares; O snake, let thy poison come out.

Apparently processes analogous to that of extracting the poison are referred to. The pada-division sādhu°yā́ is prescribed by Prāt. iv. 30. There seems to be no reason why the Anukr. should call the verse kakummatī.

22. What poison is in fire, in the sun, what in the earth, in herbs, kāndā-poison, kanáknaka — let thy poison come out; let it come.

Ppp. has karikradam ⌊cf. vs. 13⌋ instead of kanaknakam, and at the end vahī ⌊intending ahe?⌋ instead of viṣam; and it puts next our vs. 25.

23. Whichever of the snakes [are] fire-born, herb-born, whichever came hither (ā-bhū) [as] water-born lightnings; those of which the kinds are variously great — to those serpents would we pay worship with reverence.

Ppp. reads, for b etc., ye abhrajā vidyutā "babhūvuḥ : tāsām̐ jātāni bahudhā bahūni tebhyaḥ sarvebhyo etc.

24. Thou art a girl, tāúdī by name; verily thou art by name ghee-like (ghṛtā́cī); I take beneath thy poison-spoiling track.

That is, possibly, 'I put it beneath me, walk in it.' The obscure tāudī (ultimately from tud 'thrust'?) is read also by Ppp., which combines vā 'si in b, and has the easier reading pados for padam in c.

25. Remove thou [it] from every limb; make [it] avoid the heart; then, what keenness (téjas) the poison has, let that go downward for thee.

Ppp. reads hṛdayo in b, and combines tejo av- in c, d. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 32. 23.

26. He (it?) hath come to be afar; he hath obstructed the poison; he hath mixed poison in poison; Agni hath put out the snake's poison; Soma hath conducted [it] out; the poison hath gone after the biter; the snake hath died.

Ppp. reads (corruptly) āre 'bhūd viṣam aro viṣe viṣam aprayāg api : agnir aher nir adhād viṣam̐ somo anṛnāiḥ dviṣam ahīr amṛtaḥ. Kāuç. prescribes the use of the verse in 32. 24. ⌊With the ideas of b and e, cf. vii. 88. 1. With reference to the auto-toxic action of snake-venoms, see note to v. 13. 4.⌋

5. Preparation and use of water-thunderbolts.

⌊The hymn is mingled prose and verse: 22–24, 42–43, 45–50, and parts of 7–14 and 36–41 are metrical. Cf. Whitney, Index, p. 5.⌋ This hymn, which by the mss. is given and numbered as one,* without any intimation of a subdivision, is by the Anukr. divided into four † parts, which are even ascribed to different authors. ⌊Part A = verses 1–24; B = 25–35; C = 37–41; D = 42–50.⌋ Verses 1–41, or the first three divisions, are found also in Pāipp. xvi.; part of the last division (vss. 45, 42 c, d, 43, 44, in this order), in Pāipp. i. — ⌊"Water-thunderbolts" appears to me to be nothing more than a highfalutin name, well befitting the black magic of this hymn, for handfuls of water hurled with much hocus-pocus.⌋

*⌊Bp. does indeed begin anew at vs. 41 (not vs. 42 !) to number the verses as 1 etc.⌋

†⌊Just where vs. 36 belongs — if it does not form a division by itself — is not clear; it goes well as an ending to the group of vss. 25–35 and is cited with them (Keçava, p. 352^{31}: iti dvādaçabhiḥ). On the other hand, the Anukr. expressly defines division B as ekādaça; and the corrupt mārtvī or mārtvi of the Anukr. seems to contain an ascription of authorship for vs. 36. Dr. Ryder suggests that Mārīca may be intended (cf. vii. 62, 63; x. 10). See my arrangement of the Anukr. extracts just before vs. 25.⌋

⌊A carefully digested report of the ritual uses of this hymn, even now that Caland has done so much to elucidate them, would require more detailed study than I can at present give to it. Vāit. takes no notice of the hymn. The principal uses are treated in Kāuç. 49. I give them, following Caland, Altindisches Zauberritual, p. 171 f. — With the first halves of vss. 1–6 the performer washes the jar for the water; with the second halves of vss. 1–6 he begins to make use of (yunakti) the water (49. 3, 4). With vss. 7–14 he heats a part of it (see Keçava, p. 352^{19}); and with the seven vss. 15–21 and with vs. 42 and vs. 50 he hurls "water-bolts" (49. 13). This last is done seven times (Caland, p. 172, n. 6): namely, to the east, with vss. 15, 42, 50; to the south, with vss. 16, 42, 50; to the west, with vss. 17, 42, 50; and so on, to the north, nadir, center, and zenith. — With vss. 25–36 he makes his Viṣṇu-strides (49. 14) against the foe. — Other citations under the verses.⌋

1. Indra's force are ye; Indra's power are ye; Indra's strength are ye; Indra's heroism are ye; Indra's manliness are ye; unto a conquering junction (yóga) with brahman-junctions I join you.

The pada-text marks a pāda-division after each stha; but the Anukr. lumps all ⌊up to the avasāna-mark⌋ together as an abhikṛti-pāda (25 syll.), and reckons the whole verse (25 : 6 + 8 = 39) mechanically as a pañkti, because it contains nearly 40 syllables. Ppp. has in succession balam, nṛmṇam, çuklam, vīryam, and in c, indrayogāis.

⌊Render: 'for a use conducive to victory, with uses of incantation [or with masterly uses] [or with Brahman uses] I use you.' In brahma- I am inclined to see a triple çleṣa, the second sense being like that in the title Brahma-jāla-sutta (of the Dīgha-nikāya), 'the boss-net, the master-net.' In the first and second senses, brahma- is pertinent: not so in the sense of Brahman, in which last, however, it serves well enough for a point of departure for kṣatram, considering what black magic this is.⌋

2. Indra's force etc. etc.; unto a conquering junction, with *kṣatrá-*junctions I join you.

The connection of vss. 1 and 2 indicates that bráhman and kṣatrá, as often elsewhere, typify the Brahman and Kshatriya classes or castes.

3. Indra's force etc. etc.; unto a conquering junction, with Indra-junctions I join you.

Ppp. reads in c annayogāis.

4. Indra's force etc. etc.; unto a conquering junction, with Soma-junctions I join you.

Ppp. has this time brahmayogāis.

5. Indra's force etc. etc.; unto a conquering junction, with water-junctions I join you.

Ppp. reads apāṁ yogāis.

6. Indra's force etc. etc.; unto a conquering junction; let all existences wait upon (upa-sthā) me; joined to me are ye, O waters.

The Anukr. quotes this verse by the first words that are peculiar to it, viz. viçvāni mā, but its description applies to the whole (25:6+11+6=48); probably jagatīgarbhā is an oversight for triṣṭubgarbhā. The Kāuç. quotes the common pratīka of the six verses at 49. 3, in a witchcraft-ceremony; and their common second part (jiṣṇave yogāya) at 49. 4, to accompany the 'joining of waters' (ity apo yunakti). According to the editor of Kāuç., vss. 6 and 7 are quoted also in 49. 24, 25; but it does not appear why the 'sixth' and 'seventh' verses of this hymn should be intended. ⌊Caland, p. 173, in fact understands xiii. 3. 6, 7 as intended.⌋ According to the comm. to Kāuç. 47. 31, these verses, with vss. 15–21, 42, 50, accompany the hurling of 'water-thunderbolts' (udavajra: cf. vs. 50 below), whatever those may be; it is perhaps their preparation that is the subject of these verses; in Kāuç. 49. 13, only vss. 15–21, 42, 50 are quoted together, in connection with the same ⌊cf. the introduction⌋. ⌊See above, p. lxxvi.⌋

7. Agni's portion are ye, sperm (? çukrám) of the waters, O heavenly waters; put ye splendor in us; with the ordinance (dhā́man) of Prajāpati I set you for this world.

Ppp. reads devīr āpo.

8. Indra's portion are ye, sperm of the etc. etc.

9. Soma's portion are ye, sperm of the etc. etc.

10. Varuṇa's portion are ye, sperm of the etc. etc.

11. Mitra-and-Varuṇa's portion are ye, sperm of the etc. etc.

12. Yama's portion are ye, sperm of the etc. etc.

13. The Fathers' portion are ye, sperm of the etc. etc.

14. God Savitar's portion are ye, sperm of the etc. etc.

In these verses, Pāipp. makes 9 and 10, also 11 and 12, change places. After our 13 it inserts two more verses, beginning bṛhaspater and prajāpater; and in our 14 it omits devasya, and reads çuklaṁ devīr āpo. To read dhattana for dhatta ⌊and pronounce dhā́manā⌋ would make a regular anuṣṭubh of the refrain. The Anukr., as usual, gives no real description of the agglomeration, but calls 11 and 14 pañkti because they count up 40 syllables (9:8 + 7:8 + 8 = 40), and the others bṛhatī because they have nearly 36 syllables. As to the alleged quotation of vs. 7 in Kāuç. 49. 25, see above, note to vs. 6.

15. What of you, O waters, is the portion of waters within the waters, of the nature of sacrificial formula, sacrificing to the gods, that now I let go; that let me not wash down against myself; that do we let go against him who hates us, whom we hate; him may I slay (vadh), him may I lay low, with this spell (bráhman), with this act, with this weapon (mení).

⌊Render c: 'therewith (i.e. apām bhāgena = udavajreṇa) do we let fly against (abhy-ati-sṛj) him or do we shoot against him who' etc.; i.e. ati-sṛj is used intransitively and "him" is governed by the abhi-.⌋ ⌊Pādas b, c are repeated below as xvi. 1. 4, 5.⌋ At the beginning of c read téna (accent-sign slipped out of place).

16. What of you, O waters, is the wave of the waters within the waters, etc. etc.

17. What of you, O waters, is the young (vatsá) of the waters within the waters, etc. etc.

18. What of you, O waters, is the bull of the waters within the waters etc. etc.

19. What of you, O waters, is the golden embryo of the waters within the waters, etc. etc.

20. What of you, O waters, is the heavenly spotted stone of the waters within the waters, etc. etc.

21. What of you, O waters, are the fires of the waters within the waters, of the nature of sacrificial formula, sacrificing to the gods, them now I let go; them let me not wash down against myself; them we let go against him who hates us, etc. etc.

⌊For c: 'with them do we let fly against him who' etc., as in vs. 15.⌋ In vss. 17–21, after apām, Ppp. reads bindur, vego, vatso, gāvo, garbho respectively. For the quotations in Kāuç. of the common pratīka of vss. 15–21, together with those of vss. 42 and 50, ⌊see the introduction⌋. In all the verses it is possible only by violence to make out the structure called for by the Anukramaṇī. ⌊Delete the accent-mark over agnáyo.⌋

22. What untruth soever we have spoken since a three years' period, —let the waters protect me from all that difficulty, from distress.

We had the second half-verse as vii. 64. 1 c, d; and Ppp. has again the same variants as there; it also reads in a āikahāyanāt. The word trāihāyaṇā́t (p. trāihāyanā́t) is noted in Prāt. iv. 83. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 46. 50 in a prāyaçcitta ceremony ⌊Keç.: for lying or cheating⌋; and it is reckoned (see note to Kāuç. 32. 27) as belonging to the aṅholiñga gaṇa. The Anukr. does not heed the redundant syllable in a.

23. I send you forth to the ocean; go ye unto your own lair; uninjured, of completed years (?); and let nothing whatever ail (am) us.

The third pāda apparently belongs to 'us,' though out of construction. ⌊As to -hāyas, cf. viii. 2. 7, note, and Bergaigne, Rel. Véd., iii. 287.⌋ The last pāda occurred above, as vi. 57. 3 b. The first two pādas, with the first word of the third, are found also in several sūtras: ÇÇS. iv. 11. 6; LÇS. ii. 1. 7; PGS. i. 3. 14; AÇS. iii. 11. 6; Āp. xiii. 18. 1; iv. 14. 4; the first three read in b abhi gacchata, the others api gacchata (and Āp. iv. 14. 4 has acchidraḥ instead of ariṣṭāḥ); the end of the verse is entirely different from ours, and more or less discordant in the various works. ⌊See also MGS. ii. 11. 18 and the Index, p. 157.⌋ Kāuç. quotes the verse at 6. 17, in a parvan ceremony; and with vs. 24, at 136. 6. Ppp. reads in a vo 'pasṛjāmi ⌊and inverts the order of vss. 23 and 24⌋.

24. Free from defilement (-riprá) [are] the waters; [let them carry] away from us defilement, forth from us sin, mishap (duritá), they of good aspect; let them carry forth evil dreaming, forth filth.

The verse is in part repeated below, as xvi. 1. 10, 11.

[B^1. (vss. 25–35). Kāuçika. — ekādaça. viṣṇukramadevatyā uta pratimantroktadevatyāḥ. 25–35. 3-av. 6-p. yathākṣaraṁ çakvaryatiçakvarī.]

[B^2. (vs. 36). Mārtvī (?). — 5-p. atiçākvarātijāgatagarbhā 'ṣṭi. See introduction.]

25. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, earth-sharpened (-sáṁçita), Agni-brightened; after earth I stride out; from earth we disportion him who hates us, whom we hate; let him not live; him let breath quit.

The Pāipp. version of sections B. and C. agrees with that of our text with only trifling differences; the details are not furnished. It is not difficult to read this and the following verses of B. into çakvarī and atiçakvarī verses, as required by the Anukr. (this, for example, as 10 + 10 : 9 + 8 : 9 + 10 = 56). The whole section, apparently, is quoted by its common pratīka in Kāuç. 6. 14, to accompany the taking of the Viṣṇu strides in a parvan ceremony; and again in 49. 14 ⌊after hurling the water-bolts: cf. introd.⌋. ⌊Cf. vii. 31. 1 d.⌋

26. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, atmosphere-sharpened, Vāyu-brightened; after atmosphere I stride out; from atmosphere we disportion him who etc. etc.

27. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, sky-sharpened, sun-brightened; after the sky I stride out; from the sky we disportion him who etc. etc.

28. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, quarter-sharpened, mind-brightened; after the quarters I stride out; from the quarters we disportion him who etc. etc.

29. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, region-sharpened, wind-brightened; after the regions I stride out; from the regions we disportion him who etc. etc.

30. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, verse-(ṛ́c-)sharpened, chant-(sā́man-)brightened; after the verses I stride out; from the verses we disportion him who etc. etc.

Some of the mss. (E.s.m.R.K.) read in a -hā ṛks-.

31. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, sacrifice-sharpened, bráhman-brightened; after the sacrifice I stride out; from the sacrifice we disportion him who etc. etc.

32. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, herb-sharpened, sóma-brightened; after the herbs I stride out; from the herbs we disportion him who etc. etc.

Read in b krame (an accent-sign slipped out of place).

33. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, water-sharpened, Varuṇa-brightened; after the waters I stride out; from the waters we disportion him who etc. etc.

Read apó at beginning of b (an accent-sign slipped out of place).

34. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, plowing-sharpened, food-brightened; after plowing I stride out; from plowing we disportion him who etc. etc.

35. Vishṇu's stride art thou, rival-slaying, breath-sharpened, man-(púruṣa-)brightened; after breath I stride out; from breath we disportion him who etc. etc.

⌊Correct the edition: read -saṁçitaḥ for -saçitaḥ.⌋

36. Ours [is] what is conquered, ours what has shot up; I have withstood (abhi-sthā) all fighters, niggards; now do I involve (ni-veṣṭ) the splendor, brightness, breath, life-time of him of such-and-such lineage, son of such-and-such mother; now do I make him fall (pad) downward.

⌊As to the place of this vs. in the general divisions of the hymn and its possible ascription to Mārīca, see the introd. and the Anukr. excerpts above.⌋ With this vs. compare xvi. 8. 1; ⌊also the mantra cited at Kāuç. 47. 22⌋. The vs. reads naturally as 62 syllables (11 + 11 : 15 + 13 + 12 = 62), but can be brought by forced resolutions up to a full aṣṭi (64 syll.). Abhy aṣṭhām is by Prāt. ii. 92.

[C. (vss. 37–41). Brahman. — pañca. pratimantroktadevatyāḥ. 37. virāṭ purastādbṛhatī; 38. purauṣṇih; 39, 41. ārṣī gāyatrī; 40. virāḍ viṣamā gāyatrī.]

37. I turn after the sun's turn (āvṛ́t), after his turn to the right; let it yield (yam) me property; [let] it [yield] me Brahman-splendor.

The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 6. 15, in a parvan ceremony, accompanying a turn to the right (vss. 25–35 were quoted in the next preceding rule). ⌊Cf. also MB. i. 6. 19, where the comm. cites also GGS. ii. 10. 27.⌋

38. I turn toward the quarters full of light; let them yield me property, let them etc. etc.

The metrical description of the Anukr. does not fit the verse (11 : 8 + 8) quite accurately. The resolution abhi-ā́v- is implied in all these verses.

39. I turn toward the seven seers; let them yield etc. etc.

40. I turn toward the bráhman; let it yield etc. etc.

41. I turn toward the Brahmans; let them yield etc. etc.

[D. (vss. 42–50). Vihavya.—navarcam. prājāpatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 44. 3-p. gāyatragarbhā 'nuṣṭubh (?); 50. triṣṭubh.]

42. Whom we hunt, him will we lay low with deadly weapons; by our spell (bráhman) have we made him fall (pad) into the opened mouth of the most exalted one.

Only the latter half-verse is found in Ppp. ⌊namely, in i.⌋. The pada-text in d reads bráhmaṇā : ā́ : apīp-. The quotation of the verse, with vss. 15–21, 50, in Kāuç. was noted above, ⌊see introd.⌋.

43. The missile hath closed upon him with the two tusks of Vāiçvānara; let this offering (ā́huti) devour him, the very powerful divine fuel.

Ppp. reads saṁvatsarasya instead of vāiçvānarasya.

44. King Varuṇa's bond art thou; do thou bind so-and-so, of such-and-such lineage, son of such-and-such mother, in food, in breath.

There is apparently something wrong, perhaps an omission, in the text of the Anukr. at this point; it reads tripād gāyatragarbhā st anuṣṭubh, and then passes to vs. 50, taking no notice of vss. 48, 49 (which are redundant triṣṭubhs: but see the note to vs. 49), ⌊nor of vs. 47⌋. Our present verse (prose) reads most naturally as 10 : 12 + 7 = 29 syllables.

45. What food of thine, O Lord of earth (bhū́), dwells upon the earth (pṛthivī́)—of that, O lord of earth, do thou furnish unto us, O Prajāpati.

The Anukr. implies the contraction of kṣiyati in b to kṣyati (cf. above, 2. 22, 23). Ppp. ⌊in i.⌋ puts this verse before our vs. 42.

46. The heavenly waters have I honored; with sap have we been mingled; rich in milk, O Agni, have I come; unite me here with splendor.

47. Unite me, O Agni, with splendor, with progeny, with life-time; may the gods know me as such; may Indra know, together with the seers.

These two verses we had above, as vii. 89. 1, 2. Neither they nor the two that follow are found in Ppp. here.

48. What, O Agni, the pair utter in curses today, what harshness of speech the reciters produce: the shaft that is born of fury of the mind—with that pierce thou the sorcerers in the heart.

49. Crush away the sorcerers with heat; crush away, O Agni, the demon with flame; crush away with burning the false worshipers; crush away the greatly gleaming ones that feed on lives.

These two verses are viii. 3. 12, 13. As usual in such a case, only the first words are given here in the mss. (both pada and saṁhitā): thus, yád agna íti dvé. Unfortunately it was overlooked by us that yád agne begins not only viii. 3. 12, but also vii. 61. 1; and, though both passages fit about equally ill into the connection here, yet the meter of vii. 61. 1, 2, being anuṣṭubh, implies a less oversight on the part of the Anukr., and, on the whole, the chance is in favor of the latter passage (vii. 61. 1, 2) being the one here intended. If in any one of the mss. accessible to us since the publication of the text there occurs anything to settle the question, it has been overlooked by us. ⌊SPP. fills out the pratīka with viii. 3. 12, 13; but herein he may merely have followed the Berlin edition.⌋

50. I, knowing, hurl at this man, to split his head, the four-pointed (-bhṛṣṭí) thunderbolt of the waters; let it crush all his limbs: to this on my part let all the gods assent.

The Anukr., strictly understood, implies the resolution va-jr-am in a. For the quotations of the verse, with other verses of the hymn, by Kāuç., see above ⌊introduction⌋. ⌊The hymn exceeds the norm by 20 verses and the quoted Anukr. says viṅçatiḥ.⌋ ⌊Here ends the twenty-second prapāṭhaka.⌋

6. With an amulet.

[Bṛhaspati. — pañcatriṅçat. mantroktaphālamaṇidevatyam uta vānaspatyam. ⌊3. āpyā.⌋ ānuṣṭubham: 1, 4, 21. gāyatrī; 5. 6-p. jagatī; 6. 7-p. virāṭ çakvarī; 7–10. 3-av. 8-p. aṣṭi (10. 9-p. dhṛti); 11, 20, 23–27. pathyāpañkti; 12–17. 3-av. 7-p. çakvarī; 31. 3-av. 6-p. jagatī; 35. 5-p. tryanuṣṭubgarbhā jagatī.]

Found also in great part (not vss. 18, 19, 23, 24, 26, 27, 29, 30, 33, 35) in Pāipp. xvi. A number of verses and parts of verses are prescribed in Kāuç. 19 ⌊and its schol.⌋ to be used in various acts of a ceremony for prosperity, and a few in other connections. Verses 1 and 3 are also used in Vāit. ⌊For details, see under the several verses.⌋

1. The head of the niggardly (arātīyú) cousin, of the evil-hearted hater, I cut off with force.

The hymn (vs. 1) is quoted in Kāuç. 19.22, with 3 and a couple of yet earlier hymns. At 8. 12, also, the verse is used in connection with the preparation of the darbha-sickle. Further, it is reckoned (note to Kāuç. 19. 1) as a puṣṭika mantra. In Vāit. 10. 2, it accompanies the cutting of a sacrificial post.

2. This amulet, born of the plow-share, shall make defense (várman) for me; it hath come to me filled with stir-about, with sap, together with splendor.

Ppp. reads tṛptas instead of pūrṇas in c. ⌊Pāda b is cited with vss. 1, 4 c, 6 b in the schol. to Kāuç. 19. 23.⌋

3. In that the skilful smith (tákṣan) hath smitten thee away with the hand by a knife, from that let the lively, bright (çúci) waters purify thee, that art bright.

Ppp. has in b vāçyā, which is the more proper form of the word. But vāsyā is read also in the Āp. (vii. 9. 9) version of the verse, which further has te for tvā in a, and, for c, d, āpas tat sarvaṁ jīvalāḥ çundhantu çucayaḥ çucim. In Kāuç. 8. 13 and Vāit. 10. 3, the verse is used to accompany the washing off of an instrument or post.

4. Let this golden-garlanded amulet, bestowing (dhā) faith, sacrifice, greatness, dwell a guest in our house.

5. To it we distribute (kṣad) ghee, strong drink, honey, food after food; for us, as a father for his sons, let it provide (cikits-) what is better and better, more and more, morrow after morrow — the amulet, coming from the gods.

Ppp. omits the fifth pāda. By a curious blunder, most of our mss. (all save I.O.D.) leave surām in a unaccented; ⌊and so do four of SPP's⌋.

6. What amulet, plow-share, ghee-dripping, the formidable khadirá, Brihaspati bound on, in order to force — that Agni fastened on; it yields (duh) to him sacrificial butter, more and more, morrow after morrow; with that do thou slay thy haters.

The series of epithets in b, c is an obscure one; perhaps 'made of khadira-wood and shaped like a plow-share,' is meant; the comm. to Kāuç. 19. 23 says khādiryāç cibukāyāḥ kartavyaḥ. Ppp. reads after d ājyāya rasāya kam: so 'smā ājyaṁ duhe. There is no reason why the Anukr. should call the verse virāj.

7. What amulet etc. etc. — that Indra fastened on, in order to force, to heroism; it yields to him strength, more and more etc. etc.

8. What amulet etc. etc. — that Soma fastened on, in order to great hearing (çrótra) [and] sight (cákṣas); it yields to him splendor, more and more etc. etc.

9. What amulet etc. etc. — that the sun fastened on; therewith he conquered these quarters; it yields to him growth (bhū́ti), more and more etc. etc.

Ppp. has Soma in this verse, and the sun in the preceding one; and here it reads varcas for bhūtim; for 8 e it has draviṇāya rasāya kam; and, for varcas, mahit (?).

10. What amulet etc. etc. — bearing that amulet, the moon conquered the strongholds of the Asuras, the golden [strongholds] of the Dānavas; it yields to him fortune, more and more etc. etc.

Ppp. reads tejas for çriyam.

11. What amulet Brihaspati bound on for the swift wind, that yields him vigor (vā́jina), more and more etc. etc.

A number of our mss. (I.O.R.D.) read vājínam in c. ⌊So do the great majority of SPP's, and he adopts it in his text. But four of his read vā́jinam.⌋ In this batch of verses (11–17) Ppp. has sundry unimportant exchanges and variants; the details are not given.

12. What amulet Brihaspati bound on for the swift wind, with that amulet the Açvins defend this plowing (kṛṣí); it yields for the two physicians greatness, more and more etc. etc.

13. What amulet Brihaspati bound on for the swift wind, Savitar, bearing that amulet, conquered with it this heaven (svàr); it yields to him pleasantness (sūnṛ́tā), more and more etc. etc.

14. What amulet Brihaspati bound on for the swift wind, bearing that amulet the waters run always unexhausted; it yields to them immortality (amṛ́ta), more and more etc. etc.

15. What amulet Brihaspati bound on for the swift wind, that healthful amulet king Varuṇa fastened on; it yields to him truth, more and more etc. etc.

16. What amulet Brihaspati bound on for the swift wind, bearing that amulet, the gods conquered by fight all worlds; it yields to them conquest, more and more etc. etc.

The pada-text resolves yudhā́jayan erroneously into yudhā́ ā́jayan (instead of aj-).

17. What amulet Brihaspati bound on for the swift wind, that healthful amulet here the deities fastened on; it yields to them everything, more and more etc. etc.

Part of our mss. (Bp.P.W.I.D.K.) ⌊and a great majority of SPP's⌋ read amuñcata in d. ⌊The error has doubtless crept in by confusion with the oft repeated abadhnata below and perhaps with the amuñcata of vs. 15. Cf. my note to vi. 74. 2.⌋

18. The seasons bound it on; they of the seasons bound it on; the year, having bound it on, defends all existence.

As noted above, this verse and the one following are wanting in Ppp.

19. The intermediate quarters bound on; the directions bound it on; the amulet created by Prajāpati hath made my haters beneath me (ádhara).

20. The Atharvans bound on; the descendants of Atharvan bound on; allied (medín) with them, the Añgirases split the strongholds of the barbarians; with it do thou slay thy haters.

21. Dhātar fastened it on; he disposed (vi-kḷp) [all] existence; with it do thou slay thy haters.

Ppp. reads in b subhūtāny akalpayat.

22. What [amulet] Brihaspati bound on for the gods, a destruction of Asuras — that amulet hath come here to me, together with sap, with splendor.

Ppp. reads in b -kṣatim, and substitutes for c, d our 23 c, d (23, 24, 26, 27, 29, 30, 33, 35 being wanting in Ppp.).

23. What [amulet] etc. etc., together with kine, with goats and sheep, together with food, with progeny.

24. What [amulet] etc. etc., together with rice and barley, together with greatness, growth.

25. What [amulet] etc. etc., with a stream of honey, of ghee, together with sweet drink — the amulet.

26. What [amulet] etc. etc., together with refreshment, with milk, together with property, with fortune.

27. What [amulet] etc. etc., together with brightness, with brilliance, together with glory, with fame.

The mss. vary greatly as to the accent of kīrtyā, only D. having the correct kīrtyā́; P.M.T. have kī́rtyā, the rest kīrtyā̀. ⌊Cf. JAOS. x. 381. Correct the Berlin edition, and also that of SPP., who has kīrtyā̀, against the majority of his authorities.⌋

28. What [amulet] etc. etc., together with all growths.

Ppp. reads ojasā tejasā saha.

29. This amulet here let the deities give to me in order to prosperity — the overpowering, dominion-increasing, rival-damaging amulet.

This verse and the one following are quoted in Kāuç. 19. 25, in connection with earlier quotations from this same hymn; ⌊the second pāda of this verse further in the schol. to 19. 22⌋.

30. Together with bráhman, with brightness, I fasten on myself the propitious one; free from rivals, rival-slaying, it hath made my rivals beneath me.

Besides the quotation in Kāuç. 19. 25 (see just above), this verse is used in the comm. to Kāuç. 26. 40. Muñcāsi in b is a misprint for muñcāmi.

31. Let this god-born amulet make me superior to my hater; whose milked-out milk these three worlds worship, let that amulet mount here upon me, in order to supremacy, at the head.

That is, probably, 'mount upon my head.' According to Prāt. ii. 65, we ought to read maṇīṣ kṛ-; ⌊this is the reading of three of SPP's mss., but of none of W's so far as noted: both texts give maṇīḥ⌋. The pāda sa mā 'yam adhi rohatu (31 e, 32 c) is quoted in the comm. to Kāuç. 19. 25. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in a. Ppp. reads, for e, sa tvā 'yam abhi rakṣatu.

32. What gods, Fathers, men, always subsist upon, let that amulet mount here upon me, in order to supremacy, at the head.

The Anukr. passes without notice the redundant syllable in a.

33. As seed in a cultivated field (urvárā) grows up in what is dragged with the plow-share, so in me let progeny, cattle, food upon food, grow up.

The Anukr. seems to read c, d as 9 + 7 syllables.

34. On whom, O sacrifice-increasing amulet, I have fastened thee, propitious, him do thou quicken unto supremacy, O amulet of a hundred sacrificial gifts.

⌊Cf. Bloomfield, AJP. xvii. 409.⌋

35. This fuel, laid on together, do thou, O Agni, enjoying, welcome with oblations; in him may we find favor, welfare, progeny, sight, cattle — in Jātavedas kindled with worship (bráhman).

Some of our mss. (R.T.p.m.D.) read agne without accent, and this is decidedly preferable, since a pāda-division before juṣāṇás gives an anuṣṭubh pāda followed by a triṣṭubh, while one after the same word gives a triṣṭubh followed by an irregular combination of syllables. The pada-text puts its mark of pāda-division after juṣāṇas, to correspond with its accentuation of ágne. ⌊Of SPP's authorities, only four have agne against nine with ágne, and his text adopts the latter reading.⌋ The concluding division is hopelessly unmetrical. The Anukr. intends us to divide 8 + 11 (or 11 + 8) : 8 + 8 + 11 = 46, a virāḍ jagatī. The verse is thrice quoted in Kāuç. (2.41; 19.24; 137.30) to accompany the piling of fuel on the fire. It is wanting in Ppp.

⌊The quoted Anukr. says for this sixth hymn pañca (i.e. 5 over 30). — Here ends the third anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 85 verses.⌋

7. Mystic: on the skambhá or frame of creation.

[Atharvan (kṣudra). — *catuçcatvāriṅçat. mantroktaskambhādhyātmadevatyam. trāiṣṭubham: *1. virāḍ jagatī; 2, 8. bhurij; 7, 13. paroṣṇih; 10, 14, 16, 18, 19. upariṣṭād bṛhatī; 11, 12, 15, 20, 22, 39. upariṣṭājjyotirjagatī; 17. 3-av. 6-p. jagatī; 21. bṛhatīgarbhā 'nuṣṭubh; 23–30, 37, 40. anuṣṭubh; 31. madhyejyotirjagatī; 32, 34, 36. upariṣṭādvirāḍ bṛhatī; 33. paravirāḍ anuṣṭubh; 35. 4-p. jagatī; 38, 42, 43. triṣṭubh; 41. ārṣī 3-p. gāyatrī; 44. ārcy anuṣṭubh (?) †.]

Found also (except vss. 13, 42–44) in Pāipp. xvii. (with slight differences of order, noted under the verses). Neither Kāuç. nor Vāit. takes any notice of the hymn. — *⌊If the hymn is trāiṣṭubham, why are these verses specified? see note to 38.⌋ †⌊As to the Anukr's description of this verse, see under the verse.⌋

Translated: Muir, v. 380–384 (vss. 1–41); Ludwig, p. 400; Scherman, p. 50 (vss. 1–41: with comment); Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 310 (sympathetic interpretation and useful introduction); Henry, 22, 68; Griffith, ii. 26. — As to the appearance of Brahm as a new conception, as a Wunderding (yakṣá: vs. 38), cf. the Kena Upanishad, § 3, vss. 14–25, and Deussen's introduction, Sechzig Upanishad's, p. 204. — The hymn is nearly related to the following one (8), and, with many a riddle and paradox, they both lead up to the fundamental conception of the Upanishads (see last verse of hymn 8), the idea of the Ātman. — In the new volume of the Ved. Stud., iii. 126 ff., Geldner discusses yakṣá at length.

1. In what member of him is penance situated? in what member of him is right (ṛtá) deposited? where is situated [his] vow (vratá), where his faith? in what member of him is truth established?

Ppp. combines in a tapo 'sya. In b, the pada-text reads asya : ádhi : ā́°hitam. There is no reason for calling the verse virāj.

2. From what member of him flames Agni? from what member blows (pū) Mātariçvan? from what member doth the moon measure out, measuring the member of great Skambha?

Skambha, lit. 'prop, support, pillar,' strangely used in this hymn as frame of the universe or half-personified as its soul. Ppp. reads in d skambhasya mahan mim-. ⌊Read vimimāno in d?⌋

3. In what member of him is situated the earth? in what member is situated the atmosphere? in what member is the sky set? in what member is situated what is beyond the sky?

This is one of the five verses (3-6, 9) which are left by the Anukr. to fall under the general description of the hymn as trāiṣṭubham. All of them are more or less redundant; this, for example, is as much bhurij as vs. 2, which was so described. Ppp. puts the verse before our 2.

4. Whither desiring to attain does Agni flame aloft? whither desiring to attain blows Mātariçvan? whither desiring to attain, the turns (āvṛ́t) go, that Skambha tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

Here we have two syllables in excess, unnoticed by the Anukr. Many of the mss. accent svit in d.

5. Whither go the half-months, whither the months, in concord with the year? whither the seasons go, whither they of the seasons, that Skambha tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

Again two unnoticed redundant syllables.

6. Whither desiring to attain run in concord the two maidens (yuvatí) of diverse form, day-and-night? whither desiring to attain, the waters go, that Skambha tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

Here it is only the last pāda that is one syllable in excess. Ppp. puts the verse before our 5.

7. In what, having established [them], Prajāpati maintained all the worlds, that Skambha tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

Many of our mss. appear to read stabdhā́ in a, but it is doubtless only carelessness in writing. Here again, as above and in the verses below where the refrain is written out, part of the mss. accent svit.

8. What that was highest, lowest, and what that was midmost Prajāpati created, of all forms — by how much did Skambha enter there? what did not enter, how much was that?

Or (in d) 'what he did not enter.' The Anukr. this time notices the redundant syllable (in a).

9. By how much did Skambha enter the existent? how much of him lies along that which will exist? what one member he made thousandfold, by how much did Skambha enter there?

The Anukr. again passes without notice the redundant syllable in c.

10. Where men know both worlds and receptacles (kóça), waters, bráhman, within which [are] both the non-existent and the existent — that Skambha tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

A part of this verse has disappeared in Ppp. ⌊The pada reads ā́paḥ and antáḥ.⌋

11. Where penance, striding forth, maintains the higher vow (vratá), where both right and faith, waters, bráhman, are set together, that Skambha etc. etc.

The verse (8 + 8 : 8 + 8 + 12 = 44) is, with those that agree with it, strangely named by the Anukr. ⌊Ppp. exchanges the places of vratam and ṛtam in b, c, and of āpas and brahma in d.⌋

12. In whom earth, atmosphere, in whom sky is set, where fire, moon, sun, wind stand fixed (ā́rpita), that Skambha etc. etc.

⌊The pada-text has ā́rpitāḥ, which SPP., with many of his saṁhitā-mss., adopts as saṁhitā-reading also; Ppp. has -tā.⌋

13. In whose member all the thirty-three gods are set together, that Skambha etc. etc.

Wanting in Ppp., as noted above.

14. Where the first-born seers, the verses, the chant, the sacrificial formula, the great one (mahī́); in whom the sole seer is fixed — that Skambha etc. etc.

Mahī́ usually designates the earth; what in this connection it should be meant to apply to is doubtful. All the saṁhitā-mss. combine ekarṣír (Ppp. eka ṛṣir), but most of them, with the Anukr., yátra ṛ́ṣ- in a. Ppp. reads bhūtakṛtas for prathamajās.

15. Where both immortality (amṛ́ta) and death are set together in man (púruṣa), of whom the ocean, the veins (nāḍī́) are set together in man, that Skambha etc. etc.

Ppp. reads, for b, puruṣaç ca samāhitāḥ, and puts the verse after our 16. Read in a mṛtyúç ca (an accent-sign slipped out of place).

16. Of whom the four directions are (sthā) the teeming (?prapyasá) veins, where the sacrifice hath strode forth, that Skambha etc. etc.

Prathamā́s at end of b in our edition seems to be a misprint for prathasā́s, intended as a correction of prapyasā́s, which last, however, is distinctly read by all our mss.* (p. pra∘pyasā́ḥ); for the formation, compare -bhyasa from root bhī (through a secondary root bhyas). *⌊Except P., which has prathasā́s; SPP. puts -mā́s into his text against his fifteen authorities, which give prapyasā́s.⌋

17. Whoever know the bráhman in man, they know the most exalted one; whoever knows the most exalted one, and whoever knows Prajāpati, whoever know the chief bráhmaṇa, they know also accordingly (anu-saṁvid) the Skambha.

For both b and f, Ppp. reads te skambham arasaṁ viduḥ (intending anusaṁviduḥ ?).

18. Whose head [was] Vāiçvānara, [whose] eye the Añgirases were, whose members the familiar demons (yātú) — that Skambha tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

19. Of whom they call bráhman the mouth, the honey-whip the tongue also, of whom they call virā́j the udder — that Skambha etc. etc.

Ppp. reads for c virājaṁ yasyo ''dhā ''hus.

20. From whom they fashioned off the verses, from whom they scraped off the sacrificial formula, of whom the chants [are] the hairs (lóman), the Atharvans-and-Añgirases the mouth — that Skambha etc. etc.

⌊Ppp. combines ṛco 'pāt- in a, and has chandāṅsy asya for sāmāni yasya in c.⌋

21. The branch of the non-existent, standing forth, people know as in a manner the highest thing; also the lower ones who worship (upa-ās) thy branch think [it?] the existent thing.

The translation of this highly obscure verse is only mechanical, and as literal as possible. Ppp. has only the first half. The definition of the Anukr. is a strange one; the verse is only a bhurig anuṣṭubh (in virtue of the iva, which properly is to be reduced to va, making a regular anuṣṭubh).

22. Where both the Ādityas and the Rudras and the Vasus are set together; where both what is and what is to be, [and] all the worlds are established — that Skambha tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

23. Of whom the thirty-three gods always defend the treasure (nidhí): that treasure, which, O gods, ye defend, who at present knoweth?

24. Where the bráhman-knowing gods worship the chief bráhman — whoso verily knoweth them eye to eye (pratyákṣam), he may be a Brahman (brahmán), a knower.

Perhaps an acceptable emendation in d would be bráhma: i.e. 'he may be (may be regarded as) one knowing the bráhman': cf. ÇB. xiv. 6. 9¹¹. Ppp. reads, for c, d, yo vāi tad brahmaṇo veda taṁ vāi brahmavido viduḥ. Read in a devā́ (an accent-sign dropped out).

25. Great (bṛhánt) by name [are] those gods who were born out of the non-existent; that one member of Skambha people call non-existent beyond.

The second half-verse is capable of other interpretations; Ludwig emends parás to purā́; Muir, tacitly, to páram; Scherman translates it 'afterwards' (nachher); Ppp. reads instead puras. One of our mss. reads in b 'satas p-; ⌊and so does SPP. without report of variant⌋.

26. Where the skambhá, generating forth, rolled out the ancient one, that one member of the skambhá they know also accordingly [as] the ancient one.

Or, 'know etc. that ancient one as one member of the skambha.' Ppp. again (as in 17 b, f) arasaṁ viduḥ in d. Read in our edition prajanáyan in a.

27. In whose member the thirty-three gods shared severally the limbs (gā́tra) — those thirty-three gods verily only (éka) the bráhman-knowers know.

Or (so Muir), 'some bráhman-knowers.' Ppp. reads in b gātrāṇi bhejire.

28. People know the golden-embryo [as] highest, not to be overcrowed (anatyudyá); the skambhá in the beginning poured forth that gold within the world.

Ppp. puts this verse after our 30.

29. In the skambhá the worlds, in the skambhá penance, in the skambhá right is set; thee, O skambhá, I know plainly [as] set all together in Indra.

The mss. are much at variance in regard to skámbha in c; all save W. (the poorest and least trustworthy of all) end the word with m, and O.s.m.D. accent skambhám. That skámbha is really intended can hardly admit of question; Ppp. appears to read it.

30. In Indra the worlds, in Indra penance, in Indra right is set; thee, O Indra, I know plainly [as] all established in the skambhá.

The translation implies emendation in c of índram to índra. Of course, it is possible to render índram here, and skambhám in 29 c, but where the whole sense is so mystically obscure alterations help little.

31. Name with name he calls aloud, before the sun, before the dawn; as first the goat (? ajá) came into being, he went unto that autocracy beyond which there is nothing else existent.

Ppp. reads johavīmi in a, and jagāma (for iyāya) in d. The translators all understand ajás here as 'the unborn one,' and with more reason than in most places elsewhere. The description given by the Anukr. of the very irregular verse (8 + 8 : 10 + 10 + 11 = 47) is altogether ill-fitting.

32. Of whom earth is model (pramā́) and atmosphere belly; who made the sky his head — to that chief bráhman be homage.

In this and the two following verses and vs. 36 we have the anomaly that bráhman, neuter, is apparently referred to by the masculine relative yás (in accordance with which the genitive yásya is also doubtless to be understood as masculine); perhaps we ought to render the last pāda thus: 'to him, [who is] the chief bráhman,' etc. ⌊Cf. Deussen, p. 312.⌋ The verse is shorter by two syllables than verses 34 and 36, with which the Anukr. reckons it, and, on the other hand, agrees with 33, to which the Anukr. gives a different name.

33. Of whom the sun is eye, and the moon that grows new again; who made Agni his mouth — to that chief bráhman be homage.

Ppp. combines cakrā "syaṁ in c. As to the meter, see the note to vs. 32. ⌊The Anukr. seems to mean that this is an anuṣṭubh of which the last pāda is one of 10 syllables (virāj).⌋

34. Of whom the wind [was] breath-and-expiration, [of whom] the Añgirases were the eye; who made the quarters fore-knowing (?prajñána) — to that chief bráhman be homage.

Ppp. gets rid of the obscure prajñānīs by reading for c divaṁ yaç cakre mūrdhānaṁ. The Anukr. describes correctly vss. 34 and 36.

35. The skambhá sustains both heaven-and-earth here; the skambhá sustains the wide atmosphere; the skambhá sustains the six wide directions; into the skambhá hath entered this whole existence (bhúvana).

The pada-text has (as translated) skambhé in d. Ppp. puts the verse after our 36, and reads in a pṛthivīṁ dyām utā 'mūṁ, and in d combines skambhāi 'daṁ. The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregularity of the verse (14 + 11 : 11 + 13 = 49). ⌊Bergaigne, Rel. Véd., ii. 122, would separate pradiças from urvīs.⌋

36. Who, born from toil, from penance, completely attained all worlds; who made soma all his own — to that chief bráhman be homage.

The sense of 'own' in c is given by the middle verb-form.

37. How does the wind not cease (il)? how does the mind not rest (ram)? why (kím) do the waters, seeking to attain truth, at no time soever cease?

38. A great monster (yakṣá) in the midst of the creation (bhúvana), strode (?krāntá) in penance on the back of the sea — in it are set (çri) whatever gods there are, like the branches of a tree roundabout the trunk.

The first pāda is repeated below, as 8. 15 c. Ppp. combines in d to paritāi 'va. Notwithstanding the lack of a syllable in a, the Anukr. ⌊balancing a with redundant d?⌋ calls the verse simply a triṣṭubh; the hymn is so long that it has apparently been forgotten that the whole was called trāiṣṭubha, and that therefore no triṣṭubh needs a further specification. Since there are more regular anuṣṭubh-verses than triṣṭubh also, we should expect rather the designation ānuṣṭubham for the hymn. Read at end of a mádhye (an accent-sign dropped out). ⌊With regard to Brahm as a "wonder" (yakṣá), see introduction.⌋

39. Unto which with the two hands, with the two feet, with speech, with hearing, with sight; unto which the gods continually render (prayam) tribute, unmeasured in the measured out — that skambhá tell [me]: which forsooth is he?

Notwithstanding the discordance of case, vímite is perhaps coördinate with yásmāi. Ppp. omits the first two pādas. The dual and the repetition of yásmāi make it probable that we have to supply in them 'one renders tribute,' or the like. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in d.

40. Smitten away is his darkness; he is separated from evil; in him are all the three lights that are in Prajāpati.

41. He who knows the golden reed (vetasá) standing in the sea — he verily is in secret Prajāpati.

All the mss. have in c gúhya pr-; perhaps gúhā was the original reading; our text has emended to gúhyaḥ.

The remaining verses are wanting in Ppp.; they appear to constitute no original part of the hymn. They are also not translated by Muir and Scherman.

42. A certain pair of maidens, of diverse form, weave, betaking themselves to it, the six-pegged web; the one draws forth the threads (tántu), the other sets [them]; they wrest not off (apa-vṛj), they go not to an end.

Ápa vṛñjāte perhaps means only 'break off, finish.' ⌊Ná gamāto, 'they shall not go' etc.⌋ A nearly related verse is found in TB. (ii. 5. 5^3): dvé svásārāu vayatas tántram etát sanātánaṁ vítataṁ ṣáṇmayūkham: ávā 'nyā́ṅs tántūn kiráto dhattó anyā́n nā́ 'pa vṛjyā́te (? both text and comm. have in the Calc. ed. nā́ṣapṛjyā́te ⌊and in the Poona ed. nā́vapṛjyā́te⌋) ná gamāte ántam; this is a preferable version especially of c. We have to resolve taṇ-tṛ-am in order to make a full triṣṭubh. ⌊The TB. comment makes the verse refer to day and night: cf. RV. i. 113. 3.⌋

43. Of them, as of two women dancing about, I do not distinguish (vi-jñā) which is beyond; a man (púmāṅs), weaves it, ties [it] up; a man hath borne it about upon the firmament (nā́ka).

The last two pādas, with 44, correspond to RV. x. 130. 2, which reads: púmāṅ enaṁ tanuta út kṛṇatti púmān ví tatne ádhi nā́ke asmín: imé mayū́khā úpa sedur ū sádaḥ sā́māni cakrus tásarāṇy ótave. Our úd gṛṇatti is only a corruption, but simulates a form from root grath, and is rendered accordingly. ⌊For the exchange of surd and sonant, cf. Roth, ZDMG. xlviii. 110 and note to ii. 13. 3.⌋ The true scanning in a is doubtless -yanti-or 'va; ⌊better -tior iva, with jagatī cadence?⌋.

44. These pegs propped up the sky; the chants they made shuttles for weaving.

See the note to the preceding verse. Both here and in 42 b some of the mss. read mayūṣa. Bp. reads at the end yā́tave. The Anukr. says of the verse ime mayūkhā ity ekāvasānā pañcapadā nicṛt padapañktir ⌊i.e. $5 + 5 + 5 + 5 + 4 = 24$⌋ ārcy anuṣṭub dvipadā vā ⌊i.e. $12 + 12 = 24$⌋ pañcapadā nicṛt padapañktir iti. ⌊The last three or four words seem to be mere repetition.⌋

⌊The quoted Anukr. says caturdaça (i.e. 14 over 30).⌋

8. Mystic.

Found in greater part (not vss. 1, 7, 15, 18, 30–44) in Pāipp. xvi. (in the verse-order 2, 8, 5, 9, 3, 4, 12, 6, 14, 29, 13, 11, 10, 16, 19–28, 17). Not noticed in Kāuç., and only one verse (42) used in Vāit.

Translated: Muir, v. 368 n., 386 (parts); Ludwig, p. 395; Scherman, p. 60 (parts); Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 318 (cf. 310); Henry, 27, 75; Griffith, ii. 34. — Deussen's interpretation should on no account be overlooked. — Cf. the introduction to hymn 7.

1. He who is set over both what is and what is to be and everything, and whose alone is the heaven — to that chief bráhman be homage.

The concluding pāda is that of some of the verses of the preceding hymn (see vs. 32, above, and note).

2. By the skambhá these two stand fixed apart, both sky and earth; in the skambhá [is] all this that has soul, what [is] breathing and what winking.

The Anukr. is scrupulous enough not to sanction the irregular combination skambhé 'dám in c; why it calls the verse bṛhatīgarbhā, instead of simply bhurij (like vs. 5), it were hard to say.

3. Three offspring (prajā́) went an over-going; others settled (ni-viç) about the sun (?arká); great stood the traverser (vimā́na) of space (rájas); the yellow one (m.) entered into the yellow ones (f.).

The verse is RV. viii. 90 (101). 14, which reads, for a, prajā́ ha tisró atyā́yam īyur; at end of b, viviçre; for c, d, bṛhád dha tasthāu bhúvaneṣv antáḥ pávamāno harita ā́ viveça (the last pāda is our 40 d below). AA. (ii. 1. 14) has the same version as RV. JB. (ii. 224) has a version agreeing in the main with RV., but beginning like ours, tisro ha prajā, ending b with viviçyur, beginning c with bṛhan (but bṛhad in a following brief exposition); in c, again, with our text, rajaso vimānāi 'va (in the exposition simply vimāne); in d as RV. The Anukr. takes no notice of the defective fourth pāda. Ppp. reads na (for ha) and vimānaṁ in c, and combines prajā 'ty-, and anyā 'rkam.

4. Twelve fellies, one wheel, three naves — who understands that? therein are inserted (ā́hata) three hundred and sixty pins (çaṅkú), pegs (?khī́la) that are immovable.

The verse is also RV. i. 164. 48, which, however, has a very different second half: tásmin sākáṁ triçatā́ ná çaṅkávo 'rpitā́ḥ ṣaṣṭír ná calācalā́saḥ. The 'pins' or 'pegs' must be the equivalents of spokes. The three naves are probably seasons ⌊Hot, Wet, and Cold: cf. Bühler, Epigraphia Indica, ii. 262⌋, though the number is unusual. Ppp. reads kelās for khīlās in d. The Anukr. does not heed that c is a jagatī pāda. ⌊Kaṭha-reading nā́bhyāni, WZKM. xii. 282.⌋

5. This, O Savitar, do thou distinguish: six [are] twins, one [is] sole-born; they seek participation (apitvá) in him who of them is the sole sole-born.

The usual twelve months, two to a season, and the thirteenth occasional intercalary one, are doubtless meant. Ppp. reads in b yomokas (for yamā ekas). ⌊The pada-mss. of both W. and SPP. have api°tvám; but in the Index W. assumes that āpitvám is the word. Both are well authenticated in BR.; but apitvám seems to fit best here (cf. ÇB. iv. 1. 3^{11}).⌋

6. Being manifest (āvís), [it is] deposited in secret; the great track (padá), "aged" (járat) by name; there is set (ā́rpita) this all, [there is] established what stirs, what breathes.

7. One-wheeled it rolls, one-rimmed, thousand-syllabled, forth in front, down behind; with a half it has generated all existence; what its [other] half is — what has become of that?

This agrees nearly with xi. 4. 22 below, and Ppp. has it there, though not here. The sun is evidently meant, with half his course lost to view.

8. One carrying five carries the summit (ágra) of them; side-horses, harnessed, carry also along; what is not gone of it was seen, not what is gone; the higher thing [is] closer, the lower more distant.

⌊Or (c) 'of him' (asya).⌋ The sense is wholly obscure, and the version a mechanical one. Pañcavāhī́ may be either fem. (of -vāhá: so çatavāhī́ v. 17. 12) or masc. (of -vāhín); Pet. Lexx. say 'mit Fünfen bespannt.' Some of the mss. read pṛ́ṣṭhayas in b, as often in such cases. Ppp. has asya instead of eṣām at end of a.

9. A bowl (camasá) with orifice sideways, bottom-side up — in it is deposited glory of all forms; there sit together the seven seers, who have become the keepers of it, the great one.

The verse has a correspondent in ÇB. xiv. 5. 24 (BAU. ii. 2. 4). This reads at the beginning arvā́gbilas; in c, tásya . . . tī́re for tát . . . sākám; and, for d, vā́g aṣṭamī́ bráhmaṇā saṁvidānā́. The Brāhmaṇa itself explains the head as intended, the seven seers being the seven prāṇas or senses (the seven orifices of the head); this is extremely implausible. Ppp. reads at beginning of c atrā ''sata.

10. The one which is applied (yuj) in front and which behind, which is applied in all cases and which in every case, by which the sacrifice is extended forward — that I ask of thee: which one of the verses is it?

The verse is quoted by pratīka in GB. i. 1. 22. All our saṁhitā-mss. save one (R.) ⌊and the great majority of SPP's⌋ read at the end sá rcā́m (Ppp. the same), and the words are quoted under Prāt. iii. 49 as example of that combination ⌊p. sá ṛcā́m⌋. The Anukr. does not heed that b is a jagatī pāda. Ppp. reads twice yo 'ta for yā ca.

11. What stirs, flies, and what stands, and what is breathing, not breathing, winking — that, all-formed, sustains the earth; that, combining, becomes one only.

One may conjecture apānát for áprāṇat in b. The Anukr. does not heed that two of the pādas are triṣṭubh. Ppp. reads at end of b ca tiṣṭhat, and, in c, dyām utā 'muṁ ⌊at 7. 35 it was fem.⌋ for viçvarūpam.

12. What is endless, stretched out on many sides; what is endless, and what has an end, ending together — these (two) the lord of the firmament keeps (car) separating (vi-ci), knowing what is and what shall be of it.

Ppp. reads samakte at end of b, prajānan at end of c, and yadi for uta in d. Probably earth and heaven are intended. The metrical definition of the Anukr. fits the verse (9 + 10 : 11 + 10 = 40) fairly.

13. Prajāpati goes about (car) within the womb; not being seen, he is manifoldly born (vi-jā); with a half he has generated all existence; what his [other] half is — which sign is that?

The third pāda is the same with 7 c above; the second half-verse is found below as xi. 4. 22 c, d; to the first half-verse corresponds VS. xxxi. 19 a, b and TA. iii. 13. 1^3 a, b: both reading ájāyamānas at beginning of b; ⌊so Kaṭha-hss., p. 84⌋. Ppp. reads in b prajāyate, and, for c, d, ardhene 'daṁ pari babhūva viçvam etasyā 'rdhaṁ kim u taj jajāna. The Anukr. takes no notice of the jagatī pāda b.

14. Him bearing water aloft, as a water-bearer (f.) with a vessel (kumbhá), all see with the eye, not all know with the mind.

Some mss. (P.M.I.) accent vidúḥ at the end.

15. In the distance it dwells with the full one, in the distance it is abandoned by the deficient one — the great monster (yakṣá) in the midst of existence; to it the kingdom-bearers bear tribute.

The verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp. ⌊Pāda c occurs as x. 7. 38 a: see note thereon and introd. to hymn 7.⌋

16. Whence the sun arises, and where he goes to rest — that same I think the chief (jyeṣṭhá); that nothing whatever surpasses.

The Kaṭha Up. ⌊iv. 9⌋ has a nearly corresponding verse: yataç co 'd eti sūryo 'staṁ yatra ca gacchati: taṁ devāḥ sarve 'rpitās tad u nā 'ty eti kaç cana; and the first half of this occurs also in ÇB. xiv. 4. 3^{34} (BAU. i. 5. 23). The Anukr. omits to define the meter (anuṣṭubh) of the verse.

17. They who hitherward, in the middle, or also anciently, speak round about him who knows the Veda, they all speak around the sun (ādityá), Agni [as] second, and the threefold swan (haṅsá).

The verse is found also in TA. (ii. 15^8), which omits mádhye and reads purāṇé in a, and tṛtī́yam (for trivṛ́tam) in d. ⌊Cf. Kaṭha-hss., p. 63.⌋ Our pada-text ⌊as also SPP's⌋ reads near the beginning arvā́ñ, which is doubtless an error for arvā́k (though TA. reads arvā́ñ utá). Perhaps védam in b is to be rendered simply 'knowledge.' The Anukr. takes no notice of the two redundant syllables in c.

18. A thousand days' journey [are] expanded (vi-yam) the wings of him, of the yellow swan flying to heaven (svargá); he, putting all the gods in his breast, goes, viewing together all existences.

The verse is found again below as xiii. 2. 38; 3. 14. It is, as noted above, wanting here in Ppp.

19. By truth he burns aloft; by bráhman he looks abroad hitherward, by breath he breathes crosswise — he on whom rests (çritá) the chief thing.

20. Whoever indeed knows those two churning-sticks, with which is churned out what is good (vásu), he may think himself to know the chief thing; he may know the great bráhmaṇa ⌊neut.⌋.

21. Footless came he into being in the beginning; he in the beginning brought the heaven (svàr); having become four-footed, enjoyable, he took to himself all enjoyment (bhójana).

Ppp. reads, for b, so 'gre asurā 'bhavat.

22. Enjoyable shall he become, likewise shall he eat much food, who shall worship (upa-ās) the everlasting god who gives superiority (uttarávant).

⌊After bhógyo bhavat, for which there are no variants, Bp. has a mark of pāda-division; but the Anukr. evidently scans as 12 : 8 + 8, eliding the a of ánnam after a pragṛhya.⌋ Bhā́gyo at the beginning is a misprint for bhógyo.

23. Everlasting they call him, also may he be at present ever-renewed; day and night are generated (pra-jā) in each other's forms.

The pada-text reads anyáḥ : anyásya in d, although the masc. anyás shows that the two words are virtually a compound, as later.

24. A hundred, a thousand, a myriad, a hundred million, an innumerable [number], is his own entered into him; that of him they slay, even as he looks on; therefore this god shines (ruc) thus.

Instead of eṣa etat at the end, Ppp. reads what appears to be agha bhavat. The version is as literal (and as unintelligent) as possible. The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregularity of the meter; it is possible, by violence, to count only 44 syllables in the verse.

25. One thing is more minute (áṇu) than a child (bā́la), also one is hardly (né 'va) seen; than that a more embracing deity, is she dear to me.

Ppp. reads, for a, ārāgramātraṁ dadṛçe, and begins c with ataṣ pa-, thus doing nothing to help our comprehension of the wholly obscure verse.

26. This beautiful one (f.) [is] unaging, an immortal in the house of a mortal; for whom she [was] made, he lies; he who made [her] grew old.

Ppp. reads tasmāi for yasmāi in c. ⌊The natural reading of b would be mártyasya amṛ́tā gṛhé; but⌋ the definition of the Anukr. forbids us to make ⌊it. Can a sā́ have dropped out before çáye sá? Cf. note to iv. 5. 5.⌋

27. Thou art woman, thou [art] man, thou boy, or also girl; thou, when aged, totterest (vañc) with a staff; thou, when born, becomest facing all ways.

Ppp. politely puts kumārī first and kumāras second in b, and reads jātam in d. The verse is found, without variant, in Çvet. Up. iv. 3. It is so far correctly described by the Anukr. that it counts 37 syllables (7 + 10 : 9 + 11 = 37).

28. Both their father, or also their son; both the chief or also the meanest (kaniṣṭhá) of them; the one god, who has entered into the mind, born the first, and he within the womb.

The verse is also found, quoted as a çloka, in JUB. 85 (iii. 10. 12): utāi 'ṣāṁ jāiṣṭha uta vā kaniṣṭha utāi 'ṣāṁ putra uta vā pitāi 'ṣām: eko ha devo manasi praviṣṭaḥ pūrvo ha jajñe sa u garbhe 'ntaḥ. Ppp. reads, for a, b, ute 'va jyeṣṭho 'ta vā kaniṣṭho 'tāi 'ṣa bhrāto 'ta vā pitāi 'ṣaḥ; and, in d, pūrvo jātaḥ.

29. The full from the full he bends up (ud-ac); the full is poured with the full; also that may we know today, whence that is poured out.

This verse is akin with ⌊the oft-repeated⌋ one in ÇB. xiv. 8. 1 (BAU. v. 1): pūrṇám adáḥ pūrṇám idám pūrṇā́t pūrṇám úd acyate etc. What follows of the hymn is (as noted above) wanting in Ppp.

30. She, everlasting, born indeed of old, she, ancient, encompassed (pari-bhū) all; the great goddess of the dawn, shining forth, she looks forth by every one who winks.

The Anukr. calls the verse bhurij on account of the redundant syllable in b, not heeding the corresponding deficiency in c.

31. The deity, Avi by name, sits enveloped with right; by her form these trees [are] green, green-garlanded.

Or, 'by the form of her, the green-garlanded one' (so Ludwig). Ávi means 'sheep,' but is possibly here a derivative from the root av 'favor, aid.' All the saṁhitā-mss. combine in a, b -ta ṛténa.

32. Him that is near by he (?) deserts not; him that is near by he (?) sees not; see the wisdom (kā́vya) of the god: he died not, he grows not old.

There is nothing to determine the subject of the verbs in a, b; Ludwig renders 'she.'

33. The voices sent forth by the unpreceded one — they speak as they should (yathāyathám); where they go speaking, that [people] call the great bráhmaṇa ⌊n.⌋.

34. Where both gods and men (manuṣyà) are set (çritá) as spokes in a nave — I ask thee of the flower (púṣpa) of the waters, where that by magic was placed.

The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable ⌊perhaps the first ca?⌋ in a.

35. They by whom the wind sent forth blows on, who give the five quarters together (sadhryàñc), the gods who thought themselves above (ati-man) the offering (ā́huti), conductors of the waters — which were they?

The first half-verse is found also in Ppp. ⌊xvi.⌋, but not in connection with the rest of the hymn. The Anukr. does not heed that a is defective by one syllable. Read in b, with all ⌊W's and SPP's⌋ mss., dádante; the form is from the same secondary root dad as the sing. dadate in 36 c. ⌊JUB. (i. 34) has this verse, putting it in the mouth of Pṛthu Vāinya, and its answer (vs. 36), with appended Brāhmaṇa-comment. It reads samīcīḥ for sadhrīcīḥ of our 35 b, and āhutīs in c.⌋

36. One of them clothes himself in this earth; one encompassed the atmosphere; he of them who is disposer (vidhartṛ́) gives the sky; some defend respectively all regions (áçā).

⌊JUB. (see under vs. 35) has ekas for eṣām of our c and anye for eke of our d.⌋

37. Whoso may know the stretched-out string in which these offspring (prajā́) are woven in, whoso may know the string of the string, he may know the great bráhmaṇa.

38. I know the stretched-out string in which these offspring are woven in; the string of the string I know, likewise the great bráhmaṇa.

39. As between heaven-and-earth Agni went, burning on, all-consuming, where stood beyond they (f.) of one husband — where perchance was Mātariçvan then?

The bṛhatī of the Anukr. ⌊scanning 11 + 9 : 11 + 11⌋ is the second pāda, read with ālt included as a part (the pada-text so marks the division) — which is, of course, artificial and wrong. ⌊Read as 12 + 8 : 11 + 11, pronouncing -dāvías and kúe 'vā "sīn.⌋ Ludwig's 'spouses of the only one' for ékapatnīs is against the accent.

40. Mātariçvan was entered into the waters; the gods were entered into the seas; great stood the traverser of space; the purifying one entered into the green ones.

The third pāda is identical with 3 c above, and the fourth with RV. viii. 90 (101). 14 d. 'The purifying one' is probably here the wind.

41. Higher, as it were, than the gāyatrī́, upon the immortal (amṛ́ta) he strode out; they who know completely chant with chant — where then was seen the goat?

Or, 'the unborn one' (ajá: so Ludwig); the verse is too utterly obscure to let us choose between them.

42. The reposer, the assembler of good things, like god Savitar, of true ordinances (-dhárman), he stood like Indra in the conflict for riches.

The verse corresponds with pādas a, c, d of RV. x. 139. 3 and of VS. xii. 66, TS. iv. 2. 5^{4}, MS. ii. 7. 12. RV. reads at the beginning rāyó budhnáḥ (for nivéçanaḥ); the other texts have at the end pathīnā́m. The verse is quoted in Vāit. 28. 28.

43. The lotus-flower of nine doors, covered with three strands (guṇá) — what soulful prodigy (yakṣá) is within it, that the bráhman-knowers know.

The 'nine doors' indicate that the human body with its nine orifices is intended; the three guṇas are probably the three temperaments familiar under that name later. The second half-verse was found above as 2. 32 c, d ⌊cf. vs. 31⌋. ⌊☞ See p. 1045.⌋

44. Free from desire, wise (dhī́ra), immortal, self-existent, satisfied with sap, not deficient in any respect — knowing that wise, unaging, young soul, one is not afraid of death.

⌊See Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 334: "die erste und älteste Stelle, die wir kennen, in der rückhaltlos der Ātman als Weltprincip proklamiert wird, AV. x. 8. 44." Cf. also p. 312, end. Muir, Metrical Translations from Sanskrit Writers, p. 1, gives a metrical paraphrase of the verse.⌋

9. With the offering of a cow and a hundred rice-dishes.

[Atharvan.— saptaviṅçati. mantroktaçatāudanadevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 1. triṣṭubh; 12. pathyāpañkti; 25. dvyuṣṇiggarbhā 'nuṣṭubh; 26. 5-p. bṛhatyanuṣṭubuṣṇiggarbhā jagatī; 27. 5-p. atijāgatānuṣṭubgarbhā çakvarī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. The hymn (vs. 1) is quoted in Kāuç. 65. 1 to accompany the closing of the mouth of a victim, and some of the verses (1–3, 26, 27) in other neighboring parts of the sūtra. In Vāit. is used a single verse (26).

Translated: Ludwig, p. 270 (in great part); Henry, 32, 83; Griffith, ii. 42.

1. Fasten thou up the mouths of the mischief-making ⌊ones⌋; bring (arpay-) this thunderbolt upon our rivals; given by Indra, first, with a hundred rice-dishes, cousin-slaying, the success (gātú) of the sacrificer.

It is a cow (f.) accompanied by a whole hundred of odanas or offerings of boiled rice, that is here the subject; we had in various places above a goat (m.) with five such additions. Ppp. reads in d yajamānāya. The Anukr. does not heed that the third pāda is jagatī.

2. Be thy skin the sacrificial hearth, [be] the hairs which [are] thine the barhís; this rein (raçanā́) hath seized thee; let this pressing-stone dance over thee.

The parts of this and the preceding verse are prescribed in Kāuc. 65. 1–3 to be used to accompany certain sacrificial acts to which they are adapted.

3. Be thy tail-tuft the sprinklers; let thy tongue do the cleansing, O inviolable one; do thou, having become clean, fit for sacrifice, go on to heaven, O thou of the hundred rice-dishes.

The form bā́lās (which Ppp. also reads) ⌊as against vā́lās⌋ is vouched for ⌊incidentally⌋ by the comm. to Prāt. i. 66 ⌊in its discussion of the exchange of r and l⌋. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 65. 9. Sam mārṣṭu = 'serve as sammārjana.'

4. Whoso cooks her of the hundred rice-dishes, he is adapted to the fulfilment of wishes; for all his priests (ṛtvíj), being gratified, go as they should.

All the saṁhitā-mss. read in c asya rtv-.

5. He ascends the heavenly road (svargá), where is yon triple heaven of the heaven (dív), who, making [her] cake-naveled, gives her of the hundred rice-dishes.

The meaning and connection of c are not very clear. Ludwig renders "and makes her the middle point of the apū́pa," which is against the accent; probably 'adding cakes numerous enough to cover her.' ⌊Is it not virtually equivalent to 'putting a cake on her navel,' as preparatory to sacrificing her?⌋ Ppp. has hiraṇyajyotiṣam instead of apūpanābhim (cf. the next verse). The resolution kṛtu-ā́, necessary to make the verse a regular anuṣṭubh, is rather harsh.

6. He obtains those worlds, [those] which are heavenly and ⌊those⌋ which are earthly, who, having made [her] lighted with gold, gives her of the hundred rice-dishes.

Ppp. reads for b yeṣa devās samāsate, and has apūpanābhim here in c, instead of in 5 c.

7. What people are thy quellers, O heavenly one ⌊f.⌋, and what thy cookers, they shall all guard thee: be not afraid of them, thou of the hundred rice-dishes.

Ppp. puts this verse before our 5.

That is, probably, exceed or surpass even this important ceremony.

9. The gods, the Fathers, men (manuṣyà), and they that are Gandharvas-and-Apsarases — they shall all guard thee; do thou run beyond the over-night sacrifice (atirātrá).

Ppp. reads gandharvāpsaraso devā rudrāñgirasas tvā. ⌊Cf. note to vs. 8.⌋

10. He obtains the atmosphere, the sky, the earth, the Ādityas, the Maruts, the quarters, all worlds, who gives her of the hundred rice-dishes.

11. Sprinkling forth ghee, well-portioned, the divine one will go to the gods; hurt not him who cooks thee, O inviolable one; go on to heaven, O thou of the hundred rice-dishes.

Ppp. reads in b devāñ devī.

12. The gods that are stationed (-sad) in the sky, and that are stationed in the atmosphere, and these that are upon the earth — to them do thou always yield (duh) milk, butter, also honey.

Several of the mss., with a carelessness common in such cases, read dhukṣa in d. We have to resolve deva-ā in a, in order to make a normal pāda. Ppp. rectifies the meter of a by reading instead pitaras for devās. ⌊Ppp. combines -ṣado 'ntar- in a–b.⌋

13. What head is thine, what mouth is thine, what ears and what jaws are thine — let them yield to thy giver curd, milk, butter, also honey.

Ppp. reads ye te çṛñge for second half of a, and so for second part of b yāu ca te akṣāu ⌊cf. vs. 14⌋.

14. What lips are thine, what nostrils, what horns, and what thine eyes — let them yield etc. etc.

Ppp. reads instead yat te mukhaṁ yā te jihvā ye dantā yā ca te hanū.

15. What lungs are thine, what heart, the purītát with the throat — let them yield etc. etc.

Yás at the beginning is emended from yát, which all the mss. ⌊both W's and SPP's⌋ read.

16. What liver is thine, what two mátasnās, what entrail, and what thine intestines — let them yield etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b yā ''ntrāṇi.

17. What plāçí is thine, what rectum (?vaniṣṭhú), what (two) paunches, and what thy skin — let them yield etc. etc.

18. What marrow is thine, what bone, what flesh, and what blood — let them yield etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in a yāny asthīni, thus rectifying the meter. The Anukr. does not notice the lacking syllable in the pāda. Yás at the beginning is again emendation for the yát of all the mss. ⌊both W's and SPP's⌋.

19. What fore-legs (bāhú) are thine, what shanks (doṣán), what shoulders ⌊áṅsa⌋, and what thy hump — let them yield etc. etc.

Ppp. reads, after bāhū, yāu te aṅsāu dūhanaṁ yā ca etc.

20. What neck-bones (grīvā́) are thine, what shoulder-bones ⌊skandhā́⌋, what side-bones (pṛṣṭí), and what ribs (párçu) — let them yield etc. etc.

The Anukr. does not notice the lacking syllable in a.

21. What thighs are thine, knee-joints, what hips, and what thy rump — let them yield etc. etc.

22. What tail is thine, what thy tail-tuft, what udder, and what thy teats — let them yield etc. etc.

23. What hind-thighs are thine, what dew-claws, [what] pasterns (ṛchára), and what thy hoofs — let them yield etc. etc.

One of our mss. (O.) reads in b ṛtsárās, and Ppp. supports it by giving kṛtsarās. ⌊The reading ṛtsárās seems to be supported by E. as well as by O. and Ppp. Its phonetic relation to ṛcchárās resembles that of Pāli ucchādana, jighacchā, bībhaccha to Skt. utsādana, jighatsā, bībhatsa (Kuhn, Pāli-gram., p. 52, gives kucchā = kutsā, vaccha = vatsa). Unless I err, our vulgate text here shows a Prākritism such as we have good right to assume also at iii. 12. 4, in case of the much-discussed ucchántu, which may be a mere vernacularized rendering of ukṣántu (cf. tacchaka = takṣaka, Kuhn, l.c.).⌋

24. What hide is thine, O thou of the hundred rice-dishes, what hairs, O inviolable one — let them yield etc. etc.

25. Let thy two breasts (kroḍā́) be sacrificial cakes, smeared over with sacrificial butter; having made them wings, O divine one, do thou carry him who cooks thee to heaven (dív).

The Anukr. very strangely ignores the two resolutions in b and c, and reckons the pādas as 7 syllables each.

26. What in the mortar, on the pestle, and on the hide, or what rice-grain, [what] kernel in the winnowing-basket, or what the wind, Mātariçvan, blowing (pū), shook (math) — let Agni as hótar make that well-offered.

It is very much out of place to reckon five pādas (12 + 9 : 8 + 7 + 11 = 47) in this verse; but the pada-ms. supports the Anukr., by making a mark of pāda-division after mātaríçvā; evidently either this word or pávamānas (rather the former) is an intrusion in c. ⌊The last pāda we had as vi. 71. 1 d.⌋ The verse is quoted in Vāit. 4. 9; also (with vi. 122, 123) in Kāuç. 63. 29, to accompany the closing libations. Ppp. reads in b ye vā çūrpe taṇḍulāṣ kaṇāḥ.

27. The heavenly waters, rich in honey, dripping with ghee, I seat in separate succession in the hands of the priests (brahmán); with what desire I now pour you on, let all that fall to my lot; may we be lords of wealth.

Ppp. begins a with imā āpo madh-, and c with yatkāme 'dam. Compare the verses vi. 122. 5 and xi. 1. 27, which are in part coincident with this; ⌊also MGS. i. 5. 4 and Index under devīr āpo⌋. The verse (rather than i. 4. 3, which has the same pratīka) is quoted in Kāuç. 65. 8, to accompany the setting of water pots. The metrical definition of the Anukr. suits well enough.

10. Extolling the cow (vaçā́).

[Kaçyapa.—catustriṅçat. mantroktavaçādevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 1. kakummatī; 5. skandhogrīvābṛhatī; 6, 8, 10. virāj; 23. bṛhatī; 24. upariṣṭādbṛhatī; 26. āstārapañkti; 27. çañkumatī; 29. 3-p. virāḍ gāyatrī; 31. uṣṇiggarbhā; 32. virāṭ pathyābṛhatī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. ⌊with the verse-sequence 15 a, b, 14 c, d, 13, 14 a, b, 15 c, d, 17, 16, 18; vs. 3 is lacking⌋. Not noticed in Vāit., and only once in Kāuç., at 66. 20, where vs. 1 (or the hymn ⌊rather the hymn⌋) is used, with xii. 4, to accompany the sprinkling of an offered cow.

Translated: Ludwig, p. 534; Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 234 (cf. p. 230 f., 233 f.); Henry, 35, 85; Griffith, ii. 45.

1. Homage to thee while being born, homage also to thee when born; to thy tail-tuft, hoofs, form, O inviolable one, be homage.

The Anukr. chooses to reject the common resolution -bhi-as (twice) in c.

2. Whoso may know the seven advances (?pravát), [and] may know the seven distances, whoso may know the head of the sacrifice—he may accept the cow (vaçā́).

Ppp. reads in b veda instead of vidyāt. The verse is quoted by pratīka in GB. i. 2. 16.

3. I know the seven advances, I know the seven distances; I know the head of the sacrifice, and the outlooking soma in her.

This verse, with a part of the preceding one, is wanting in Ppp. ⌊Asyām, sc. vaçā́yām.⌋

4. By whom the sky, by whom the earth, by whom these waters are guarded—the cow, of a thousand streams (-dhā́rā), we address with worship (bráhman).

We need to resolve -dhāra-ām in c in order to make out the full pāda which the Anukr. assumes.

5. A hundred metal dishes (kaṅsá), a hundred milkers, a hundred guardians, upon the back of her; the gods that breathe in her, they know the cow singly.

The verse (9 + 11 : 8 + 8 = 36) is a bṛhatī in number of syllables only.

6. Having the sacrifice for feet, cheer (írā-) for milk, svadhā́ for breath, being mahī́lukā, the cow, having Parjanya for spouse, goes unto the gods with worship (bráhman).

Ppp. reads for a, b yajñapatir ākṣīrāt svadhāprāṇā mahilokāḥ, which does not solve the problem of the obscure word mahī́lukā (found nowhere else). There is no need of calling the verse virāj.

7. After thee entered Agni, after thee Soma, O cow; thine udder, O excellent one, is Parjanya; the lightnings are thy teats, O cow.

8. The waters thou yieldest (duh) first, the cultivated fields after, O cow; thou yieldest kingdom third, food, milk, O cow.

The permissible resolution rāṣ-ṭr-ám in c would obviate the necessity of reckoning the verse as virāj. Ppp. combines in b urvarā ʼparā.

9. When, called by the Ādityas, thou didst approach, O righteous one, Indra made thee drink a thousand vessels (pā́tra) of soma, O cow.

By a notable inconsistency, the Anukr. reckons this verse as a complete anuṣṭubh, although it requires, to make it such, precisely the same resolution (pā́-tr-ān) as vs. 8.

10. When thou didst go following (anváñc) Indra, then the bull called thee; therefore the Vṛitra-slayer, angry, took thy milk (páyas), milk (kṣīrá), O cow.

All the saṁhitā-mss. accent in b -bhó ʻhvayat, and one pada-ms. (D.) has accordingly áhvayat. In like manner, all save R.p.m. have kruddhó ʻhar- in d. In both cases our edition emends to ʼ. In this verse also (as in 6, 8) the designation virāj is uncalled-for. Ppp. reads uvūcī in a, and ād vṛṣabho in b.

11. When the lord of riches, angry, took thy milk, O cow, then this the firmament (nā́ka) now keeps (rakṣ) in three vessels.

Ppp. reads, in a–b, -patiḥ kṣīraṁ dehi bharad vaçe.

12. In three vessels the heavenly cow took that soma, where Atharvan, consecrated, sat on a golden barhís.

Ppp. reads hitaṁ for tam in a, and ādyevy abharad in b.

13. Since she has united (sam-gam) with soma, and with all that has feet, the cow has stood upon the ocean, together with the Gandharvas, the kalís.

Before this verse, Ppp. sets one made up of our 15 a, b and 14 c, d. Pada-text in c ádhi : asthāt. ⌊As to kali, cf. Bergaigne, Rel. Véd. ii. 482.⌋ ⌊For ágata, see Gram. § 834 b.⌋

14. Since she has united with the wind, and with all winged ones, the cow danced forth in the ocean, bearing the verses, the chants.

Ppp. combines (as above noted) our 15 a, b and 14 c, d, and then again our 14 a, b and 15 c, d, without other variant.

15. Since she has united with the sun, and with all sight, the cow has overlooked the ocean, bearing excellent lights.

Some of the mss. (P.M.E.) read in c aty akṣad (K. akṣyad).

16. As, O righteous one, thou didst stand decked (abhi-vṛ) with gold, the ocean, having become a horse, mounted (adhi-skand) thee, O cow.

Ppp. puts this verse after our 17.

17. There the excellent ones united, the cow, the directress, also the svadhā́, where Atharvan, consecrated, sat on a golden barhís.

The second half-verse is identical with 12 c, d above. Ppp. reads in a gachantt.

18. The cow is mother of the noble (rājanyà), the cow thy mother, O svadhā́; from the cow was born the weapon; from it was born intent (cittá).

The translation implies the obvious emendation of yajñé in c to jajñé, as at iv. 24. 6 ⌊see note thereto⌋.

19. The globule (bindú) went (car) up aloft, out of the summit (kákuda) of the bráhman; thence wast thou born, O cow; thence was the invoker born.

20. From thy mouth came (bhū) the songs (gā́thā), from thy nape-bones, O cow, [came] force; from thy belly (?pājasyà) was born the sacrifice, from thy teats the rays.

Ppp. reads in a bhavanti for abhavan.

21. From thy (two) fore-legs (īrmá) motion (áyana) was born, and from thy thighs (sákthi), O cow; from thine entrails were born eaters (attrá), out from thy belly (udára) the plants.

Ppp. reads at the beginning ayurmābhyām, and in c yatrā jajñire. ⌊For atrā́s, cf. note to i. 7. 3.⌋

22. When (yát), O cow, thou didst enter along the belly of Varuṇa, thence the priest (brahmán) called thee up; for he knew thy guidance (netrá).

23. All trembled at the embryo, while being born, of her who gives not birth (?asūsū́); for "the cow hath given birth," they say of her; shaped (m.) by charms (bráhman); for it is her connection.

Much here is obscure and doubtful. Asūsū́ (not divided in p.) ought, by its accent, to be asū-sū 'giving birth to one who does not herself give birth' ⌊Gram. § 1147 c⌋. The connection of kḷptás with vaçā́ is strange; the former belongs probably to gárbhas understood. The accent of āhús indicates that hí belongs with it, and not with sasū́va. The name vaçā́ used for the cow throughout the hymn implies non-pregnancy. Ppp. reads at the end brahmaṇā kḷpta ⌊R's Collation spells it klipta⌋ uta bandhur asyāt. ⌊The verse may be counted as 36 syllables; but the nearest approach to a natural scansion would seem to be 8 + 8 : 11 (taām) + 11.⌋ ⌊I will not attempt to revise W's treatment of this verse. Griffith and the other translators may be consulted.⌋

24. One combines (sam-sṛj) the fighters who alone is in control (vaçín) of her; the sacrifices became energies (? táras); the cow became the eye of energies.

The Anukr. should have qualified the name of this bṛhatī by adding virāj. Ppp. combines at the beginning yudhe 'kas s-.

25. The cow accepted the sacrifice; the cow sustained the sun; within the cow entered the rice-dish together with the priest (brahmán).

Ppp. reads yajñam instead of sūryam in b. All the mss. have brahmáṇā.

26. The cow they call immortality (amṛ́ta); the cow they worship (upa-ās) as death; the cow became this all — gods, men, Asuras, Fathers, seers.

Ppp. reads āhur amṛtaṁ in a. The definition of the meter by the Anukr. is bad; it ⌊seems to be 8 + 8 : 8 + 14⌋.

27. Whoso knoweth thus, he may accept the cow; for so doth the all-footed sacrifice yield milk (duh) to the giver, unresisting.

28. Three tongues glisten (dīdī) within the mouth of Varuṇa; of these, the one that shines (rāj) in the middle is the cow, hard of acceptance.

The mss., as is usual in such cases, are divided between duḥpr- and duṣpr- in d.

29. The seed of the cow was quartered: the waters a quarter, the amṛ́ta a quarter, the sacrifice a quarter, the domestic animals a quarter.

30. The cow [is] the sky, the cow the earth, the cow Vishṇu, Prajāpati; the yield (dugdhá) of the cow did the Perfectibles (sādhyá) and they who are Vasus drink.

31. Having drunk the yield of the cow, the Perfectibles and they who are Vasus — they verily worship the milk (páyas) of her at the summit of the ruddy one.

Ppp. reads ime instead of te vāi at beginning of c. The definition of the meter by the Anukr. is bad, the verse being, by usual and easy resolutions, a regular anuṣṭubh.

32. Some milk her for soma; some worship ghee; they who gave the cow to the one knowing thus are gone to the triple heaven of the heaven.

The pada-mss., by an absurd blunder, read yá before evám into yáḥ instead of yé. It is apparently the intrusion of vaçā́m into c that makes the meter irregular. ⌊Pādas a, b are a reminiscence of RV. x. 154. 1 (= AV. xviii. 2. 14).⌋

33. Having given the cow to the Brahmans, one attains all worlds; for righteousness is set in her, also bráhman, likewise penance.

Ppp. reads in a vaçā dattvā brāh-, and in c āhitam instead of ārpitam.

34. On the cow the gods subsist; on the cow, men also; the cow became this all, so far as the sun looks abroad.

The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in a (read, by irregular combination, devó 'pa).

⌊Here ends the fifth anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 61 verses. The quoted Anukr. says, referring to this last hymn, catasraḥ (i.e. 4 over 30).⌋

⌊Here ends the twenty-third prapāṭhaka.⌋

Book XI.

⌊This eleventh book is the fourth book of the second grand division of the Atharvan collection. As to the general make-up of the books of this division, see page 471. The Old Anukramaṇī describes the length of hymns 6 and 8 by stating the excess of each over 20 verses. All of the book except hymns 3 and 8 has been translated by Bloomfield in Sacred Books of the East, vol. xlii.; and all of it by Victor Henry, Les Livres X, XI et XII de l'Atharva-véda traduits et commentés, Paris, 1896. Here again we have the bhāṣya for the entire book.⌋

⌊The ritual uses of this book are confined for the most part to the first hymn, nearly every verse of which is quoted in Kāuçika 60–63 and 65 in connection with the details of the sava sacrifice. Of the other nine hymns only sporadic citations are made by Kāuçika; and in the Vāitāna, only a single quotation (of 2.1) is made out of the whole book.⌋

⌊Paryāya-hymns: for details respecting them, see pages 471–2. The paryāya-hymn of this book is hymn 3, with 3 paryāyas.⌋

⌊Discrepancies of hymn-numeration, as between the two editions, in so far as they are occasioned by the counting of each paryāya as a separate hymn by the Bombay edition. The matter is discussed at this place because it is in this book, page 625, that Whitney has condemned the procedure of the Bombay edition. The facts are as follows:⌋ ⌊☞ See p. cxxxiv and p. 1013.⌋

⌊In book viii., the Bombay edition, counting separately each of the 6 paryāyas of our last hymn (h. 10), makes for that book a total of 15 hymns; but, since the discrepancy is confined to our last hymn, the plus of 5 does not affect the numeration of the preceding 9.⌋

⌊In book ix., the Bombay edition, counting separately each of the 6 paryāyas of our hymn 6 (its 6–11), has a plus of 5 for our h. 7 (its 12) and the following. Our h. 7 is also a paryāya-hymn; but since it has but 1 paryāya, the plus remains a constant from our h. 7 to the end. The total is again 15.⌋

⌊In book x. there is no paryāya-hymn to affect the numeration.⌋

⌊In book xi., the Bombay edition, counting the 3 paryāyas of our hymn 3 as its 3 and 4 and 5, has a plus of 2 for our 4 (its 6) and the following. Its total is therefore 12.⌋

⌊In book xii., the Bombay edition, counting separately each of the 7 paryāyas of our last hymn (h. 5), makes for that book a total of 11 hymns; but, since the discrepancy is confined to our last hymn, the plus of 6 does not affect the numeration of the preceding 4.⌋

⌊In book xiii., the Bombay edition, counting separately each of the 6 paryāyas of our last hymn (h. 4), makes for that book a total of 9 hymns; but the discrepancy is confined to our last hymn (as in books viii. and xii.), and the plus of 5 does not affect the numeration of the preceding 3.⌋

⌊Book xiv. contains no paryāya-hymn. Books xv. and xvi. consist wholly of paryāyas, the former of 18 and the latter of 9, and there is accordingly no practical discrepancy between the two editions.⌋

⌊In his Critical Notice (prefixed to vol. i.), pages 19–23, S. P. Pandit rests his procedure in this matter of numeration upon the authority of the Major Anukr. and of the Minor or Old Anukr. (Pañcapaṭalikā): see especially his page 23, end. His citations undoubtedly prove the right of each paryāya to be presented separately, and they are so presented in the Berlin edition. But the mss., in numbering the verses of each paryāya, begin anew each time with 1; perhaps this is required by the prescription of the Old Anukr. (Critical Notice, p. 23), paryāyeṣv avasānānām ṛgbhis tulyo vidhir bhavet. Accordingly, R. and W. may be wrong in numbering the verses of a group of paryāyas continuously (see above, p. 472, top). But I am not sure that independent verse-numbering for each paryāya forbids the grouping of several related paryāyas into one sūkta. This is the real point at issue between the two editions and I will not try to decide it.⌋

⌊I will say, however, that the uniformity of structure in books viii.–xi. as books of ten hymns each (see p. 471), which uniformity results from counting the paryāyas in groups, seems to support the procedure of R. and W. Moreover, as W. says (p. 472, top), the paryāyas of a given group taken together do "evidently constitute each ⌊group⌋ a whole"; and he is borne out by the comm. (at vol. iii., p. 56^{22}), who speaks of the "rice-dish-triad," our xi. 3, as constituting one "subject-matter-hymn" (artha-sūkta: but not in its narrower technical sense). — It may be added that the Major Anukr., at the end of its 7th paṭala and of its treatment of our book xi., says evaṁ ṣaṭtriṅçad arthasūktāni: that is right; for books viii.–xi. have, according to the Berlin count, (4 × 10 hymns =) 40 hymns, of which 4 hymns (our viii. 10, ix. 6, ix. 7, and xi. 3) are paryāya-sūktas, leaving 36 artha-sūktas. But this does not prove that our 4 paryāya-sūktas should not be counted as 16 (cf. p. 471, end).⌋

⌊The anuvāka-division of the book (as is explained on page 472) is into five anuvākas of two hymns each. The "decad"-division likewise is as described on page 472. A tabular conspectus for book xi. follows:

Anuvākas	1		2		3		4		5
Hymns	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Verses	37	31	56¶	26	26	23	27	34	26	27
Decad-div.	10+10+10+7	10+10+11	3P	10+10+6	10+10+6	10+13	10+10+7	10+10+14	10+10+6	10+10+7

Here ¶ means "paragraph of a paryāya" (such as is numbered as a "verse" in the Berlin edition) and P means "paryāya." The last line shows the "decad"-division. Of these "decads," anuvākas 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 contain respectively 7, 3, 5, 6, and 6 (in all, 27 "decads"); while anuvāka 2 has 3 paryāyas. The sum is 27 "decad"-sūktas and 3 paryāya-sūktas or 30 sūktas.⌋

Translated : Henry, 97, 133 ; Griffith, ii. 51 ; Bloomfield, 179, 610.

1. O Agni, be thou born ; Aditi here, suppliant, cooks a brahmán-rice-dish, desiring sons ; the seven seers, being-makers — let them churn thee here together with progeny.

Aditi's cooking of a rice-dish in order to obtain progeny is repeatedly referred to in the Brāhmaṇas — probably by way of echo of this verse : compare TS. vi. 5. 6[1] ; TB. i. 1. 9[1] ; K. vii. 15 ; MS. i. 6. 12 ; ⌊ii. 1. 12 and references⌋ ; ⌊also AV. vi. 81. 3⌋ ; the comm. quotes the TS. passage in his explanation of the verse. He defines a brahmāudana as brahmaṇe jagatsraṣṭre svāhākāreṇa deya odanaḥ, and then adds : yad vā brahmāudanasavākhye 'smin karmaṇi brāhmaṇānām bhojanāya bhāgatvena kalpita odano brahmāudanaḥ.

2. Make ye smoke, O ye bulls, companions, ye that are aided by the unhateful (?), unto speech ; this Agni [is] fight-overpowering, having good heroes, by whom the gods overpowered the barbarians.

The second pāda is mechanically rendered, being quite corrupt, as appears ⌊from the meter and⌋ by comparison with the corresponding RV. verse (iii. 29. 9), which reads instead ásredhanta itana vā́jam ácha. The comm. explains ádrogh- as adrohakāriṇāṁ sucaritrāṇāṁ yajamānānām avitā rakṣitā, as if the pada-reading were -avitā instead of -avitāḥ. ⌊W's Collation-book gives -avitāḥ as pada-reading without note of variant ; and this is the reading also of two or three of SPP's mss. : but he admits -avitā into his pada-text, following one or two mss.⌋ RV. begins also kṛṇóta, and has vṛ́ṣaṇam for vṛṣaṇas in a ; also devā́sas (rectifying the meter) in d. All the mss. ⌊save one or two⌋ read asahanta, unaccented, in d, but both editions make the necessary emendation to ásahanta — which, of course, RV. has. Ppp. is corrupt in d, reading devā 'santa ;* after it çatrūn. *⌊A most interesting instance of haplography on the part of the AV. : cf. note to iv. 5. 5. Note the fourfold occurrence of the sound-combination ā̆s within the RV. pāda ; and that three of these are reduced by Ppp. to one.⌋

3. O Agni, thou hast been born unto great heroism, unto the cooking of the brahmán-rice-dish, O Jātavedas ; the seven seers, being-makers — they have given thee birth; do thou confirm to this woman wealth with all heroes.

Ppp. reads paktaye in b, combines saptarṣ- in c, and has in d asme and ni yachatām.

4. Kindled, O Agni, be thou kindled with kindling (samídh); mayest thou bring hither, knowing, the worshipful gods; for them cooking (çrā) the oblation, O Jātavedas, make thou this man to ascend to the highest firmament (nā́ka).

Ppp. reads in b viçvā devān. In a, the comm. has samiddhaḥ sa for sám idhyasva. ⌊For d, cf. i. 9. 2, 4; vi. 63. 3.⌋

5. Threefold is set down the share that is yours of old — of gods, of Fathers, of mortals; know ye the portions (áṅça); I share them out to you; that one that is the gods' shall set this woman across.

That is (at the end), as the comm. paraphrases it, iṣṭaphalasya pāraṁ gamayati 'bring her to the further shore (the completion) of desired result.' Ppp. reads jātavedas in a for yaḥ purā vaḥ, inserts uta before martyānām in b, and has in d sāi 'vaṁ for sa imām.

6. O Agni, powerful, overcoming, thou overcomest; put down (ni-ubj) [our] hating rivals; let this measure (mā́trā), being measured, and measured, make [thy] fellows tribute-bringers to thee.

The comm. does not try to give ny ubja a more distinctive meaning than adhomukhān pātaya; the obscure mā́trā he simply glosses by nirmātrā ⌊as instrumental sing. masc. (supplying iyaṁ çālā as subject); but the three translators take it as nom.⌋.

7. In company with thy fellows, be thou united with milk; urge her up unto great heroism; ascend aloft to the summit (viṣṭáp) of the firmament (nā́ka), which they call by the name heavenly world.

Addressed, according to the comm., to the sacrificer; the Kāuç. (61. 20) makes it accompany the pouring of rice into the mortar. The comm. explains ud ubja as ud gamaya unnataçiraskāṁ kuru. Ppp. reads sujātāiṣ in a, and viṣṭapas in c.

8. Let this great one (mahī́) accept the hide, the divine earth, with favoring mind; then may we go to the world of the well-done.

This accompanies, as is plain, the spreading-out of the ox-hide upon the ground (so Kāuç. 60. 30). Ppp. reads in b pṛthivyāi, and, at the end, sukṛtām u lokam. The last pāda is the same with vi. 121. 1 d; vii. 83. 4 d.

9. Join thou on the hide these two allied stones; split apart the shoots (aṅçú) successfully for the sacrificer; smiting down, smite them that would fight her; bearing up thy progeny aloft, lift up.

The feminine participles in c, d indicate that the verse is addressed to the wife of the sacrificer, though the comm. understands the first half as for the priest. Aṅçu he regards as applied by a figure to the rice, as grāvāṇāu 'soma-pressing-stones,' means mortar and pestle. 'Smite down' and 'lift up' are the alternate movements of the pestle, each viewed as symbolical. Imām is redundant in c as regards both meter and sense; perhaps it has blundered in here out of 11 c. Ppp. is corrupt in c and d, but can be seen to read uddharantī in d. The verse and its parts are quoted in Kāuç. 61. 18, 22, 24.

10. Seize in thy hand, O hero, the two joint-acting (sakŕ̥t) stones; the worshipful gods have come to thy sacrifice; three boons, whichsoever thou choosest — those successes do I here make successful for thee.

The comm. and one or two of SPP's authorities read sukŕ̥tāu in a (Ppp. sayujā); sakŕ̥t is not elsewhere found used as an adjective. Ppp. further combines hasta ā into hastā in a–b, and reads yajñeyā and ayus in b. The comm. renders te in b as if it were té. ⌊The definition of the Anukr. may perhaps mean 'a jagatī of elevens (virāḍ-jagatī), which possesses a thirteen at the beginning, (and which is) deficient-by-two (virāṭ).'⌋

11. This [is] thy thought (? dhītí) and this thy place of birth; let Aditi, of hero-sons, seize thee; cleanse away them that would fight her; confirm to her wealth with all heroes.

Said, according to Kāuç. (61. 23), in connection with taking up the winnowing fan (çūrpa). The comm. explains dhīti as = pāna, taking it from the root dhā 'suck.' One would like to derive it from dhā 'put,' as 'place' or something similar. Ppp. reads at the end ni yachāt.

12. Sit ye in the wooden blower (? upaçvasá); be ye winnowed, worshipful ones, from the husks. By fortune (çrī́) may we surpass all [our] equals; I make [our] haters to fall under foot.

⌊The second half-verse recurs below, vs. 21.⌋ The majority of SPP's authorities, and some of ours (P.M.W.O.s.m.R.T.) read dhruvdye ⌊Ppp. druye⌋ in a; also the comm., who explains it as = dhruvāya sthirāya satyaphalāya karmaṇe; upaçvasé ⌊Ppp. upasvade⌋ he absurdly takes for a verb: (he taṇḍulā yuṣmān) upa samīpa āçvāsayāmi prabhūtān karomi! ⌊The meaning 'das Blasen, Luftzug,' is assigned to it in OB. iii. 257 b.⌋ ⌊Ppp. reads pādayema at the end of d.⌋ The verse accompanies (so Kāuç. 61. 29) the operation of winnowing. The comm. treats yajñiyāsas in b as nominative.

13. Go away, woman; come back quickly; the stall (goṣṭhá) of the waters hath ascended thee for bearing; seize then of them ⌊f.⌋ whichever shall be worshipful; having shared [them] out wisely, then leave the others.

The comm. explains goṣṭha by jalarāçi; it is rather, doubtless, the vessel in which the water is brought, on the shoulder or head (adhi-ruh: comm. çirasi ā-ruh). ⌊Cf. OB. iii. 261 b.⌋ The comm. reads āsan at end of c. Ppp. combines yajñiā 'san in c, and in d reads vibhajya, and hvayīta for jahītāt. SPP. reads in b goṣṭhó 'dhy, with the majority of his authorities.

14. These maidens (yoṣít) have come, adorning themselves; stand up, woman, take hold of the mighty one; well-spoused with husband, progeny-possessing with progeny; to thee hath come the sacrifice; receive thou the vessel (kumbhá).

The comm. explains the 'maidens' as the 'water-bringing women,' but they are evidently the waters (fem.) themselves: compare vss. 17, 27 below. The comm. reads tava sam, two separate words, in b; ⌊Roth, in his Notes, adds that Ppp. reads tavas saṁ bharasva⌋; the 'mighty one' is the 'vessel' of d. Verses 13–15 are quoted in Kāuç. (60. 25–29), but not in natural sequence with the verses that precede and follow.

15. The portion of refreshment (ū́rj) [is] set down which [is] yours of old; do thou, instructed by the seer, bring these waters; let this sacrifice be for you progress-gaining (gātu-víd), refuge-gaining, progeny-gaining, formidable, cattle-gaining, hero-gaining.

'Thou' in b is fem., the water-bearer, doubtless, of vs. 13. The 'yours' of a and the 'you' of d refer probably to those interested in the ceremony, though the comm. understands the former of the waters. Ppp. reads nihatas in a, combines and reads -ṣṭā 'pā 'harāi 'tāḥ in b, puts nāthavid before gātuvid in c, and elides vo 'stu in d.

16. O Agni, the worshipful pot hath ascended thee; bright (çúci), very hot, do thou heat it with heat; let those of the seers, those of the gods, gathering unto their share, very hot, heat this with the seasons.

The comm. understands the epithets in b as belonging to carús, which is doubtless wrong; those in c he understands of 'Brahmans' and 'attendants on Indra and the other gods'; without much question, the flames of Agni are intended. Ppp. reads in c devā 'bhisaṁhatya. The verse plainly accompanies the setting of the vessel for boiling on the fire: so Kāuç. 61. 31; also 2. 7.

17. Let these cleansed, purified, worshipful maidens, the waters, beauteous ones, creep down to the pot; they have given us abundant progeny, cattle; let the cooker of the rice-dish go to the world of the well-doers.

⌊Pāda a is identical with vs. 27 a and vi. 122. 5 a.⌋ The mss. are about equally divided in c between bahulā́m and bahulā́n (our I.T.K.Kp. have the latter; O. has -lāṁn); SPP. accepts the latter, we the former; the comm. has -lān; and he reads pakvā for paktā in d ⌊or c⌋. Ppp. has dadat for adus in c, and eti for etu in d. The verse concerns the pouring in of the water: so Kāuç. 61. 34–5, and 2. 8.—⌊If we read bahulā́ṅç ca in c, and in d pakvāúdanasya as a compound (against the pada-division, which reckons paktā́ to c, and against the double accent) and u for etu, we get most acceptable sense and meter: lokám would be construed as coördinate with paçū́n and pakvāúdanasya as coördinate with nas (cf. xi. 8. 10 c and Speyer, Vedische Syntax, § 71, end). The heroic surgery implies no worse corruptions than we have often seen. But this is all mere suggestion.⌋

18. Cleansed with prayer (bráhman) and purified with ghee, shoots of Soma [are] these worshipful rice-grains; enter ye the waters; let the pot receive you; having cooked this, go ye to the world of the well-doers.

A few mss. (including our O.) read etu for eta in d. Ppp. has instead eti; further, in a, utpūtās, and, in c, apa praviçyatu. The verse accompanies the pouring of the rice-grains into the water: so Kāuç. 61. 36, and 2. 9. ⌊Read somāṅçávas?⌋ ⌊The Anukr. seems to scan as 12 + 13 : 12 + 13 = 50; but the mark of pāda-division is after carur, not before it.⌋

19. Spread thyself broad, with great greatness, thousand-backed, in the world of the well-done: grandfathers, fathers, progeny, descendants (upajā́): I am thy fifteen-fold cooker.

Fifteen-fold ⌊cf. Skt. Gram. § 488⌋, probably, as representing so many generations, or degrees of kindred. The verse accompanies the boiling ⌊Kāuç. 61. 37: employed also in connection with other verses at 68. 27⌋, and alludes apparently to the swelling of the mess in the process. Ppp. combines te 'smi at the end. The mss. vary between paktā́ and paktvā́ in d (our T.K.Kp. have -tā́); SPP. gives paktā́, with the large majority of his authorities, and it is doubtless the true reading. The comm. has again pakvā. ⌊Correct the Berlin ed. to paktā́.⌋

20. Thousand-backed, hundred-streamed, unexhausted, [is] the brahmán-rice-dish, god-traveled, heaven-going; them yonder I assign to thee; lessen (?) thou them with progeny; be gracious then to me [as] bringer of tribute.

Kāuç. makes no use of this parenthetical verse of praise, prayer, and imprecation. The comm. and two of SPP's authorities read reçaya in c, and the comment to Prāt. iii. 94 (though reading reṣayāi 'nān) quotes it as an example of a palatal or lingual or dental mute interposed between r and n, which would seem to imply *recaya. The comm. glosses his reçaya with leçaya alpīkuru, and, as the expression looks as if meant for the opposite to that in vs. 21 a, the translation has been made accordingly. ⌊Ppp. reads akṣato at end of a.⌋ ⌊Where the Anukr. finds a pāda of 13 syllables I know not. —The one of 14 must be c: does para mean simply the second half-verse?⌋ *⌊That is, it implies the mute (c) rather than the sibilant (ç), the intervention of which was treated in the preceding rule, iii. 93.⌋

21. Go thou up to the sacrificial hearth; increase her with progeny; push [away] the demon; set her further forward; by fortune may we surpass all [our] equals; I make [our] haters to fall under foot.

The last half-verse is the same with vs. 12 c, d above. The whole evidently accompanies the bringing of the cooked dish to the place of offering: according to Kāuç. 61. 41, its removal from the fire. Ppp. reads enam at end of a, pratiraṁ dhehy enam at end of b, paçyā for çriyā in c, and pādayema ⌊cf. vs. 12⌋ at end of d.

22. Turn thou toward her together with cattle; be opposite to her together with the divinities; let not curse attain thee, nor witchcraft (abhicārá); bear rule (vi-rāj) in thine own field (kṣétra), free from disease.

The comm. reads enān in both a and b. ⌊All⌋ the pada-mss. read anamīvā́ḥ in d ⌊save SPP's J. prima manu: W's translation and the comm. imply -vā́, and this SPP. has adopted as his pada-reading⌋. Ppp. has in a prajayā sahāi 'naṁ, and, for c, d, a very different (and corrupt) text: svargo lokam abhi saṁvihīnam ādityo deva parame vyoma; ⌊its b is corrupt⌋. According to Kāuç. 61. 42, with this verse the vessel is made to take a turn to the right. In b the duplication of n̄ before enām is overlooked in nearly all the mss., and SPP. admits in his text the ungrammatical combination.

23. Fashioned by righteousness (ṛtá), set by mind, this was ordained in the beginning the sacrificial hearth of the brahmán-rice-dish; apply,

O woman, the cleansed shoulder-bearer (?); on that set the rice-dish of them of the gods.

SPP. reads in c aṅsadrī́m, with rather the larger number of authorities (of our mss. Bp.P.M.W.I.K.Kp.), though only -dhrīm seems to offer any etymology, and that an unsatisfactory one. The comm. has aṅçadhrīm 'portion-holder,' which is perhaps the true reading. The pada-text leaves the word undivided. The mss. of Kāuç. (61.44), it may be noted, also vary between aṅsadhrīm and -drīm in quoting the pratīka of the second half-verse. Dāivyānām would rectify the meter of d, but no ms. reads it, though two of SPP's, and the comm., give devānām. Ppp. reads in a manaso hite 'yaṁ, in b nihaṅtā for vihitā, in c açadhriyaṁ, emended by another hand to -ddhiyaṁ.

24. Aditi's hand, this second ladle (srúc), which the seven seers, being-makers, made — let that spoon, knowing the members of the rice-dish, collect it upon the sacrificial hearth.

The comm. reads in a hastam and dvitīyam, indicating that he regards the adjective as qualifying hastām rather than srucam — which may well be the case. Ppp. ⌊has hastāṁ and⌋ combines saptarṣayas.

25. Let them of the gods sit by thee, a cooked (çṛtá) oblation; having crept out of the fire, sit thou forward again to them; purified by soma, sit thou in the belly of the worshipers (brahmán); let not them of the seers, partakers (prāçitṛ́) of thee, suffer harm.

Ppp. begins çrutaṁ tvā havir, has for b anusṛpyā 'gne punar enaṁ pra sṛpyas (without any avasāna), reads in c–d brāhmaṇā ārṣeyās, and reads and combines ma rṣaṁ in d. The comm. ⌊with two of SPP's authorities⌋ reads devās at end of a, and treats te in d as té. Accompanies, according to Kāuç. 63. 3, the seating of 'four ārṣeyas, who know the bhṛgvaṅgiras' by the offering.

26. O king Soma, strew harmony for them, for whatsoever good Brahmans shall sit by thee; with good call, I call loudly to the brahmán-rice-dish the seers, them of the seers, born from penance (tápas).

In a–b, for -bhyaḥ súbrāhmaṇās, Ppp. reads -bhyo brāhm- ⌊intending perhaps ábrāhmaṇās? cf. vs. 32⌋; in c it has ṛṣīṇām ṛṣayas tap-, and jātā (so also the comm.) for -tān; ⌊and begins d with brāhmāudane⌋. The comm. understands suhavā in d as fem., and makes the sacrificer's wife the speaker. The verse is not quoted in Kāuç.; ⌊but Keçava cites it just before vs. 25 in 63. 3⌋.

27. These cleansed purified worshipful maidens I seat in separate succession in the hands of the priests (brahmán); with what desire I now pour you on, may Indra here with the Maruts grant me that.

⌊Pāda a = vs. 17 a.⌋ Nearly identical with vi. 122. 5, and slightly different from x. 9. 27. The verse is quoted by Kāuç. 63. 4; ⌊so the comm.: under vi. 122. 5 he made the sūtra apply to that verse⌋. Ppp. has a wholly different a: iyam āpo madhumatī ghṛtaçcyuto; ⌊it reads brāhmaṇā at beginning of b⌋; and combines yatkāme 'dam in c.

28. This my light (jyótis), immortal gold, cooked (pakvá) from the field, this my desire-milker; this riches I deposit in the Brahmans; I make a road to the Fathers that is heaven-going.

The construction of the nominatives in a, b is left undetermined in the translation, as it is in the text. ⌊Cf. Griffith's version and note, p. 55.⌋ Ppp. has hiraṇmayaṁ in a, and yat svargāiḥ at the end of d. The verse is quoted by Kāuç. at 62. 22 and 68. 27; and at 63. 5 Kāuç. cites b ⌊comm. b and c⌋ as accompanying a removal of something (ity apakarṣati: it is not clear what; ⌊the comm. thinks the rice-dish and reads upa- for apa-⌋).

29. Strew thou the husks in the fire, in Jātavedas; wipe off far away the chaff (?kambū́kān); this we have heard to be the share of the house-king; also we know the portion (bhāgadhéya) of Perdition (nírṛti).

Ppp. reads upa mṛḍhvayetām for apa mṛḍḍhi dūram in b. The comm. explains kambūkān as = phalīkaraṇān, and follows Kāuç. (63. 7) in regarding the 'wiping away' as done with the foot.

30. Know thou the toiling, cooking, soma-pressing one; make him to ascend the heaven-going road, by which he may ascend, arriving at the vigor that is beyond, to the highest firmament, to the furthest vault (vyòman).

'Know,' i.e. take note or be mindful of. The comm. takes the three participles in a as accus. pl. instead of gen. sing.; ⌊and reads accordingly enān at end of b⌋. Ppp. has, for b, svargaṁ lokaṁ adhi rohaye 'nam, and omits d. The quotation in Kāuç. 63. 20 casts no light on the verse.

31. Wipe off, O serving priest (adhvaryú), this face of the bearing one (?babhrí); make thou, understanding it, room for the sacrificial butter; wipe off with ghee along all [its] members; I make a road to the Fathers that is heaven-going.

The real sense of the epithet babhri applied to the odana or rice-dish is obscure; the comm. explains it here with bharaṇaçīlasya poṣakasya pakvasya odanasya, 'supporting' or 'nourishing.' The comm. appears to read vidvān instead of pravidvān in b; Ppp. has prajānan. Ppp. has yat for yas in d. According to Kāuç. 62. 15, the verse accompanies the making of an āpāna (? the mss. vary as to the word) above (upari); which the comm. explains by odanasyo 'pari gartaṁ kuryāt, glossing lokam in b with sthānaṁ gartarūpam; what is meant is obscure.

32. O bearing one, [as] a demon, strew discord for them, for whatsoever non-Brahmans shall sit by thee; rich in ground (?purīṣín), spreading themselves forward, let not them of the seers, partakers of thee, suffer harm.

With the first half-verse compare vs. 26 a, b, above; the last pāda is the same with 25 d. The construction of rákṣas in a is doubtful; it might be vocative; the comm. combines it into a compound with samadam; and he treats te, as before, as if it were té. Ppp. reads at beginning of b, as our text in vs. 26, subrāhmaṇās. The verse is not quoted in Kāuç.

33. I set thee down, O rice-dish, among them of the seers; for them that are not of the seers there is no portion here; let Agni my guardian, and all the Maruts, let all the gods defend the cooked [offering].

'Is no portion for,' lit'ly 'is not also (api) of' — a common form of expression in the Brāhmaṇas. Ppp. reads rakṣanti in d. The verse is quoted with vs. 25 c in Kāuç. 65. 12.

34. The offering, yielding milk (duh), constantly full (prápīna), a male (púmāṅs) milch-cow, seat of wealth, immortality through offspring, and a long life-time — and may we sit by thee with abundance (pl.) of wealth.

The construction of the third pāda is very indeterminate; the words may be either nominative or accusative; they express in some way what the offering is to procure. To illustrate prajāmṛtatvam, the comm. quotes, quite appositely, TB. i. 5. 5^6 and RV. v. 4. 10, 'by progeny, O Agni, may I obtain immortality.' Prapīnam he explains as = pravṛddhodhaskam, which is doubtless its true meaning. Ppp. reads in d poṣam for poṣāis. Neither this nor the following verse, nor vs. 37, is quoted in Kāuç. ⌊Cf. Henry's version, p. 102; and, for the awkward ca, his note, p. 139.⌋

35. Thou art a heaven-going bull; go to the seers, to them of the seers; sit in the world of the well-doing; there is there preparation (saṁskṛtá) for us both.

⌊Prose.⌋ Ppp. reads ṛṣabhas at the beginning, and lokaṁ for loke in c. With the second half-verse is to be compared TS. i. 4. 43^2, and MS. i. 3. 37 (end) and iv. 8. 2 (end), which read: sukṛ́tāṁ loké sīdata tā́n naḥ saṁskṛtā́m; and VS. iv. 34 has the last pāda, reading tā́n for tátra. The pada-texts do not divide saṁskṛtam; the case falls under rule iv. 58 of the AV. Prāt.

36. Gather thou together unto, go thou together forth after; O Agni, make ready (kalpay-) the roads traveled by the gods; by them, well-made, may we go after the offering, that stands upon the seven-rayed firmament.

All the mss. ⌊save one or two of SPP's⌋ leave agne unaccented, as if it belonged to a, and Bp. puts the double division-mark after it accordingly; SPP. reads with the ⌊majority of his⌋ mss.; we have made the necessary emendation to ágne. Ppp. reads at the beginning samātanuṣva; for c it has yebhis sukṛtāir anu prajñeṣṭhaṅs sa yajñe. The comm. regards a as addressed to the rice-dish, which is to 'gather up' all its members. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 63. 9, but not in a way to cast any light upon it. TS. iv. 7. 13^4 and MS. ii. 12. 4 are to be compared with the first half-verse, but they vary much from it and from one another.

37. With what light the gods went up to the sky, having cooked the brahmán-rice-dish, to the world of the well-done, with that may we go to the world of the well-done, ascending the heaven, unto the highest firmament.

The second half-verse is identical with iv. 14. 6 c, d, above ⌊see my note⌋. The comm. reads jeṣma in c, explaining it by jayema ⌊= prāpnuyāma⌋. Ppp. has, instead of this repetition, a new half-verse: taṁ tvā pacāmi jyotiṣāṁ jyotir uttamaṁ sa nas tad dhehi sukṛtām u loke.

2. To Rudra, especially as Bhava and Çarva.

[Atharvan. — ekatriṅçat. mantroktarudradāivatam. trāiṣṭubham. 1. parātijāgatā virāḍ jagatī; 2. anuṣṭubgarbhā 5-p. pathyājagatī; 3. 4-p. svarāḍ uṣṇih; 4, 5, 7, 13, 15, 16, 21. anuṣṭubh; 6. ārṣī gāyatrī; 8. mahābṛhatī; 9. ārṣī; 10. puro'kṛti 3-p. virāj; 11. 5-p. virāḍ jagatīgarbhā çakvarī; 12. bhurij; 14, 17, 18, 19, 23, 26, 27. virāḍ gāyatrī; 20. bhurig gāyatrī; 22. viṣamapādalakṣmyā 3-p. mahābṛhatī; 24, 29. jagatī; 25. 5-p. atiçakvarī; 30. 4-p. uṣṇih; 31. 3-av. viparītapādalakṣmyā 6-p. ⌊jagatī?⌋.*]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. — *⌊Verses 9 and 28 are triṣṭubh, the remaining 29 being exceptions!⌋

⌊The pratīka coincides with that of xi. 6. 9, bhavāçarvā́v idám brūmaḥ, and that of iv. 28, bhávāçarvāu manvé vām: see introduction to the latter. The only quotation in Vāit. is at 29. 10, where the hymn accompanies an offering to Rudra: and it is accordingly reckoned to the rāudra gaṇa (note to Kāuç. 50. 13). Verse 31 is reckoned to the abhaya gaṇa (note to Kāuç. 16. 8). Further citations in Kāuç. are as follows: the hymn is used (129. 3) with an oblation in deprecating an evil omen; Dārila understands it as meant at 28. 8 (see introd. to iv. 28); Keçava and the comm. hold that it is to be used with a dozen other hymns in a rite (50. 13–14) for safety on a business journey; Keçava (not the comm.) takes it to be intended with v. 6 at 51. 7 in a rite for the safety of the cattle. — According to Caland's interpretation of yuktayos at 50. 17, it is to be used (with vi. 128) in the rite there prescribed for keeping snakes etc. from house and field; but perhaps iii. 26 and 27 are rather intended (see my introduction to iii. 26).⌋

Translated: Muir, iv. 334; Ludwig, p. 549; Henry, 103, 139; Griffith, ii. 57; Bloomfield, 155, 618. — Cf. also Bergaigne-Henry, Manuel, p. 157; and von Schroeder, Tübinger Kaṭha-hss., p. 14–15, where the text corresponding to our verses 1–9 and 13 and 16 is given.

1. O Bhava-and-Çarva, be gracious; do not go against [us]; ye lords of beings, lords of cattle, homage to you! [the arrow] that is fitted, that is drawn, do not let fly; do not harm our bipeds nor quadrupeds.

The comm. first explains mā́ in a as if it were mā, object of abhí yātam, and then, alternatively, in its proper sense. ⌊For ā́yata, see note to vi. 65. 1.⌋

2. Make ye not bodies for the dog, the jackal, for the buzzards (?alíklava), the vultures, and them that are black [and] greedy (aviṣyú); let thy flies, lord of cattle, let thy birds not find themselves at food.

'Bodies' (çarīra) must be taken here in the sense of 'dead bodies.' The accent of kártam is, though rather strange, not indefensible, as in the former of two parallel clauses; the comm. reads instead kartum. Alíklava is found only here and in 9. 9, and is rendered purely conjecturally; the comm. reads instead aviklabebhyas, and Ppp. ariklavebhyas. All the pada-mss. separate mā́vidanta at the end into mā́ : avidanta; SPP., in his pada-text, makes, with the comm., the necessary emendation to vid-. The construction and sense of d are obscure and doubtful; Ppp. has a wholly different reading: viçase mā viçyantu.

3. Unto thy noise (?kránda), [thy] breath, and what pangs (?rópi) are thine, O Bhava — homage we pay to thee that art thousand-eyed, O Rudra, immortal one.

The comm. glosses krandāya with krandanāya çabdāya, and ropayas with ropayitryo mohayitryas tanvaḥ; he reads at the end amartyas, explaining it as used for a dative.

4. We pay thee homage in front, above, also below; forth from the sphere of the sky, homage [be] to thine atmosphere.

The comm. explains abhīvargá as = avakāçātmaka ākāçaḥ. The verse is mostly wanting in Ppp.

5. To thy face, O lord of cattle; the eyes that thou hast, O Bhava; to [thy] skin, form, aspect, to thee standing opposite [be] homage.

Or 'to thy mouth,' instead of 'face.' The comm. paraphrases pratīcīnāya with pratyagātmarūpiṇe.

6. To thy members, belly, tongue, thy mouth, to thy teeth, smell, [be] homage.

Ppp. (omitting the first te) combines añgebhyo 'darāya and jihvāyā "syāya ⌊and reads ca for te at end of b⌋.

7. With the blue-locked archer, the thousand-eyed, vigorous, with Rudra, the half-smiter (?) — with him may we not come into collision (sam-ṛ).

Ardhaka-ghātin, in c, is met with only here, and is of obscure meaning; the comm. says senāyā ardhaṁ hantuṁ çīlam asya, i.e. 'able to destroy half an army at once.' No variant is reported from Ppp. ⌊in the Collation: but in his Notes, Roth does report adhvaga-⌋; the minor Pet. Lex. says "Ppp. adhvaga-," and itself conjectures andhaka-. ⌊Cf. the notes of Henry, Griffith, Bloomfield. The Kaṭha reading, however, should now be taken into account; and that has in fact adhvaga-: see Kaṭha-hss., p. 155.⌋ Ppp. has at the end samarāmasi.

8. Let this Bhava avoid us on every side; as fire the waters, let Bhava avoid us; let him not plot against us; homage be to him.

Ppp. reads āpāi 'vā 'gniṣ pari in b, and combines no abhi in c. The comm. has in c the regular form maṅsta; but long ā in this tense occurs a couple of times in other texts also.

9. Four times ⌊catúś⌋ homage, eight times, to Bhava; ten times, O lord of cattle, be homage to thee; thine are shared out these five creatures (paçú) — cows, horses, men, sheep and goats.

All the mss. agree in the inconsistent readings aṣṭakṛ́tvas and dáça kṛ́tvas (cf. Prāt. iv. 27); SPP. regards the comm. as having daçakṛtvas as a compound, but I do not see on what ground. Ppp. reads in d gāvo 'çvāṣ puruṣāṅd aj-.

10. Thine are the four directions, thine the heaven, thine the earth, thine, O formidable one, this wide atmosphere, thine is all this that has life (ātmán), that is breathing upon (ánu) the earth.

Ppp. omits tava pṛthivī, thus rectifying the meter; and it has for d yad ejad adhi bhūmyām.

11. This wide vessel, holder of good things, is thine, within which are all these beings; do thou be gracious to us, O lord of cattle; homage to thee; away let the jackals, the portents (abhibhā́), the dogs go, away the weepers of evil with disheveled hair.

The comm. identifies the vessel (koça) with the aṇḍakaṭāha, the shell of the world-egg. He takes abhibhā́s as = abhibhavitāras, and epithet of kroṣṭāras, and agharudas as = amañgalaṁ yathā bhavati tathā rodanaṁ kurvatyaḥ; ⌊but see viii. 1. 19 and references⌋. ⌊The meter of b would be rectified by reading víçvāni in place of imā́ víçvā.⌋

12. Thou bearest a yellow golden bow, a thousand-slaying, hundred-weaponed, O tufted one; Rudra's arrow goes, a god-missile; to that be homage, in whichever direction from here.

SPP. reads in b sahasraghnī́, with the majority of his authorities; none of ours have it, but P.M.W. have -ghnyám, with two of SPP's mss., and with the comm. ⌊cf. note to x. 4. 7 and Henry's note⌋; Ppp. gives -ghni. The comm. has çikhaṇḍi at end of b.

13. He who, attacked (abhi-yā), hides himself, [who] tries to put thee down, O Rudra, him from behind thou pursuest, like the tracker (? padanī́) of one that is pierced.

With the last pāda compare x. 1. 26 b; the expression is apparently a familiar or proverbial one: ⌊cf. Manu viii. 44, 'as the hunter follows the track (padaṁ nayati) of a deer by the drops of blood'; also Dhammapada, vss. 179, 180⌋. Ppp. reads ugra instead of rudra in b.

14. Bhava-and-Rudra, allied, in concord, both go about, formidable, unto heroism; to them be homage, in whichever direction from here.

Ppp., instead of repeating vs. 12 d, reads tayor bhūmim antarikṣaṁ svar dyāus tābhyāṁ namo bhavamatyāya ⌊cf. vs. 19 a?⌋ kṛṇva. The comm. explains vīryāya ⌊alternatively⌋ by svavīryaprakaṭanārtham, which is doubtless correct.

15. Homage be to thee coming, homage be [to thee] going away; homage to thee, O Rudra, standing; to thee sitting also [be] homage.

SPP's text has in a te 'stv, with about half of his authorities. The verse is repeated as 4. 7, below, with prāṇa for rudra in c; Ppp. reads prāṇa in both places. The first half-verse is found in AÇS. i. 12. 34 and Āp. ix. 2. 9, in both with rudra for astu in b.

16. Homage in the evening, homage in the morning, homage by night, homage by day; to Bhava and to Çarva, to both have I paid homage.

17. With the thousand-eyed one, seeing across in front, with Rudra, hurling in many places, inspired one, may we not come in collision, as he goes about (ī́ya-) with the tongue.

The comm. paraphrases atipaçyám with atiçayenā 'tikramya vā paçyati (the word is omitted in both Pet. Lexx.), and connects purastāt either with it or with asyantam; jihváyé 'yamānam he explains as jihvāgreṇa kṛtsnaṁ jagad vyāpnuvantam bhakṣaṇārthaṁ lihantam, which is rather absurd; perhaps jihvayā (so Ludwig) belongs rather to 'we': 'we, by what we say.'

18. We go forward (pū́rva) to meet him of dark horses, black, swarthy, killing, fearful, making to fall the chariot of the hairy one (keçín); homage be to him.

The comm. understands the connection as here given, making keçín the name of an Asura; Ludwig takes ratham as object of pratī 'mas and the other words as its epithets. ⌊Ppp. reads çyāvāsyaṁ at the beginning, and has, in b, bhīmo and pārayantam.⌋

19. Do not let fly at us the club (? matyà), the god-missile; be not angry at us, O lord of cattle; homage to thee; elsewhere than [over] us shake out the heavenly bough.

The bough, namely (so it would seem), from which the portents that fall from the sky appear to be shaken by a hostile divinity. The comm. reads martyam instead of matyam in a. He recognizes that srās (i.e. srā[kṣ]s) is from root sṛj ("= vi sṛja"). Ppp. has srā m. devahitam in a.

20. Do not harm us; bless us; avoid us; be not angry; let us not come into collision with thee.

Ppp. omits nas before brūhi in a, and has at the end arāmasi (as in vs. 7).

21. [Be] not [greedy] for our kine, our men; be not greedy for our goats and sheep; elsewhere, O formidable one, roll forth [thy missile]; smite the progeny of the mockers (píyāru).

The insertion in c seems unavoidable; the comm. ⌊in a passage restored by SPP.?⌋ supplies tava hetim; Ludwig, deinen Pfeil. ⌊Ppp. inserts 'çveṣu before goṣu.⌋

22. Of whom the takmán, the kā́sikā, goes as one weapon, like the noise of a stallion horse, to him, leading out in succession, be homage.

The verse is very obscure, and the translation mechanical; Ppp. reads, in a–b, ekā 'çvasya, and this reading is followed; the comm. supplies, to ekam, apakāriṇam puruṣam, and makes it object of eti = prāpnoti. Ludwig understands nirṇayate as 'extracting arrows from the quiver.' ⌊As for vṛṣaṇas, cf. JAOS. x. 534, 524.⌋

23. He who stands propped up in the atmosphere, killing the non-sacrificing, the god-mockers — to him be homage with the ten clever ones (çákvarī).

The 'ten clever ones' are probably the fingers: cf. v. 28. 11; the comm. glosses the word with aṅgulibhis, as = karmasu çaktābhiḥ. Ppp. begins yas tiṣṭhàti viçvabhṛto antarikṣe 'yajvanaṣ pra-.

24. To thee are assigned the forest animals ⌊paçú⌋, the wild beasts in the woods, the geese (haṅsá), eagles, hawks, birds; thine, O lord of cattle, is the monster (? yakṣá) within the waters; for thine increase flow the waters of the heaven.

Ppp. reads, for b, tubhyaṁ vayāṅsi çakunāṣ patatriṇaḥ, elides the a of apsu in c, and combines divyā 'po in d. The comm. has mṛdhe at the end, explaining it as = undanāya. He takes yakṣam as = pūjyaṁ svarūpam, but does not give any reason why, etymological or other. ⌊Our a is nearly xii. 1. 49 a (with the same redundancy of a dissyllable), and b is precisely xii. 1. 51 b: for paçavas, cf. also iii. 31. 3, xi. 5. 21, and iii. 10. 6 note.⌋

25. The dolphins (çiñçumā́ra), boas (ajagará), purīkáyas, jashás, fishes, rajasás, at which thou hurlest: there is no distance for thee nor hindrance for thee, O Bhava; at once thou lookest over the whole earth; from the eastern thou smitest in the northern ocean.

Ppp. begins siçumārā 'jagarāḥ purīṣayā jagā mat-. The comm. has pulīkayās (like MS.); he takes rajasā́ (p. -sā́ḥ) as if it were the instr. sing. rájasā; he passes jaṣā́s and mátsyās without mention, but defines çiñçumāra as 'a kind of crocodile (nakra)' and ajagara as 'a kind of serpent.' For jaṣā́s, some of the mss. (including our Bp.P.M.W.) have jakhā́s, one or two (including our I.) have jaghā́s, and one of SPP's jhaṣā́s; doubtless it is the sea-monster called later jhaṣa. Nearly all the mss. have sárvān in d (only our B. ⌊and D.Kp.?⌋ and two of SPP's sárvāṁ), and SPP's text accordingly admits it, though it seems an evident error, and the comm. reads -vām. Most of the pada-mss. resolve pariṣṭhā́sti into -sthā́ : ásti (instead of asti). We are surprised to find a 'northern' ocean spoken of, and set over against the 'eastern' one ⌊cf. xi. 5. 6⌋, but úttara cannot well mean anything else. Consistency requires the reading -smint sam- in e, but the t is accidentally omitted in our text, and SPP's also leaves it out.

26. Do not, O Rudra, unite (sam-sṛj) us with the takmán, not with poison, not with the fire of heaven; elsewhere than [on] us make that lightning fall.

The comm. again correctly paraphrases saṁ srāḥ with saṁ sṛja.

27. Bhava is master (īç) of the heaven, Bhava of the earth; Bhava has filled the wide atmosphere; to him be homage, in whichever direction from here.

All our mss., and nearly all SPP's, strangely read tásyāi at beginning of c, as if governed by the example of vs. 12 d. SPP. emends to tásmāi in his text, with the comm. and less than a quarter of his authorities; ⌊and the translation implies the change⌋. Ppp. has a different c: tasya vā (with nā written over it) prāpad duchunā kā cane 'ha; it also combines bhavā "papra ⌊urv⌋ in b.

28. O king Bhava, be gracious to the sacrificer, for thou hast become cattle-lord of cattle; whoever has faith, saying "the gods are," be thou gracious to his bipeds [and] quadrupeds.

29. Not our great one, and not our small, not our carrying one, and not those that will carry, not our father and mother do thou harm; our own self (tanū́), O Rudra, do not injure.

The verse occurs also as RV. i. 114. 7; VS. xvi. 15; TS. iv. 5. 10^2; TA. x. 52, with úkṣantam and ukṣitám for váhantam and vakṣyatás in b; vadhīs for hiṅsīs and mó 'tá mātáram for mātáraṁ ca in c; and, for d, mā́ naḥ priyā́s (TS.TA. priyā́ mā́ nas) tanvò rudra rīriṣaḥ. The comm. has vakṣatas in b. ⌊Ppp. has, for b, mā na kṣīyanta uta mā no akṣata.⌋

30. To Rudra's howl-making, unhymned-swallowing (?), great-mouthed dogs I have paid this homage.

The obscure asaṁsūktagilá (Ppp. -girebhyas) is paraphrased by the comm. with asamīcīnam açobhanavacanaṁ gṛṇanti bhāṣante. How asaṁsūkta should come to mean 'unmasticated,' as given in the Pet. Lexx., does not appear. The translation given conjectures 'not having a hymn with it.' The comm. reads elavak- in a.

31. Homage to thy noisy ones, homage to thy hairy ones, homage to those to whom homage is paid, homage to the jointly-enjoying — homage, [namely], O god, to thine armies; welfare [be] to us, and fearlessness to us.

The adjectives are fem., as belonging to senābhyas. Ppp. disagrees with our text in the last two thirds of the verse, but is corrupt. The comm. reads cana at the end. ⌊The vs., as noted above, is quoted in the first abhaya gaṇa (note to 16.8).⌋

⌊Here ends the first anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 68 verses. The quoted Anukr. says tathāi 'va rāudre 'pi parās tu viṅçateḥ, designating the hymn as a "Rudra-hymn."⌋

3. Extolling the rice-dish (odaná).

[Atharvan. — trayaḥ paryāyāḥ.]

⌊Prose, except vss. 19–22.⌋ A corresponding passage is found in Pāipp. xvi., but so different in detail that it would require to be given in full for comparison; and this has not been done.

SPP., without any good reason,* counts the three paryāyas or divisions of this hymn as so many independent hymns, thus not only defacing the structure of the book, but defeating all the references that had been made to it in lexicons and elsewhere.

*⌊Whether Whitney's condemnation of SPP's procedure is justified or not may be decided when all the facts are before us. Some of them have been put together by me, above, pages 610, 611, which see.⌋

⌊The hymn is not cited by Vāit.; nor in the text of Kāuç., unless vs. 31 is meant at 62.8: but Keçava (p. 353^1) cites it for use in witchcraft practices (so the comm.), and also (p. 365^2) for use in the bṛhaspati sava (so comm.).⌋

Translated: Henry, 106, 145; Griffith, ii. 61. — Cf. especially Henry's introduction, p. 145. The rice-dish, hot and yellow and nourishing, is a symbol of the sun (cf. vs. 50); its ingredients and the utensils used in making it are identified with all sorts of things in the most grotesque manner of the Brāhmaṇas.

[Paryāya I. — ekatriṅçat. bārhaspatyāudanadevatyam. 1, 14. āsurī gāyatrī; 2. 3-p. samaviṣamā gāyatrī; 3, 6, 10. āsurī pañkti; 4, 8. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 5, 13, 15, 25. sāmny uṣṇih; 7, 19–22. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; 9, 17, 18. āsury anuṣṭubh; 11. bhurig ārcy anuṣṭubh; 12. yājuṣī jagatī; 16, 23. āsurī bṛhatī; 24. 3-p. prājāpatyā bṛhatī; 26. ārcy uṣṇih; 27. . . . . ; [28, 29.] sāmnī bṛhatī (29. bhurij); 30. yājuṣī triṣṭubh; 31. alpaçaḥ (?) pañktir uta yājuṣī.]

1. Of this rice-dish Brihaspati is the head, Brahman the mouth (múkha).

The comm. combines in part two or three verses of the first paryāya together in giving his explanations.

2. Heaven-and-earth are the ears, sun-and-moon the eyes, the seven seers the breaths-and-expirations.

3. Sight (cákṣus) the pestle, desire (kā́ma) the mortar.

4. Diti the winnowing basket, Aditi the basket-holder; the wind winnowed (apa-vic).

5. Horses the corns (káṇa), kine the grains (taṇḍulá), flies the husks.

6. Kábru the hulls, the cloud the stalk (çára).

The comm. reads kabhru, and gives a forced etymology, from ka 'head' and bhrū 'brow'; he also has çīras for çáras, and this reading is found in some of the mss. (including our B.p.m.,E.s.m.,O.p.m. ⌊and some of SPP's⌋).

7. Dark metal its flesh, red its blood (lóhita).

That is, doubtless, iron and copper respectively.

8. Tin [its] ash, greens (? háritam) [its] color, blue lotus (púṣkara) its smell.

The comm. glosses hárita with heman 'gold.' ⌊Over "greens" W. has interlined "gold? (so BR.)." He rendered hárita by "the yellow one" at v. 28. 5, 9.⌋

9. The threshing-floor [its] receptacle, the two splints (sphyá) [its] shoulders, the two poles (ī́ṣā́) [its] spines (anūkyā̀).

The comm. reads sphāu, and defines as pravṛddhāu dhānyādhārasya çakaṭasyā 'vayavāu; and he defines anūkyè as aṅsayor madhyadehasya ca saṁdhī. Bp. reads īçé for īṣé.

10. Entrails [its] neck-ropes (? jatrú), intestines [its] straps.

Jatrú is rendered with the commentary, who explains it as anaḍudgrīvāṇāṁ çakaṭayojanārthā rajjavaḥ.

11. This very earth is the vessel (kumbhī́) of the finishing (rādh) rice-dish, heaven the cover.

12. The furrows [its] ribs, gravel the content of [its] bowels.

The comm. reads ūvadhyam.

13. Righteousness (ṛtá) [its] hand-washing, the brook (kulyā̀) [its] pouring-on.

In order to force a parallelism into it, the comm. explains ṛta as a 'name for water,' and as signifying 'all the water that is found in the world.' The Pet. Lex., on the other hand, conjectures 'family custom' for kulyā̀; it is translated above as if = kulyā́, as the comm. takes it.

14. With sacred verse (ṛ́c) is the vessel put on, with priesthood sent forth;

15. With sacredness (bráhman) seized about, with sacred chant (sā́man) carried about.

For the sake of the parallelism again, the comm. makes 'priesthood' indicate the Yajur-Veda, and 'sacredness' the Brahma-Veda of the Atharvans.

16. Bṛhát the stirring-stick, rathaṁtará the spoon.

The comm. paraphrases āyavana with udake prakṣiptānāṁ taṇḍulānām miçraṇasādhanaṁ kāṣṭham.

17. The seasons the cooks; they of the seasons kindle fire.

18. Heat (gharmá) burns upon the pot of five openings, the boiler (ukhá).

19. By the rice-dish of him who hath an offering (?) all worlds are to be obtained together.

The translation implies emendation of the unintelligible yajñavacás to yajñavatas, the Ppp. reading, as reported in the minor Pet. Lex. ⌊and Roth's notes⌋. The comm. explains the word as = yajñāir agniṣṭomādibhiḥ prāptavyatveno 'cyamānaḥ.

20. In which ⌊rice-dish⌋ are set (çritá), one below the other, the three, sea, sky, earth.

21. In the remnant (úchiṣṭa) of which took shape six times eighty gods.

The comm. paraphrases akalpanta by samarthā vīryavanto 'bhavan.

22. Thee here I ask of the rice-dish, what is its great greatness.

23. He who may know the greatness of the rice-dish —

24. May not say "[it is] little," not "[it is] without onpouring," nor "[it is] this thing soever."

Upasecana is explained by the comm. as 'milk, butter, curd, or the like, that is poured on' — we might render by 'sauce.'

25. As much as the giver may set his mind upon, that one should not overbid (ati-vad).

26. The theologues (brahmavādín) say: hast thou eaten (pra-aç) the rice-dish as it was retiring (párāñc), or as it was coming on (pratyáñc)?

The pluta- or protracted syllables in this and the next verse are quoted in Prāt. i. 105, but nothing is said as to their accentuation, from which it seems most plausible to infer that the protraction made no difference in the accent; and though in the Brāhmaṇas a protracted syllable is always accented ⌊see Gram. § 78 a⌋, that is not the invariable rule in the Vedic texts (thus, only once among the three instances occurring in RV.). Here the mss. are greatly at variance. ⌊SPP's V. (a then living çrotriya) read prā́çī3ḥ; and by his ms. Dc the reading prā́çīḥ3 is given secunda manu. Among our mss., O.R.Kp. (and E.?) give prā́çīḥ3. SPP. reports that 16 of his authorities agree in giving pratyáñcā́3m; and (apart from the presence or position of the 3) this seems to be the reading of many of W's mss.⌋ SPP's text gives an accent to the protracted syllable in both cases in both vs. 26 and vs. 27. — ⌊SPP's pada-reading in vs. 26 is prá : āçī3ḥ, and in 27 it is prá : ā́çī3ḥ. An accented ā́ in āçī3ḥ would require pra∘ā́çī3ḥ (cf. vs. 28); but one does not see why the ā should be accented.⌋

27. Hast thou eaten the rice-dish, or the rice-dish thee?

The mss. again disagree as to the accent of prāçī3s, the majority (including our Bp.P.M.) having prā́çī3s; as odaná happens to have its natural accent on the final, there is no discordance as to odanā́3ḥ.

28. If thou hast eaten it retiring, thy breaths (prāṇá) will quit thee: so one says to him.

29. If thou hast eaten it coming on, thine expirations (apāná) will quit thee: so one says to him.

30. Not I, indeed, [have eaten] the rice-dish, nor the rice-dish me.

31. The rice-dish itself hath eaten the rice-dish.

As for the other 3, the a of 38 and the a of 41 are accurately defined above, in the first line of the Anukr. excerpts for this paryāya; and the a of 37, in the definition next following the asterisk.⌋

The second paryāya of this hymn is reckoned in the Anukr. as of 72 divisions in 18 gaṇas or paragraphs; but the actual division in the mss. is into 126 such divisions (7 to each gaṇa), as given in both editions; and the metrical description of the Anukr. (as reported above) is also on that basis.

⌊The division of this paryāya into 72 avasānas. — In his Critical Notice, p. 20–21, at the beginning of his first volume, SPP. treats of this matter; and just after the end (p. 356) of the text of his third volume, he prints again this paryāya, but divided into 72 avasānas "according to the instructions contained in the Sarvānukramaṇikā" which he had printed in the Critical Notice, l.c.⌋

⌊The Major Anukr. calls the 18 main divisions of this paryāya (answering to the "verses" of the Berlin ed.) by the name of daṇḍakas. Since the daṇḍakas are all subdivided, they are also (see p. 472) called gaṇas. Each daṇḍaka falls into 7 subdivisions or avasānas, which may be designated as a, b, c, d, e, f, g. Each of these 7 is written out and counted for the first and last daṇḍaka (vss. 32 and 49, Berlin).⌋

⌊Similarly, in a sequence of refrains or anuṣañgas, the refrain is given and counted as an avasāna only for its first and last occurrence in that sequence. The third subdivision (or c: beginning taṁ vā aham) of each daṇḍaka, being unvaried throughout the paryāya, constitutes a sequence of 18 and is given and counted independently only for vss. 32 and 49; while for the 16 vss., 33–48, it is given (see SPP. in vol. iii.) and counted as one with b, thus making the avasāna to consist of b–c. — In like manner, the sixth subdivision (or f: beginning eṣa vā odanaḥ) and the seventh subdivision (or g: beginning sarvāñga eva), being unvaried throughout, constitute a sequence of 18 and are given and counted independently only for vss. 32 and 49; while for the other 16 vss. they are counted as one with e, thus making the avasāna to consist of e–g.⌋

⌊Furthermore, and on the other hand, subdivision e varies as to its beginning between tenāi 'nam, tayāi 'nam, and tāir enam, and tābhyām enam: but we find no unvaried sequences of more than two except tenāi 'nam etc. in the 5 vss., 39–43, and tābhyām enam etc. in the 5 vss., 44–48. For vss. 40, 41, 42, accordingly, and for vss. 45, 46, 47, as well, not only is f–g reckoned to e, but also e–f–g is reckoned as an anuṣaṅga to d, thus making the avasāna to consist of d–g.⌋

⌊For these six verses, therefore, arranged and counted as 3 avasānas (a, b–c, d–g), we have the reckoning 6 × 3 = 18. — For verses 32 and 49 (counted as a, b, c, d, e, f, g, as above noted), we have the reckoning 2 × 7 = 14. — And for the remaining ten verses, we have the arrangement and count, a, b–c, d, e–g, or 10 × 4 = 40. This gives us (18 + 14 + 40 =) 72, which is the count, not only of the Major Anukr., but of the Old Anukr. or Pañcapaṭalikā as well.⌋

32. If ⌊ca⌋ thou hast eaten it with another head than that (tátas) with which the ancient seers ate this, thy progeny, from the oldest down, will die: so one says to him; it verily I [have] not [eaten] coming hither (arvā́ñc), nor retiring, nor coming on; with Brihaspati [as] head, therewith have I eaten it, therewith have I made it go; this rice-dish, verily, is whole-limbed, whole-jointed, whole-bodied; whole-limbed, whole-jointed, whole-bodied becometh he who knoweth thus.

The pada-reading of prā́çīs in a is pra∘ā́çīḥ.

33. If thou hast eaten it with other ears than those ⌊tátas⌋ with which the ancient seers ate this, thou wilt become deaf: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with heaven-and-earth as ears, with them have I eaten it, with them have I made it go etc. etc.

34. If thou hast eaten it with other eyes than those with which the ancient seers ate this, thou wilt become blind: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with sun-and-moon as eyes, with them have I eaten it, with them etc. etc.

All the mss. read sūryācandramasā́bhyām, which SPP. has very properly retained in his text; ours was altered to agree with vi. 128. 3, but the alteration should have been the other way.

35. If thou hast eaten it with another mouth (múkha) than that with which the ancient seers ate this, thy progeny will die from in front (mukhatás): thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with bráhman as mouth, therewith have I etc. etc.

36. If thou hast eaten it with another tongue than that with which the ancient seers ate this, thy tongue will die: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with Agni's tongue, therewith have I etc. etc.

37. If thou hast eaten it with other teeth than those with which the ancient seers ate this, thy teeth will fall out (çad): thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the seasons as teeth, therewith have I etc. etc.

The comm. reads satsyanti for çatsyanti.

38. If thou hast eaten it with other breaths-and-expirations than those with which the ancient seers ate this, breaths-and-expirations will quit thee: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the seven seers as breaths-and-expirations, therewith have I etc. etc.

The mss., as usual, are divided between saptarṣibhis and saptarṣi- in this verse; SPP. adopts the former.

39. If thou hast eaten it with another bulk (vyácas) than that with which the ancient seers ate this, the king-yákshma will slay thee: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the atmosphere as bulk, therewith have I etc. etc.

The comm. explains vyacasā by vyāptimatā rūpeṇa.

40. If thou hast eaten it with another back than that with which the ancient seers ate this, the lightning will slay thee: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the sky as back, therewith have I etc. etc.

41. If thou hast eaten it with another breast than that with which the ancient seers ate this, thou wilt not prosper with plowing: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the earth as breast, therewith have I etc. etc.

42. If thou hast eaten it with another belly than that with which the ancient seers ate this, the colic (? udaradārá) will slay thee: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with truth as belly, therewith have I etc. etc.

The comm. explains udaradāra as udarasya daraṇātmako 'tīsārākhyo rogaḥ, or diarrhœa.

43. If thou hast eaten it with another bladder than that with which the ancient seers ate this, thou wilt die in the waters: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the ocean as bladder, therewith have I etc. etc.

44. If thou hast eaten it with other thighs than those with which the ancient seers ate this, thy thighs will die: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the thighs of Mitra-and-Varuṇa, therewith have I etc. etc.

45. If thou hast eaten it with other knees (aṣṭhīvánt) than those with which the ancient seers ate this, thou wilt become lame: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with Tvashṭar's knees, therewith have I etc. etc.

46. If thou hast eaten it with other feet than those with which the ancient seers ate this, thou wilt be much-wandering: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the feet of the two Açvins, therewith have I etc. etc.

47. If thou hast eaten it with other front-feet than those with which the ancient seers ate this, a serpent will slay thee: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with Savitar's front-feet, therewith have I etc. etc.

Read in our text savitúḥ in d (an accent-mark slipped out of place).

48. If thou hast eaten it with other hands than those with which the ancient seers ate this, thou wilt slay a Brahman: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; with the hands of righteousness (ṛtá), therewith have I etc. etc.

49. If thou hast eaten it with another firm standing (pratiṣṭhā́) than that with which the ancient seers ate this, without firm standing, without support (āyátana) wilt thou die: thus one says to him; it verily [have] I not [eaten] coming hither, nor retiring, nor coming on; standing firm in truth, therewith have I etc. etc.

All our saṁhitā-mss., and the majority of SPP's, have the false accent apratiṣṭhānò 'nāy- in b; both editions emend to -ṣṭhānò. Some of our mss. (B.P.M.) read pratiṣṭhā́yā in d, as if aiming at pratiṣṭháyā.

[Paryāya III. — saptakaḥ. mantroktadevatyam. 50. āsury anuṣṭubh; 51. ārcy uṣṇih; 52. 3-p. bhurik sāmnī triṣṭubh; 53. āsurī bṛhatī; 54. 2-p. bhurik sāmnī bṛhatī; 55. sāmny uṣṇih; 56. prājāpatyā bṛhatī.]

50. This — namely, the rice-dish — is indeed the summit (viṣṭápa) of the ruddy one (bradhná).

51. He cometh to have the ruddy one for his world, he resorteth (çri) to the summit of the ruddy one, who knoweth thus.

52. Out of this rice-dish Prajāpati verily fashioned thirty-three worlds.

53. In order to the knowledge (prajñā́na) of them he created the sacrifice.

54. He who becomes the on-looker (upadraṣṭṛ́) of one knowing thus stops [his own] breath.

Upadraṣṭṛ ought to have here some special and offensive sense; but what? All the mss. leave bhavati unaccented, and SPP's text follows them; ours makes the necessary emendation to bhávati. We might expect runddhe, middle, but the following verses show whose breath is meant.

55. If he does not stop [his own] breath, he is scathed a complete scathing.

The comm. explains sarvajyāním by prajāpaçvādirūpasya sarvasyā 'bhimatasya vastunaḥ . . . hānir yathā bhavati tathā. ⌊Cf. GB. i. 3. 13, p. 52^{18}; LÇS. x. 17. 7.⌋

56. If he is not scathed a complete scathing, before old age breath quits him.

ekatriṅçad bhavet pūrvas tasmād dvāsaptatiḥ paraḥ:
tṛtīyaḥ saptako dṛṣṭo "bṛhaspatiḥ çirasy" api:

'In the [hymn beginning] "bṛhaspatiḥ çiraḥ"' etc. — The summations of gaṇas and (gaṇa-)avasāna-ṛcas are as follows: I. g., 0; av., 31; II. g., 18; av., 72; III. g., 0; av., 7. Total of av., 110. — The second paryāya-sūkta is called also a gaṇa-sūkta.⌋

4. Extolling the breath (prāṇá).

[Bhārgava Vāidarbhi. — ṣaḍviṅçakam. mantroktaprāṇadevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 1. çaṅkumatī; 8. pathyāpaṅkti; 14. nicṛt; 15. bhurij; 20. anuṣṭubgarbhātriṣṭubh; 21. madhyejyotir jagatī; 22. triṣṭubh; 26. bṛhatīgarbhā.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. The whole hymn (together with a considerable number of others) is quoted by its opening words in Kāuç. 55. 17; 58. 3, 11, but not in a way to cast the least light upon its meaning and value. ⌊The hymn is reckoned to the āyuṣya gaṇa (note to Kāuç. 54. 11); the comm. quotes further uses from Nakṣatrakalpa 19, Çāntikalpa 15, and a Pariçiṣṭa.⌋

Translated: Muir, v. 394 (the greater part); Scherman, p. 69 (nearly all); Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 301 (with a general introduction); Henry, 111, 147; Griffith, ii. 64; Bloomfield, 218, 622. — The hymn to Prāṇa, introduced into the second praçna of the Praçna Upanishad, contains reminiscences of this hymn: cf. vs. 19, and Deussen, Upanishads, p. 562.

1. Homage to breath (prāṇá) in whose control is this All, who hath been lord of all, in whom all stands firm.

2. Homage, O breath, to thy roaring, homage to thy thunder; homage, O breath, to thy lightning, homage to thee raining, O breath.

Ppp. reads in c 'stu for prāṇa.

3. When breath with thunder roars at the herbs, they are impregnated (pra-vī), they receive embryos, then they are born many.

Ppp. makes up the material of our vss. 3 and 4 differently, giving first 4 a, b and 3 c, d, and then 3 a, b and 4 c, d. It reads garbhaṁ in c, and vi jāyate in d. The comm. paraphrases pra vīyante with garbhaṁ gṛhṇanti ⌊cf. xii. 4. 37⌋. ⌊For "many" one might better say 'in great numbers.'⌋

4. When, the season having come, breath roars at the herbs, then all is delighted, whatever is upon the earth.

In d in our text, kiṁ is a misprint for kíṁ. With c, d is to be compared the similar half-verse RV. v. 83. 9 c, d.

5. When breath hath rained with rain upon the great earth, then the cattle are delighted: "verily there will be greatness for us."

⌊Cf. vs. 17 below.⌋ Ppp. has, for a, b: yadā prāṇo abhyakrandīd varṣeṇa stanayitnunā. ⌊Pāda d doubtless means precisely the same thing as the English slang, 'that'll be great for us!'⌋

6. The herbs, being rained on, have talked with breath: "verily thou hast extended our life-time; thou hast made us all fragrant."

Ppp. reads in b avāciraṁ, and in c acīcarat.

7. Homage be to thee coming, homage be to [thee] going away; homage to thee, O breath, standing; to thee sitting also [be] homage.

Compare 2. 15 above, which differs only in the vocative used. Ppp. puts the verse after our 8, and reads te 'stu in a, and namo 'stu in b; a few of SPP's authorities make the same combinations.

8. Homage to thee breathing, O breath; homage be to [thee] making expiration; homage to thee turned away, homage to thee turned toward [us]; to the whole of thee [be] this homage.

Ppp. reads in b namo 'stu, and makes parācīnāya and pratīcīnāya change places in c, d.

9. The dear body that is thine, O breath, and the dearer one that is thine, O breath, likewise what remedy is thine, assign thou of it to us in order to life (jīvás).

For yó in b (to be read yā́ u) the comm. has yāu, regarding it as dual.

10. Breath clothes (anu-vas) human beings (prajā́), as a father a dear son; breath is lord of all, both what breathes and what does not.

Ppp. combines prajā 'nu in a, and in d reads twice yas for yat. Prāṇáti in d remains undivided in pada-text by Prāt. iv. 57.

11. Breath [is] death, breath takmán; breath the gods worship (upa-ās); breath may set the truth-speaker in the highest world.

Ppp. has for a prāṇo mṛtyuṣ prāṇo amṛtaṁ ⌊cf. RV. x. 121. 2⌋, which is less devoid of sense; at the end it reads lokaṁ dadhat.

12. Breath is virā́j, breath the directress; breath all worship; breath is the sun, the moon; breath they call Prajāpati.

Ppp. reads prāṇo sarvam ⌊sandhi!⌋ for prāṇaṁ sarve in b, and its c is prāṇo 'gniç candramās sūryaṣ. The comm. explains deṣṭrī as = svasvavyāpāreṣu sarveṣām prerayitrī paradevatā.

13. Breath-and-expiration are rice-and-barley; breath is called the draft-ox; breath is set in barley; expiration is called rice.

Ppp. combines prāṇā "hito in c. Our P.M.W. read yávena for yáve ha in c.

14. A man breathes out (ápānati), breathes (prā́ṇati) within the womb; when, O breath, thou quickenest, then he is born again.

Ppp. reads, in b and beyond: garbhe antaḥ: yā vā tvaṁ prāṇa jinvaḥ sa damba vāyase tvat. The comm. has atho in d.

15. Breath they call Mātariçvan; breath is called the wind; in breath what has been and what will be, in breath is all established (prátiṣṭhita).

Ppp. has at the end samāhitāḥ.

16. They of the Atharvans, they of the Añgirases, they of the gods, also those born of men — the herbs are generated (pra-jā), when thou, O breath, quickenest.

Ppp. has ca yās instead of uta at end of b, and, for c, sarvā pra modanty oṣadhīḥ. The adjectives are feminine, denoting the herbs.

17. When breath hath rained with rain on the great earth, the herbs are generated, likewise whatever plants [there are].

Compare vs. 5 above, of which this is an imitation; Ppp. makes it yet closer, by reading modante for jāyante in c. Some of the saṁhitā-mss. read jāyante 'tho (losing the accent of átho) in c–d.

18. He who knoweth this of thee, O breath, and in whom thou art established — to him shall all bring tribute in yon highest world.

Ppp. separates prāṇa idaṁ in a.

19. As, O breath, all these human beings (prajā́) are tribute-bearers to thee, so shall they bring tribute to him who shall hear thee, O thou of good report (suçrávas).

Ppp. has for d yas tvā çuçrāva çuçruvaḥ; and the comm. also reads çuçruvaḥ. ⌊With this vs., cf. Praçna Upanishad, ii. 7.⌋

20. He moves, an embryo, within the divinities; having come into being (?ábhūta), having been (bhūtá), he is born again; he, having been, entered with might (çácībhis) what is to be, what will be, [as] a father a son.

The understanding of this very obscure verse is not helped by the comm., and Ppp. offers no variants. The comm. reads bhūtam instead of bhavyam in c. A part of the mss. read viveça (not -çā) in d.

21. The swan (haṅsá), ascending, does not extract (ut-khid) one foot from the sea; verily, if he should extract that, there would not be today nor tomorrow; there would not be night nor day; at no time soever would it dawn (vi-vas).

Ppp. reads utpapadam at end of b, and goes on thus: imaṁ sa tum utkhide ahnāivācya naḥ çyo na rātrī nna ha syā hnaṣ prajñā tu ki cana. The comm. explains the verse first as relating to the sun, for which it appears to be really intended, and then as applied to breath, to which it may be conceived to belong as being for the microcosm what the sun is to the macrocosm. ⌊Cf. my note to viii. 7. 24. Here one would indeed be reluctant to translate haṅsa by 'goose.'⌋

22. The eight-wheeled [thing, neut.] rolls, having one rim, thousand-syllabled, forth in front, down behind; with a half it has generated all existence; what its [other] half [is] — which sign is that?

This verse also evidently belongs to the sun; with its mystic ascriptions are to be compared those of the partly corresponding verses x. 8. 7, 13. Ppp. ends instead with kim u tasya ketuḥ; it also combines vartate 'kanemi in a. The comm. reads paçcāt at end of b, and two or three of the mss. (including our O.) do the same. 'In front' and 'behind' are, of course, = 'in the east' and 'in the west.' The ā of aṣṭā́cakra, and its retention in the pada-text (aṣṭā́∘cakram) are by Prāt. iii. 2 and iv. 94.

23. He who is lord of this that has every (víçva) [kind of] birth, of every stirring thing — to thee being such, O breath, having a quick bow among the unexhausted (?ányа), be homage.

The very rare ánya is rendered, at a venture, with the Pet. Lexx. ⌊see BR. under ányā, and OB. i. 66 a, end⌋; ⌊and the parallelism of the next vs., with its átandra, favors this rendering⌋. The wholly obscure pāda in which it occurs is explained by the comm. to mean prāṇiçarīreṣu kṣipraṁ gacchate vyāpnuvate: he takes ánya from the root an 'breathe,' and -dhanvan from dhav 'go.' Ppp. has no variants to help us.

24. He who is lord of this that has all (sárva) [kinds of] birth, of all that stirs, unwearied, wise by bráhman — let breath go after (anu-sthā) me.

Ppp. has at the end the easier reading mām abhi rakṣatu. ⌊W. interlines "attend" as a rendering of anu-sthā.⌋

25. Upright among the sleeping he wakes; by no means (nanú) does he fall down horizontal (tiryáñ); no one soever has heard of his sleeping among the sleeping.

The comm. reads in a jāgara and understands it as impv. 2d sing. Ppp. has in c ⌊? or in a?⌋ svapneṣu. The combination of suptám and asya seems to make it necessary to take the former in the sense of svapna, or of svāpa, as the comm. glosses it. The activity of the breath while the other powers and senses of the body are asleep is a theme of wonder elsewhere also. For suptéṣú in a, read suptéṣu (an accent-mark slipped over the wrong syllable).

26. O breath, turn not about from me; not another than I shalt thou be; like the embryo of the waters, in order to life (jīvás), I bind thee to me, O breath.

The obscure second pāda is by the comm. explained to mean mayā saha tādātmyāpanna eva vartase. Some mss. (including our O.) accent mát both times, and SPP. follows them in his text: compare xii. 3. 46.

⌊The quoted Anukr. says "prāṇāya."⌋

⌊Here ends the second anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 82 verses, according to the count of the Berlin edition: that is 1 paryāya-sūkta with 3 paryāyas and 56 verses and 1 artha-sūkta with 26 verses. But some mss. sum up the anuvāka as containing 136 "verses of both sorts," that is the 110 avasāna-rcas of our h. 3 (see p. 632, top, and p. 629, top) and the 26 ṛcas of our h. 4.⌋

⌊The following quotation from the Old Anukr. seems to be put after the end of h. 4 as pertaining to the anuvāka: trayas "tasyāu 'dano" bhavet. Does this mean that we have no right to count the "tasyāudana" as less than 3 hymns? Cf. p. 611, ¶ 4.⌋

5. Extolling the Vedic student (brahmacārín).

[Brahman. — ṣaḍviṅçakam. mantroktabrahmacārīdevatyam. trāiṣṭubham: 1. puro'tijāgata-virāḍgarbhā; 2. 5-p. bṛhatīgarbhā virāṭ çakvarī; 6. çākvaragarbhā 4-p. jagatī; 7. virāḍ-garbhā; 8. puro'tijāgatā virāḍ jagatī; 9. bṛhatīgarbhā; 10. bhurij; 11. jagatī; 12. çākvaragarbhā 4-p. virāḍ atijagatī; 13. jagatī; 15. purastājjyotis; 14, 16–22. anuṣṭubh; 23. purobārhatātijāgatagarbhā; 25. 1-av. ārcy uṣṇih; 26. madhyejyotir uṣṇiggarbhā.*]
*⌊The words virāṭ çakvarī are lacking in the London ms. and are supplied from the Berlin ms. The latter adds parā urobṛhatī: but vs. 3 is hardly metrical, and at any rate no urobṛhatī.⌋

Found also in Pāipp. xvi. (with slight differences of order, which will be pointed out under the verses). Not quoted either in the Kāuçika or in the Vāitāna Sūtra; ⌊but the schol. to Kāuç. 55. 18 prescribe vs. 3 for use in the upanayana⌋. ⌊It is cited also at the beginning of GB. (i. 2. 1–8), the chapter on the brahmacārin.⌋

Translated: Muir, v. 400 (18 vss.); Ludwig, p. 452; Scherman, p. 84 (19 vss.); Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 277; Henry, 114, 150; Griffith, ii. 68; Bloomfield, 214, 626. — Cf. also Bergaigne-Henry, Manuel, p. 161; Hillebrandt, Ved. Mythol., i. 471. Henry, p. ix of his preface to Books X–XII, cites this hymn in his discussion of bráhman, which he connects with root bhrāj; and Oldenberg reviews the matter in IFA. viii. 40–41. Deussen entitles the hymn "The Brahman-pupil as incarnation of Brahm," and gives a general interpretation of its content by way of introduction. This should be consulted. The rendering "Vedic-studentship" is too rigid to fit everywhere: cf. vs. 18, note.

1. The Vedic student goes on setting in motion (iṣ) both firmaments; in him the gods become like-minded; he maintains earth and heaven; he fills his teacher with fervor (tápas).

Ppp. has yasmin for tasmin in b; it rectifies the meter of c by reading at the end dyām utā 'mūm; it combines sā "cāryam, and ends the verse with bibharti. The comm. explains piparti with pālayati both here and in vs. 2.

2. The Fathers, the god-folk, all the gods individually assemble after the Vedic student; the Gandharvas went after him, thirty-three, three hundred, six thousand; he fills all the gods with fervor.

Ppp. puts the verse after 3, and reads, after pitaras in a, manuṣyā devajanā gandharvā 'nusaṁyantu sarve: trayastriṅçataṁ triçataṁ ṣaṭsahasrān sarvān sa devāṅs tapasā bibharti. None of the mss., nor either edition, reads ṣaṭtsahasrāḥ, as required by Prāt. ii. 8.

3. The teacher, taking [him] in charge (upa-nī), makes the Vedic student an embryo within; he bears him in his belly three nights; the gods gather unto him to see him when born.

Upa-nī probably already a technical term for 'receive as pupil, initiate.' ⌊Prescribed in the schol. to Kāuç. 55. 18, as noted above.⌋ ⌊The first line seems to be prose: see at end of Anukr.-extracts.⌋

4. This piece of fuel [is] earth, sky the second; also the atmosphere he fills with fuel; the Vedic student fills the worlds with fuel, girdle, toil, fervor.

Ppp. reads mekhalāvī for -layā, and at the end again ⌊for the third time⌋ bibharti. ⌊We have the converse variant at xiii. 1. 1.⌋

5. Prior born of the bráhman, the Vedic student, clothing himself with heat (gharmá), stood up with fervor; from him [was] born the bráhmaṇa, the chief bráhman, and all the gods, together with immortality (amṛ́ta).

Ppp. reads tapaso 'dhi tiṣṭhat at end of b. Of a the meaning may probably be 'was born before the bráhman' (so the translators).

6. The Vedic student goes kindled with fuel, clothing himself in the black-antelope-skin, consecrated, long-bearded; he goes at once from the eastern to the northern ocean, having grasped the worlds, again and again violently shaping (?ācarikṛ) [them].

Ppp. reads in b kārṣṇiṁ, and in c sadyet pūrvād. The comm. has in d saṁgṛhya; he explains muhur ācarikrat by atyartham ābhimukhyena karoti. ⌊'Northern ocean': cf. note to xi. 2. 25.⌋

7. The Vedic student, generating the bráhman, the waters, the world, Prajāpati, the most exalted one, the virā́j, having become an embryo in the womb of immortality; having become Indra, he has shattered (tṛh) the Asuras.

Ppp. reads in d amṛtān instead of asurān. More than half of SPP's authorities read bhūtvā amṛt- uncombined in c.

8. The teacher fabricated both these envelops (nábhas), the wide, profound, [namely] earth and sky; them the Vedic student defends by fervor; in him the gods become like-minded.

The last pāda is identical with 1 b above. Ppp. is more original, reading for c, d: tāu brahmacārī tapasā 'bhi rakṣati tayor devās sadamādam madanti; it also omits ime in a; and it puts the verse after our vs. 9. The comm. ⌊and two of SPP's authorities⌋ read tam for te at beginning of c.

9. This broad (pṛthivī́) earth, and the sky, the Vedic student first brought [as] alms (bhikṣā́); having made them [both] fuel, he worships; in them are set (ā́rpita) all beings.

Ppp. omits the meter-disturbing ā́ in b, and reads for c, te brahma kṛtvā samidhā upāsata. 'Worships': i.e., as the comm. explains, 'tends the fire with them.'

10. The one this side, the other beyond, the back of the sky, in secret [are] deposited ⌊ni-dhā⌋ the two treasures (nidhí) of the bráhmaṇa; them the Vedic student defends by fervor; the whole of that he, knowing, makes bráhman for himself.

The construction and sense of the last pāda are very doubtful. For c, Ppp. has its version of our 8 c over again: tāu brahmacārī tapasā 'bhi rakṣati; it also combines parā 'nyo in a. ⌊To bring out the play of the original, one might render nidhí by 'deposits.'⌋

11. The one this side, the other hence, from earth, the two fires come together between these two envelops; upon them are set (çri) the firm rays; these the Vedic student stands upon by fervor.

For our obscure first pāda Ppp. substitutes a more translatable version: arvāg anyo divas pṛṣṭhād ito 'nyaṣ pṛthivyāḥ; and it reads ati for 'dhi in c; and the comm. has also ati, combining it with the following to atidṛḍhās. ⌊The comm. also has tām (misprinted tā: see "Corrections") for tān in d.⌋

12. Roaring on, thundering, the ruddy white-goer has introduced (?anu-bhṛ) in the earth a great virile member; the Vedic student pours seed upon the surface (sā́nu), on the earth; by that live the four directions.

Extremely obscure, and there are no valuable variants. Ppp. has at the beginning abhikrandann iruṇac chatiñgo; the comm. reads varuṇaḥ çyatiñgo, explaining the latter word by çyetavarṇaṁ jalapūrṇam megham prāptaḥ. The last pāda is found elsewhere, as ix. 10. 19 d, RV. i. 164. 42 b.

⌊For consistency, the Berlin ed. should have abhikrándant.⌋ ⌊The Anukr. defines the vs. as of 50 syllables and appears to scan it as 13 + 11 : 11 + 14 = 49. The ms. puts the mark of pāda-division before pṛthivyā́m. This last is a most palpable gloss of sā́nāu. If we reject it, pādas b, c, d are good triṣṭubhs.⌋

13. In the fire, in the sun, in the moon, in Mātariçvan, in the waters, the Vedic student puts fuel; their gleams (arcís) go about separately in the cloud; their sacrificial butter (ā́jya) is man, rain, waters.

Ludwig conjectures "purīṣam fog" in d for puruṣas. Ppp. is too corrupt in c, d to be of service. 'Their' in c, d is tā́sām fem., apparently relating to samidhas 'sticks of fuel,' though we had only the singular in b; but the comm. regards it as 'of fire etc.,' the fem. being used because the last of the series (⌊the meter-disturbing⌋ apsu 'waters') was feminine — which is possible.

14. The teacher [was] death, Varuṇa, Soma, the herbs, milk; the thunder-clouds were warriors; by them [was] this heaven (svàr) brought.

This verse stands in Ppp. before our vs. 13; it reads at the beginning parjanyas instead of ācāryas, reads in c jīmūtā "san, and in d svar ābharam. The comm., in order to put some sense into the identification of the teacher with death and Varuṇa, regards it as alluding to the instruction of Naciketas by Death (Kaṭha Upanishad, etc.) and of Bhṛgu by Varuṇa ⌊TA. ix. 1, etc.⌋. ⌊For c, d, Roth compares ÇB. xi. 8. 1².⌋

15. Varuṇa, having become teacher, makes his own (?amā́) the entire ghee; whatever he sought of Prajāpati, that the Vedic student furnished, a friend (mitrá) from his own self.

The translation implies svā́t as the proper pada-reading in d, and the comm. also understands this; but all the pada-mss. read svā́n, as if accus. pl. The end of this verse and the beginning of the next are unfortunately wanting in Ppp.; it reads at the beginning amād idaṁ kṛṇ-. The mss. put the avasāna after prajā́patāu instead of after váruṇaḥ, and SPP. divides accordingly ⌊see his note⌋; our division is changed in obedience to the requirements of the sense. Ludwig understands mitrás as signifying the god Mitra.

16. The teacher [is] the Vedic student; the Vedic student [is] Prajāpati; Prajāpati bears rule (vi-rāj); the virā́j became the controlling Indra.

17. By Vedic-studentship, by fervor, a king defends his kingdom; a teacher by Vedic-studentship (brahmacárya) seeks a Vedic student.

Ppp. reads rakṣate in b, and ichati in d.

18. By Vedic-studentship a girl wins (vid) a young husband; by Vedic-studentship a draft-ox, a horse strives to gain (ji) food.

Instead of jigīṣati at the end, SPP. reads jigīrṣati 'strives to swallow,' finding it in the comm., and in less than a quarter (four out of seventeen) of his authorities; none of ours give it, so far as noted. Ppp. suggests yet another and a better reading, namely jihīrṣati — if, as seems probable, that underlies its corruption jāhiruṣati. As between jigīṣati and jigīrṣati, the former seems preferable. ⌊These verses will seem much less inept if we give a less rigid interpretation to brahmacarya: see Deussen, p. 281, p. 278.⌋

19. By Vedic-studentship, by fervor, the gods smote away death; Indra by Vedic-studentship brought heaven (svàr) for the gods.

Ppp. reads apā 'jayan at end of b ⌊and amṛtaṁ for devebhyaḥ in d⌋.

20. The herbs, past and future, day and night, the forest tree, the year together with the seasons — they are born of the Vedic student.

All the saṁhitā-mss. chance to agree in c in reading sahá ṛtúbhis, which SPP. accordingly gives in his text. Ppp. also has it; and further bhūtābhavyam in a, and brahmacāriṇā at the end.

21. The earthly, the heavenly cattle, they of the forest, and they that are of the village, the wingless and they that are winged — they are born of the Vedic student.

Ppp. again reads at the end -cāriṇā. ⌊For paçavas, cf. xi. 2. 24 note.⌋

22. Individually do all that are of Prajāpati bear breaths in their bodies (ātmán); all these the bráhman defends, brought in the Vedic student.

Ppp. reads at end of b bibhrate; one would like to emend to bíbhratas. ⌊But cf. Deussen's interpretation, p. 282.⌋ Ppp. also has in c sarvāṅs tān.

23. That, sent forth (?pariṣūtá) of the gods, not mounted onto, goes about shining; from that [was] born the brā́hmaṇa, the chief bráhman, and all the gods, together with immortality.

The translation of the first half-verse is merely mechanical. The second is identical with 5 c, d, above. Ppp. puts the verse after our vs. 24, reads puruhūtam instead of the obscure pariṣūtam in a, and gives the verse a last half of its own: tasmin sarve paçavas tatra yajñās tasminn annaṁ saha devatābhiḥ; and this version of the second half-verse is given in GB. i. 2. 7. The comm. explains pariṣūtam as parigṛhītam; ātmatayā sākṣātkṛtam.

24. The Vedic student bears a shining bráhman; in that [are] woven together all the gods; [he] generating breath-and-expiration, then outbreathing (vyāná), speech, mind, heart, bráhman, wisdom.

Ppp. reads in b asmin for tasmin; its verse has for second half our 26 c, d, and our 24 c, d is added at the end of our 23, which, as above noticed, comes second of the two verses; it reads for d cakṣuç çrotraṁ janayan brahma medhām. ⌊The sequence is, therefore, 24 a, b, 26 c, d, 23, 24 c, d.⌋ The GB. cites prāṇāpānāu janayan as a pratīka at i. 2. 8.

25. Sight, hearing, glory put thou in us; food, seed, blood (lóhita), belly.

26. Shaping (?) these things, the Vedic student stood performing penance (tapas tapya-) on the back of the sea (salilá), in the ocean; he, bathed, brown, ruddy (piñgalá), shines much on the earth.

The comm. explains 25 and 26 together, as if one verse. The translation implies the emendation, apparently unavoidable, of kálpat to kálpan; the comm. makes no scruple of glossing it with kalpayan.

⌊The quoted Anukr. says "brahmacārī" ca.⌋

⌊Here ends the twenty-fourth prapāṭhaka.⌋

6. To many different gods: for relief.

⌊The hymn is included by Kāuç. 9. 2, 4 in the çānti gaṇas, major and minor; and all of the hymn except vss. 7, 9, 22, 23 (those in which the word aṅhas is missing) is reckoned to the aṅholiñga gaṇa (note to 32. 27). The last verse is cited separately at 58. 25 in a rite for long life. The same verse is variously cited by the subordinate works and the schol.: see note to 9. 2; 42. 13 (student's return); 53. 8 (godāna); 55. 1 (upanayana); Keç. to 44. 5 (vaçāçamana). Verse 9 is reckoned to the rāudra gaṇa, note to 50. 13.⌋

Translated: Henry, 117, 155; Griffith, ii. 72; Bloomfield, 160, 628.

1. We address (brū) Agni, the forest trees, the herbs and the plants, Indra, Brihaspati, the sun: let them free us from distress.

The comm. questions whether to render brūmas by stumas or by iṣṭaphalaṁ yācāmahe.

2. We address king Varuṇa, Mitra, Vishṇu, likewise Bhaga; Añça, Vivasvant we address: let them free us from distress.

3. We address god Savitar, Dhātar and Pūshan; we address Tvashṭar at the head (agriyá): let them free us from distress.

MS. has nearly the same verse in ii. 7. 13, but with a like our 2 a.

4. The Gandharvas-and-Apsarases we address, the (two) Açvins, Brahmaṇaspati, the god that is Aryaman by name: let them free us from distress.

5. Day-and-night now we address, sun-and-moon both; all the Ādityas we address: let them free us from distress.

Ppp. combines, in b, -masā ubhā, and reads in c ādityān sarvān.

6. The wind we address, Parjanya, the atmosphere, also the quarters, and all regions we address: let them free us from distress.

7. Let day-and-night, likewise dawn, free me from what comes from a curse; let god Soma free me, whom they call the moon.

Ppp. reads at end of b vṛṣā for uṣāḥ, and in c ādityas for devas. ⌊Cf. Hillebrandt, Ved. Mythol., i. 270.⌋

8. The earthly, the heavenly cattle, also the beasts (mṛgá) that are of the forest; we address the hawks (çakúnta), the birds (pakṣín): let them free us from distress.

Or, 'the winged hawks.' Ppp. has a better and more independent a (ours = 5. 21 a, above): ye grāmyās sapta paçavaḥ ⌊cf. iii. 10. 6 note⌋.

9. Bhava-and-Çarva now we address, Rudra and him that is lord of cattle; the arrows of them which we well know (saṁ-vid) — let those be ever propitious to us.

Ppp. reads in b ugras for rudram, and, instead of d, the refrain te no muñcantv aṅhasaḥ. The comm. has vidmas for -ma in c. ⌊Pāda d is nearly repeated at vs. 22 d.⌋

10. We address the sky, the asterisms, the earth, the yakṣás, the mountains; the oceans, the rivers, the pools — let them free us from distress.

Ppp. reads in b bhāumam. The comm. explains yakṣāṇi as pūjyāni tatratyāni puṇyakṣetrāṇi. MS. has the verse in ii. 7. 13, but reads samudrā́n and veçantā́n in c.

11. The seven seers now we address, the heavenly waters, Prajāpati; the Fathers with Yama as their chief (çréṣṭha) we address: let them free us from distress.

Most of the mss. (including all of ours that are noted) read saptarṣī́n in a, and SPP. gives it in his text; the comm. has saptarṣīn.

12. The gods that are seated in the sky, and that are seated in the atmosphere, the mighty ones (çakrá) that are set (çri) on the earth — let them free us from distress.

⌊We had a, b above at x. 9. 12. In a read devā́so?⌋

13. The Ādityas, the Rudras, the Vasus, the gods in heaven, the Atharvans, the Aṅgirases full of wisdom — let them free us from distress.

Perhaps b is rather 'the divine Atharvans in heaven'; Ppp. reads devā dāivā atharvaṇaḥ.

14. We address the sacrifice, the sacrificer, the verses (ṛ́c), the chants (sā́man), the remedies; the sacred formulas (yájus), the invocations we address: let them free us from distress.

Bheṣajā, which probably refers to material like that included in the Atharva-Veda, is explained by the comm. as çāntikarāṇi vāmadevyādīni; no hymns in our collection receive any such title in the Kāuçika.

15. The five kingdoms of plants, having Soma as their chief (çréṣṭha), we address; the darbhá, hemp, barley, sáha — let them free us from distress.

Ppp. rectifies the meter of b by reading brūmasi; in c it puts bhañgas before darbhas. The mss., as usual, differ as to the accent of rājya; several (including our O.) read rā́jyāni, and our R.s.m. has rājyà̄ni. The comm. calls saha simply 'a kind of herb.'

16. The niggards we address, the demons, the serpents, the pure-folk, the Fathers; the hundred-and-one deaths we address: let them free us from distress.

⌊With b, cf. viii. 8. 15, and 9. 24 below. Cf. note to iii. 11. 5 for the "hundred-and-one deaths." Cf. also Chāndogya Up., viii. 7^3, 9^3, 10^3, where Indra passes three thirty-two-year terms of studentship with Prajāpati and is then bidden (viii. 11^3) to pass five years more, to make out the full tale of 101 years.⌋

17. The seasons we address, the lords of the seasons, the year-divisions and the winters, the summers, the years, the months: let them free us from distress.

The verse nearly agrees with iii. 10. 9. The comm. quotes from Tāitt. Brāh. ii. 6. 19 in explanation of what gods are lords of the several seasons. Ārtavān he defines as tattadṛtuviçeṣasambandhinaḥ padārthān; hāyana and samā are to him simply other names for 'year.'

18. Come, ye gods, from the south; from the west come up eastward; from the east, from the north, mighty, all the gods, coming together: let them free us from distress.

Ppp. rectifies the meter of b by adding nas at the end.

19. All the gods now we address, of true agreements, increasers of righteousness, together with all their spouses: let them free us from distress.

20. The collective gods now we address, of true agreements, increasers of righteousness, together with their collective spouses: let them free us from distress.

This verse (omitted in Ppp.) differs from the preceding only by twice reading sarva instead of viçva. The epithet ṛtāvṛ́dh may also signify 'increasing by righteousness.'

21. Existence we address, the lord of existences, and who is controller of existences; all existences, assembling — let them free us from distress.

Bhūtám at the beginning may be adjective, 'him who is.' Ppp. reads patis for vaçī at end of b, and, for c, bhūtāni sarvā brūmas.

22. They that are the five divine directions, that are the twelve divine seasons, that are the fangs of the year — let them be ever propitious to us.

All the saṁhitā-mss. happen to read together in b dvā́daça rtávaḥ, which SPP. adopts; Ppp. makes the same combination. ⌊Pāda d is nearly 9 d above.⌋

23. The immortal remedy, chariot-bought, which Mātalī knows — that Indra made enter into the waters; that remedy, O waters, give ye.

The pada-text reads mā́talī also. ⌊Concerning Mātalī, see Weber, Sb. 1895, p. 837.⌋ All the mss. accent ā́po in d, and it accordingly is read by both editions; but the sense requires the emendation to āpo, as translated; ⌊so the comm.: he āpaḥ⌋. The verse is so discordant with the rest of the hymn as to seem an addition made to it; ⌊it is not found in Ppp.⌋.

The comm. ⌊p. 123⌋ regards the verse as referred to in Vāit. 3. 13, quoting the whole sūtra, but with mātalyā instead of pātrāṇy at the beginning; the mss. of Vāit. read mātalyā or mārttalyā.

⌊Here ends the third anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 49 verses. The quoted Anukr. says agnim-brūmake tisraḥ: i.e. 'in the hymn agnim brūmaḥ, there are three [over twenty].'⌋

7. Extolling the remnant (úcchiṣṭa) of the offering.

[Atharvan. — saptavin̄çati. mantroktochiṣṭādhyātmadāivatam. ānuṣṭubham *: 6. puroṣṇigbārhataparā; 21. svarāj; 22. virāṭ pathyābṛhatī.] *⌊The Anukr. omits the definition of vs. 11 as pathyāpañkti.⌋

Found also (except vs. 25) in Pāipp. xvi. ⌊The hymn is not cited in the text of Kāuç. nor of Vāit.⌋

Translated: Muir, v. 397 (part); Scherman, p. 87 (part); Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 305–310; Henry, 120, 156; Griffith, ii. 75; Bloomfield, 226, 629. — See Deussen's valuable introduction. He does not believe that ucchiṣṭa means 'remnant of the offering' in this hymn, but rather 'residuum in general,' the remainder that we get after subtracting from the universe all the forms of the world of phenomena.

1. In the remnant [are set] name and form, in the remnant [is] set the world; within the remnant both Indra and Agni, everything is set together.

The comm. connects the hymn with hymn 3, above, making the ucchiṣṭa the remnant of Aditi's rice-dish; he quotes Tāitt. Brāh. i. 1. 9¹, where it says "they gave her what remained" (ucchesana) etc. Ppp. reads rūpāṇi for rūpaṁ ca in b.

2. In the remnant heaven-and-earth, all existence is set together; in the remnant the waters, the ocean, the moon, the wind is set.

Ppp. combines at the end vātā "hitaḥ.

3. In the remnant [are] the being one and the non-being one, both, death, vigor, Prajāpati; they of the world (lāukyá) are supported (ā-yat) on the remnant, both vrá and drá; also fortune (çrī́) in me.

Ppp. reads 'sañç ⌊for asañç⌋ in a; in d, where we should welcome its aid in making sense, it is corrupt, reading pṛçcadṛçcāvṛçcīr mayi; it also combines ucchiṣṭā "yattās in c. The comm. has āhitās again instead of āyattās in c; he supplies prajās to lāukyās; and he explains vras as vārako varuṇaḥ and dras as drāvako 'mṛtamayaḥ somaḥ, and the last clause by tatprasādāc chrīḥ sampad mayi viduṣy āhitā "sthitā bhavatu.

4. Being fixed, fix thou, being stanch, nyá, the bráhman, the ten all-creators; as the wheel on all sides of the nave, the divinities [are] set (çritá) in the remnant.

Ppp. gives no variant in a; at the end it has devatā hitāḥ (i.e. "hitāḥ?). SPP., against the authority of all the pada-mss., combines dṛṅhasthiras into one word, merely because the comm. so explains it (dṛṅhaṇena sthirīkṛto lokaḥ) — which is no reason at all for such an absurdity. Nyas the comm. glosses with netāras tatratyāḥ prāṇinaḥ, which gives us no help.

5. The verse (ṛ́c), the chant (sā́man), the formula (yájus) [are] in the remnant, [also] the song (udgīthá), the introductory praise (prástuta), the praise (stutá); the sound hing [is] in the remnant, the tone (svára), and the ring (? meḍí) of the chant; that in me.

The comm. gives alternative explanations of svára and meḍí, showing that their technical meaning was doubtful to him, as to us. Ppp. has for b udgītaṣ prastutaṁ sthitam; in d it has mīḍhus for meḍis. ⌊To the last clause the comm. supplies bhavatu: cf. vss. 12, 14.⌋

6. That relating to Indra-and-Agni, that to the purifying [Soma] (pāvamānā́), the great-named ones (f., mahā́nāmnīs), the great ceremony (mahāvratá) — within the remnant are [all] the members of the sacrifice, like an embryo within a mother.

The āindrāgna and pāvamāna are explained by the comm. as two sāmans; for the mahānāmnīs he refers to Āit. Ār. iv. 1.

7. The rājasūya (royal consecration), the vājapéya (vigor-drinking), the agniṣṭomá (fire-praise), then the sacrifice (adhvará), the arká and açvamedhá (horse-sacrifice) [are] in the remnant, the one having a living barhís, most intoxicating.

Ppp. has in b the preferable reading tato 'dhvaraḥ.

8. The establishing of a fire, also the consecration, the desire-fulfiller, together with the meter (chándas); the removed (? útsanna) sacrifices, the sacrificial sessions (sattrá), are set together in the remnant.

All the pada-mss. read in b kāma∘práḥ : chándasā:, but no saṁhitā-ms. gives correspondingly kāmapráç chán-; they vary between -prá chán- (thus the majority) and -práḥ chán- (including our I.K.); both editions emend to -práç chán-; the comm. understands the two words as one compound. He also reads utsannayajñās as a compound in c, and takes it to mean sacrifices that have gone out of use and knowledge.

9. Both the fire-offering (agnihotrá) and faith, the váshaṭ-exclamation, the vow (vratá), penance, the sacrificial gift (dákṣiṇā), what is offered (iṣṭá) and what is bestowed (pūrtá) — are set together in the remnant.

Ppp. reads 'ti instead of 'dhi in d. The comm. explains iṣṭá as çrutivihitaṁ yāgahomādi karma, and pūrtá as smṛtipurāṇābhihitaṁ vāpīkūpataṭākadevāyatanārāmādinirmāṇam.

10. The one-night [sacrifice], the two-night, the same-day-purchase (sadyaḥkrī́), the purchasable (? prakrī́), the praiseworthy (ukthyà) — [it] is woven, deposited, in the remnant; the minute things of the sacrifice, by wisdom.

Ppp. betters the grammar of the last half-verse by reading for d yajñasyā 'no nu vidyayā. The comm. reads in b sadyaskrīḥ; sadyaḥkrī is especially prescribed by Prāt. ii. 62.

11. The four-night [sacrifice], the five-night, and the six-night, of both kinds, together, the one of sixteen (ṣoḍaçín), and the seven-night — from the remnant were born all the sacrifices that are put in immortality.

Ppp. combines yajñā 'mṛte near the end. The comm. understands by ubhayas in b the doubles of the numbers of nights given. Ṣoḍaçin is the subject of Prāt. iv. 51, and catūrātra (p. catuḥ∘rātraḥ) of Prāt. iv. 80.

12. The response (pratīhārá), the conclusion (nidhána), both the all-conquering and the on-conquering (abhijít) one, the same-day and over-night ones [are] in the remnant, the twelve-day one: also that in me.

Ppp. has at the beginning pratihāro. ⌊The comm. joins the "also" to what precedes and says that "that in me" (supply bhavatu) is to be understood as a prayer: cf. vss. 5, 14.⌋

13. Pleasantness, compliance (sáṁnati), comfort (kṣéma), custom (? svadhā́), refreshment, immortality, power — in the remnant all occurring (pratyáñc) desires are satisfied with desire.

Ppp. reads at the end tṛmpanti. Most of the pada-mss. and many of the saṁhitā-mss. read simply kṣéma in a (including our Bp.O.D.R.K.Kp.).

14. The nine earths, oceans, skies, are set (çritá) in the remnant; the sun shines in the remnant; day-and-night: also that in me.

The pada-mss. in general read simply çritā́ (or çṛtā́) in b. Two or three mss. (including our O.) read 'pi in d. Ppp. reads in a, b bhūmyāṁ samudrasyo 'chiṣṭe, and has ca for api in d. ⌊The comm. treats the last words of the vs. as under vs. 12.⌋

15. The added oblation (upahávya), the dividing [day], and the sacrifices that are put in secret, the remnant bears, bearer of all, father of the generator.

Ppp. reads divi çrutaḥ ⌊intending çritāḥ ?⌋ for guhā hitāḥ in b. The mss. are divided between upahávyam and upahavyám; the latter is read by our B.W.O.s.m. D.R.T.; and K. has -havyàm.

16. The remnant, father of the generator, of breath (ásu) the grandson, grandfather — he dwells, ruler of all, an overpowering (? atighnyà) bull upon the earth.

Ppp. reads in b 'sāu putraç ca, which, without the ca, is an acceptable improvement.

17. Righteousness, truth, penance, kingship, toil, and virtue (dhárma) and deed (kárman), being (bhūtá), what will be, [is] in the remnant; heroism, fortune (lakṣmī́), strength in strength.

Ppp. has dīkṣā for rāṣṭram in a: a better reading. The comm. explains ṛta here by manasā yathārthasaṁkalpanam 'right conception'; bale at the end he makes = balavati tasminn ucchiṣṭe.

18. Success, force, design, dominion, kingship, the six wide [quarters], the year [is] in the remnant, íḍā, the orders (prāiṣá), the dips (gráha), the oblation.

Ppp. combines ojā ’kūtiḥ in a. ⌊W. interlines 'potions' as an alternative for 'dips.'⌋

19. The four-priest (cátur-hotṛ) [sacrifices], the āprī́s, the seasonal [oblations], the nivíds — in the remnant [are] the sacrifices, the invocations, the victim-offerings (paçubandhá), then the offerings (íṣṭi).

Tádiṣṭayaḥ at the end in our edition is a misprint for tád íṣṭayaḥ.

20. Both the half-months and the months, the year-divisions (ārtavá) with the seasons; in the remnant [are] the noisy waters, the thunder, the great sound (? çrúti).

The comm. reads çuci in d, so we lack his conjecture as to the meaning of çruti.

21. Pebbles, gravel, stones, herbs, plants, grasses, clouds, lightnings, rain — in the remnant [are they] set together, set.

Ppp. combines sikatā ’çm- in a. ⌊Read oṣadhīr?⌋

22. Success (ṛ́ddhi), attainment, obtainment, permeation, greatness, prosperity ⌊edhatú⌋ — in the remnant over-attainment and growth (bhū́ti) [is] put in, put down, put.

Several of our mss. (P.M.W.I.O.) accent vyā́pti in b. All the mss. save one or two (including our B.) leave edhatuḥ unaccented, as if it were taken for a 3d dual perfect; both editions read edhatúḥ. The comm. strangely reads at the end hitāḥ; ⌊but the pada-text makes all three words of d singular⌋.

23. Both what breathes with breath and what sees with sight: from the remnant were born all the gods in heaven, heaven-resorters.

24. The verses (ṛ́c), the chants, the meters, the ancient (purāṇá), together with the formula (yájus): from the remnant were born etc. etc.

Ppp. reads, for ṛcaḥ sāmāni, ṛgyajussāmāni, and also prefixes to the verse our 27 a, b (combining devāṣ pit-).

25. Breath-and-expiration, sight, hearing, indestructibleness and destruction: from the remnant etc. etc.

The first half-verse is found below as 8. 4 a, b, 26 a, b. The verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp.

26. Delights, joys, enjoyments, and they that enjoy enjoyments — from the remnant etc. etc.

⌊The first half-verse recurs as 8. 24 a, b.⌋ ⌊In the Berlin ed., there should be a space between módāḥ and pra-.⌋

27. The gods, the Fathers, human beings, and they that are Gandharvas-and-Apsarases: from the remnant etc. etc.

⌊The quoted Anukr. says "uchiṣṭe."⌋

8. Mystic: especially on the constitution of man.

[Kāurupathi.—catustriṅçat. adhyātmamanyudāivatam. ānuṣṭubham: 33. pathyāpaṅkti.]

Found also (except vss. 33, 34) in Pāipp. xvi. (in the verse-order 1–6, 8–10, 7, 12, 11, 13, 15, 14, 16–32). ⌊The hymn is noticed neither by Kāuç. nor by Vāit.⌋

Translated: Ludwig, p. 402; Scherman, p. 67 (8 vss.); Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 270–277 (with introduction and interpretation); Henry, 123, 160; Griffith, ii. 80.

1. When fury (manyú) brought his wife away from the house of contrivance (saṁkalpá), who were the groomsmen (jánya)? who the wooers (vará)? who also was chief wooer?

Ppp. combines in c kā "san. ⌊Its c, d = our 6 c, d.⌋

2. Penance and also action were within the great sea (arṇavá); those were the groomsmen, those the wooers; the bráhman was chief wooer.

The pada-mss. (save one of SPP's) divide evā́stām in a into evá : ā́stām, and the accent of the verb is perfectly defensible, though SPP. alters to āstā́m. Some of the mss. (including our Bp.P.M.E.) leave mahati unaccented: cf. vs. 6 b, and iii. 6. 3.

3. Ten gods were born together from gods of old; whoever may know them plainly, he verily may talk big to-day.

'May teach the unlimited brahman' is the comm's understanding of the last clause.

4. Breath-and-expiration, sight, hearing, indestructibleness and destruction, out-breathing and up-breathing, speech, mind — they verily brought design (ā́kūti).

The first half-verse occurs also as 7. 25 a, b above, and the first three pādas as vs. 26 a, b, c below. Ppp. combines vā "kūtim in d.

5. Unborn were the seasons, likewise Dhātar, Brihaspati, Indra-and-Agni, the two Açvins, at that time: whom did they worship (upa-ās) [as] chief?

The comm. reads at the end āsate.

6. Both penance, namely, and action were within the great sea; penance was born from action; that did they worship as chief.

The comm. again has āsate at the end. SPP. reads āstām in pada-text, this time with two of his mss. Some mss. again (cf. vs. 2) read mahati (so our Bp.E.; P.M. mahaty árṇavé).

7. The earth that was previous to this one (itás), which the sages (addhātí) indeed knew — whoever may know that by name, he may think himself knowing in ancient things.

The translation implies emendation of tā́n in c to tā́ṁ, which SPP. gives in his text, with about half of his mss. Ppp's version is quite different; it reads for a ye 'to bhūmiṣ pūrvā "sīt; and, for c, d, ke tasyan devā "sate kasmin sā 'dhi çrutaḥ ⌊intending tasyām and çritā ?⌋.

8. Whence was Indra, whence Soma, whence Agni born? whence did Tvashṭar come into being? whence was Dhātar born?

Ppp. has for d dhātā sam abhavat kutaḥ.

9. From Indra Indra, from Soma Soma, from Agni Agni was born; Tvashṭar was born from Tvashṭar; from Dhātar Dhātar was born.

Ppp. arranges in d dhātā dhātur.

10. The ten gods that were of old, born from gods — having given the world to [their] sons, in what world sit they?

Ppp. combines tā "san in a, and reads puraḥ for purā in b. ⌊For consistency, the Berlin ed. should have dattvā́.⌋

11. When he brought hair, bone, sinew, flesh, marrow, having made a body with feet, what world did he afterward enter?

The comm. reads sam abharat in b.

12. Whence brought he the hair, whence the sinew, whence the bones? the limbs, the joints, the marrow, the flesh who brought from whence?

Ppp. combines at the end kutā "bharat. The comm. appears again to read sam abharat at end of b. A few mss. (including our Bp.R.) read snā́vaḥ in a.

13. Pourers-together namely are those gods who brought together the bringings-together; having poured together the whole mortal, the gods entered man.

Ppp. reads çaṅsatas for saṁsicas in a, and saṁsṛjya for saṁsicya in c.

14. Thighs, feet, knee-joints, head, hands, also face, ribs, nipples (? barjahyà), sides: what seer put that together?

The comm. has nothing to say for barjahyè except 'the parts so called.' Ppp. reads instead majjahye; and it has çroṇī for çiras in b. It also makes our 14 c, d and 15 c, d exchange places.

15. Head, hands, also face, tongue and neck, vertebræ — all that, having enveloped with skin, the great putting-together put together.

Ppp. reads ⌊bāhu for mukham in a and has⌋ in c tat sarvam. The comm. paraphrases saṁdhā in d with saṁdhānakartrī devatā.

16. The great body which lay there, put together by the putting-together — who brought into it the color with which it shines (ruc) here today?

Ppp. reads adadhat for açayat in a, mayi for mahat in b, and ko 'smin in d. SPP. reports all his pada-mss. as having at the end ā॰ábharat, which he emends to ā́ : abharat; our pada-mss. give the latter.

17. All the gods assisted (?upa-çikṣ); that she who was a woman knew; she who was wife of control (?váça), mistress (īçā́), brought color into it.

Ppp. reads in a upāsikṣan, and viṣasya for vaçasya in c; the comm. (with two or three of SPP's mss.) has instead of the latter viçvasya. There are, failing help from sense, various questionable points in the construction.

18. When Tvashṭar bored through [him?] who [was] the superior father of Tvashṭar, having made the mortal a house, the gods entered into man.

Probably c is adjunct of devā́s; whether b is object of the verb in a is more doubtful. Ppp. gives no help. The comm. makes b define Tvaṣṭar himself, and understands the 'boring' of the openings for the senses, the eyes and ears etc. ⌊Ludwig renders c: "machten die götter den sterblichen zu [ihrem] hause."⌋

19. Sleep, weariness, misery (nírṛti), the deities named evils, old age; baldness, hoariness, entered the body afterward (ánu).

The comm. reads tandrī in a, and khālityam in c. Anu perhaps rather 'one after another.'

20. Theft, ill-doing, wrong, truth, sacrifice, great glory, both strength, dominion, and force, entered the body afterward.

Ppp. has the better reading sahas for bṛhat in b.

21. Both growth (bhū́ti) and diminution, generosities and niggardlinesses, both hungerings and all thirstings, entered the body afterward.

Ppp. combines vā 'bhūtiç in a.

22. Both revilings and non-revilings, both what [says] "come on" (hánta) and "no," faith, the sacrificial fee, and non-faith, entered the body afterward.

Ppp. combines vā 'nindāç in a. The majority of mss. (including our Bp.B.P.M.E. T.R.K.) read dakṣiṇā́ in c; ⌊if I understand W's Collation Book, only Bp.T.K. among his mss. are noted as so reading;⌋ both editions give dákṣiṇā. The comm. explains the word as meaning dhanasamṛddhi. ⌊Cf. Oldenberg, ZDMG. l. 449.⌋

23. Both knowledges and ignorances, and what else is to be taught (upa-diç); the bráhman entered the body; the verses, the chant, also the formula.

Ppp. combines vā 'vidyāç in a, and reads for c çarīraṁ sarve prā 'viçan ⌊= our 25 c⌋. Bráhman perhaps is here the 'charm,' representing the Atharvan hymns.

24. Delights, joys, enjoyments, and they that enjoy enjoyments, laughter, sport, dances, entered the body afterward.

Ppp. reads for a ānandā nandāṣ pramado. The comm. reads nur iṣṭās in c ⌊see SPP's note, p. 163⌋. The first half-verse is identical with 7. 26 a, b above.

25. Both appeals (ālāpá) and pratings (pralāpá), and they who utter (-lap) addresses (abhīlāpa-) — all entered the body, joiners-on (āyúj), joiners-forth (prayúj), joiners.

Ppp. reads prāyujas in d. The comm. explains the last words as = āyojanāni, prayojanāni, and yojanāni. The first half-verse is as it were a change rung on 24 a, b.

26. Breath-and-expiration, sight, hearing, indestructibleness and destruction, out-breathing and up-breathing, speech, mind — they go about (īya-) with the body.

The first three pādas are the same with 4 a, b, c, above.

27. Both blessings (āçís) and precepts (praçís), demands (saṁçís) and explanations (viçís), thoughts, all devisings, entered the body afterward.

The comm. explains the difficult compounds of -çis as mechanically as those of -yuj in vs. 25: āçāsanāni, praçāsanāni, saṁçāsanāni, vividhāni çāsanāni.

28. Both those of the blood and those of the bladder, the hasting and those that are pitiable, the secret, the clear, the thick waters — those they caused to settle in the repugnant one.

That is, apparently, in the body that was loth to receive them. SPP. reads unaccountably at the beginning ā́steyīs, against the great majority of his mss., the comm., and the sense. The reading has not been noted at all among our mss., but sn and st are very imperfectly distinguished in general by the scribes, and the latter may possibly have been intended by some among them. The comm. derives the word from ā + snā, instead of from asan; the form in which he gives it is āsneyyas. The second word he reads vāsneyyas, and derives it from vā 'or' + snā! Then he adds another derivation for both words, from āsana 'sitting,' and vasna 'price' respectively. He reads then āpas in c. Ppp. reads çukriyā in c.

29. Having made bone [their] fuel, then they caused eight waters to settle; having made seed [their] sacrificial butter, the gods entered man.

The first part of the verse is spoiled in Ppp. The comm. has the more regular accus. pl. apas in b (the pada-text aṣṭá : ā́paḥ, as required by the accent; the comm. in general pays no heed to accent). He acutely refers to Tāitt. Brāh. i. 1. 9^4, where bone is identified with fuel, and seed with sacrificial butter.

30. What waters [there are], and what deities, what virā́j, with bráhman; bráhman entered the body; on (ádhi) the body [is] Prajāpati.

31. The sun, the wind, shared [respectively] the eye, the breath of man; then his other self the gods bestowed (pra-yam) on Agni.

'Shared' (ví bhejire, pl.) is ungrammatical as taken with the subject (which is only two-fold) given in the text. The comm. understands that the other 'senses' with their deities are viewed as included with these two. Ppp. reads tathā instead of atha in c.

32. Therefore, indeed, one who knows man ⌊púruṣa⌋ thinks "this is bráhman"; for all deities are seated in him, as cows in a cow-stall.

Our text should read at the end ivā́ "sate with SPP. and nearly all the mss. (our Bp.B. ivā "sate). Ppp. has a less naïve d: çarīre 'dhi samāhitāḥ.

33. By the first dying, it goes apart dividing threefold: yonder goes it with one [part]; yonder goes it with one; here with one it dwells (? ni-sev).

This verse and the one following are (as above noted) wanting in Ppp. The comm. reads ni for vi in b. He regards the two 'yonders' as pointing respectively to heaven and hell, and paraphrases ni ṣevate by nitarāṁ sukhaduḥkhātmakān bhogān sevate. ⌊He makes jīvātmā the subject: and a masculine subject seems required by víṣvañ, unless we read ní just after it.⌋

34. Within waters that are sluggish (? stīmá), old, is the body placed; within that is might (? çáva, çávas ?); thence is it called might.

There is perhaps in c, d a play upon the word çávas, which may mean either 'might' (as neut.) or (as masc.) 'corpse.' The comm. paraphrases it both times with balātmakaḥ sūtrātmā ⌊i.e. the parameçvara⌋. He explains stīmāsu as anārdraṁ sarvaṁ jagad ārdraṁ kurvatīṣu.

⌊Here ends the fourth anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 61 verses. The quoted Anukr. says with reference to this eighth hymn "yan manyur" ity atra caturdaça ca: that is 14 over 20.⌋

9. To conquer enemies: to Arbudi.

[Kāñkāyana.—ṣaḍvinçakam. mantroktārbudidevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 1. 7-p. virāṭ çakvarī 3-av.; 3. paroṣṇih; 4. 3-av. uṣṇigbṛhatīgarbhā parātriṣṭup 6-p. atijagatī; 9, 11, 14, 23, 26. pathyāpañkti; 15, 22, 24, 25. 3-av. 7-p. çakvarī; 16. 3-av. 5-p. virāḍ upariṣṭājjyotis triṣṭubh; 17. 3-p. gāyatrī.]

This and the following hymn are wanting in Pāipp., although bits of vss. 15–17 of this one are to be found in Pāipp. xvii. The opening words of the two are quoted together in Kāuç. 16. 21, in connection with rites for insuring success in war. ⌊The use of the two hymns forms a sequel to the rites described in the introduction to viii. 8, which see; and cf. under viii. 8. 24.⌋

1. What arms (bāhú) [there are], what arrows, and the powers (vīryà) of bows, swords (así), axes (paraçú), weapon, and what thought-and-design in the heart — all that, O Arbudi, do thou make our enemies to see; and do thou show forth specters (udārá).

The comm. refers to AB. vi. 1, where Arbuda is named and called a serpent-sage, and declares Arbudi and Nyarbudi to be his two sons. Udārān he explains as udgatān antarikṣacarān rakṣaḥpiçācādīn mantrasāmarthyodbhāvitān, or also as sūryaraçmiprabhavā ulkādaya āntarikṣyā utpātāḥ, specters or portents. ⌊Pāda d, below, vs. 13 b.⌋

2. Stand up, equip ye yourselves (sam-nah), O friends, god-folk; beheld, concealed of you be [those] who are our friends, O Arbudi.

The occurrence of mitrās m. and mitrāṇi n. in the same verse is puzzling, also the conjunction of saṁdṛṣṭa and gupta, and of vas with the singular arbude. The comm. reads saṁdṛṣṭās and guptās in c. Our Bp. reads yā́ḥ in d. ⌊Pāda a = 26 b and 10. 1 a.⌋ ⌊W. interlines "protected?" over "concealed."⌋

3. Stand ye (two) up, take ye hold; with tying up, with tying together, gird ye the armies of our enemies, O Arbudi.

The dual verbs doubtless imply, as the comm. also points out, the inclusion of Nyarbudi in the address to Arbudi ⌊cf. vs. 11⌋. The comm. reads senām in c.

4. The God that is Arbudi by name, and the lord (īçāna) Nyarbudi, by whom the atmosphere is involved (ā-vṛ), and this great earth — by those (two) who are allied with Indra, I go after what is conquered with an army.

Probably 'I follow up with my army what is already conquered by them.' The two last pādas are by the comm. reckoned as the first line of the next verse.

5. Stand thou up, O god-folk, Arbudi, with the army; breaking (bhañj) the army of our enemies, envelop it with [thy] coils (bhogá).

The comm. explains bhogébhis as ātmīyāiḥ sarpaçarīrāiḥ.

6. Presenting to view, O Nyarbudi, the seven kinds of specters, with them all do thou stand up, when the butter is offered, with the army.

The pada-text reads in a jātā́n : ni◦arbude; but the reading is plainly false, and should be either jātā́ : ni◦arbude, or jātā́ni : arbude; either of these, considering that to the scribes nya and nnya are entirely equivalent and exchangeable (see my Skt. Gr. §§ 229, 232), would correctly represent the saṁhitā-reading. ⌊Cf. the reading of the comm. at 10. 21.⌋

7. Smiting herself, tear-faced, and crop-eared(?), let her yell, with disheveled hair, when the man is slain, bitten (?rad), O Arbudi, of thee.

'Her' — namely, the wife or sister or the like; more distinctly pointed to in the next verse. Radita ought to mean rather 'scraped' or 'scratched'; there seems to be no other example of it in the sense 'bitten': perhaps as a mere scratch from the fang of a serpent is enough to kill. The comm. takes radita as a noun (like ruta, smita, citta, etc.), = dantāir vilekhane khādane sati. Of kṛdhukarṇī the comm. says: kṛdhv iti hrasvanāma : karṇābharaṇaparityāgena hrasvakarṇī. The verse is translated (also vs. 14, and 10. 7) by Bloomfield, in AJP. xi. 340.

8. Drawing in her karū́kara, seeking with her mind her son, husband, brother, also her people (svá) — in case of thy bite, O Arbudi.

The ending is the same with that of vs. 7, understood as the comm. takes it; we might also supply '[he being] bitten' etc. The Pet. Lex. renders karūkara 'vertebræ of the neck and spine': rather (in ÇB. xii. 2. 4^{10}, ^{14}), perhaps, 'a point or spinous process of a vertebra.' The comm. explains karu as an imitative word, and karūkara as meaning anything that makes the sound karu, and so designating hastapādādyavayavagataṁ saṁdhimad asthijātam; and he goes on loke hi bhayavaçād ubhayor hastayoḥ parasparāñgulinipīḍanena tādṛçaṁ çabdam utpādayanti. This is far from relieving satisfactorily the obscurity. Most of our mss. accent svā̀n in c.

9. Let the buzzards, jāṣkamadás, vultures, falcons, winged ones, let the crows, the birds (çakúni), satisfy themselves — exhibiting among the enemies — in case of thy bite, O Arbudi.

We have here two refrain-phrases, neither of which stands in any grammatical connection with its surroundings (the pple. 'exhibiting' being nom. sing. masc.). The comm. reads in a aliklabāḥ and yāḥ klamadāḥ; and some of the mss. have jāḥkam- (so our B.O.s.m.).

10. Then let all wild beasts, let the fly, let the worm satisfy itself upon the carrion of men, bitten, O Arbudi, of thee.

Here the refrain stands again in grammatical connection.

11. Take ye (two) hold, tear out (sam-bṛh) [their] breath-and-expiration, O Nyarbudi; let groaning (?nivāçá) noises assemble — exhibiting among the enemies — in case of thy bite, O Arbudi.

Again (as in vs. 3) the other serpent-deity is included in a in the invocation ⌊this time of Nyarbudi⌋. The comm. reads vṛhatam in a. He explains nivāçās as nīcīnaṁ vāçyamānā ābhāṣyamāṇāḥ.

12. Make thou [them] tremble; let them quake together; unite our enemies with fear; with broad-gripping arm-hooks pierce thou our enemies, O Nyarbudi.

The comm. reads in c ūrugrāhāis (which is not bad) and bāhuvañkāis, explaining the latter by bāhunā vakrabandhanāiḥ. Our P.M.W. read at the end amītrāṇy arbude: compare 6 a, above.

13. Let their arms be confounded, and what thought-and-design is in their heart; let not anything of them be left — in case of thy bite, O Arbudi.

The second pāda is the same with vs. 1 d, above.

14. Smiting themselves let them (f.) run together, smiting on the breast, the thighs (?paṭāurá), not anointing, with disheveled hair, wailing when the man is slain, bitten, O Arbudi, of thee.

Translated by Bloomfield, ib. (see vs. 7). I follow both translators in rendering paṭāurá by 'thigh,' although it is not too acceptable, considering the familiarity of ūru as name for 'thigh.' SPP. reads instead paṭūrāú, with a very small minority of his mss. (of ours, only B.s.m. has it), and with the comm. The latter defines it simply as tat- (i.e. uraḥ) pradeçāu. He makes aghārin from agha and root ṛ: aghena bhartṛviyogajanitena duḥkhenā "rtāḥ!

15. Dog-accompanied Apsarases, she-jackals (?rūpakā) also, O Arbudi, the riçá, licking much in the inner vessel, seeking what is ill-deposited — all these (f.), O Arbudi, do thou make our enemies to see, and do thou show forth specters; —

The conclusion is nearly the same with vs. 1 e, f, g, above, and is also repeated below ⌊vss. 22, 24⌋. The accent of çvànvatīs seems certainly wrong, but it is read by all the mss., and avouched by the commentary to Prāt. iii. 73. The translation of rūpakā is that of the minor Pet. Lex., apparently founded solely on an Avestan analogue; the comm. defines it as māyāvaçāt kevalaṁ rūpamātreṇo 'palabhyamānāḥ senārūpakāḥ. He reads antaḥ and pātre as two independent words, according to his custom of caring nothing for accent. For riçām ("tearing one, as designating some small animal," minor Pet. Lex.) he reads vaçām 'cow,' so that we lose any light he might have cast on the obscure description. Bp. reads riṣā́m. Prāt. iii. 75 and iv. 77 prescribe the pada-reading durnihita-.

16. Her that strides upon the khaḍū́ra, mutilated, wearing what is mutilated(?); the specters that are concealed, and what Gandharvas-and-Apsarases [there are], serpents, other-folk, demons;—

The comm. reads at the beginning khadūre, and explains it as ākāçe dūradeçe; our Bp.Kp. have ṣaḍū́re. Again neglecting the accent, he takes adhi and cañkramām as two independent words. He also reads -vāçinīm in b; -vāsin might be 'dwelling' (so understood by the Pet. Lexx. and Ludwig). Finally, he reckons the last (irregular) pāda to the following verse. ⌊Pāda e = 10. 1 c.⌋

17. The four-tusked ones, the black-toothed, the pot-testicled, the blood-faced; they that are self-frighting and frighting.

The first four epithets are accus. pl. masc.; probably, like the accus. fem. at beginning of vs. 16, objects of prá darçaya 'show forth' in vs. 15. The comm. explains svabhyasās and udbhy- by svāyattabhītayo rākṣasāḥ and udgatabhītayaḥ.

18. Do thou, O Arbudi, make to tremble yonder lines (sic) of our enemies; let both the conquering one and the conqueror, allied with Indra, conquer our enemies.

SPP. reads in his saṁhitā-text jáyāñç ca in c, with the large majority of his mss., and with part of ours (E.O.s.m.K.). The prolongation being so anomalous, and unsupported by the Prāt., I think jáyañç ca decidedly the more acceptable reading. The comm. gives it. He also has çucas for sicas in b. Read amitrāṅ at end of c, with anusvāra-sign, not anunāsika. ⌊Pāda b = 10. 20 b.⌋

19. Let our enemy lie squelched, crushed, slain, O Nyarbudi; let tongues of fire, tufts of smoke, go conquering with the army.

The comm. reads in a pravlīnas, in accordance with the more usual form.

20. Of our enemies, pushed forth by it, O Arbudi, let Indra, lord of might (çácīpáti), slay each best man (vára); let no one soever of them be freed.

'By it'—i.e. by the army; the comm. reads instead tvayā 'by thee.' With a, b compare vi. 67. 2 c, d. ⌊Our d occurs several times: see note to iii. 19. 8.⌋

21. Let their hearts burst open (ut-kas), their breath pass up aloft; let dryness of mouth follow after our enemies, ⌊and⌋ not those who are friendly.

The comm. renders ut kasantu by çarīrād udgacchantu, and ud īṣatu equivalently.

22. Both they who are wise (dhīra) and they who are unwise, those going away and they who are deaf, they of darkness and they who are hornless (tūpará), likewise those that smell of (?) the goat — all those (m.), O Arbudi, do thou make our enemies to see, and do thou show forth specters.

The meaning of -abhivāsin is wholly uncertain ⌊cf. Pāli vāsita⌋; the Pet. Lex. conjectures instead -abhivāçin, and the comm. reads bastāvivāçin, as from basta + avi + vāçin. He also, in defiance of pada-text and accent, renders tamasā́s as támasā. ⌊Cf. nabhasá-s (not nábhas-as), ix. 4. 22.⌋

23. Let both Arbudi and Trishandhi pierce through our enemies, in order that, O Indra, Vṛitra-slayer, lord of might, we may slay of them, of our enemies, by thousands.

Triṣandhi, lit. 'of three joints,' is conspicuous especially in the next hymn. The comm. explains it here as kaçcit senāmohako devaḥ saṁdhitrayopetavajrāyudhābhimānī vā.

24. The forest-trees, them of the forest-trees, herbs and plants, Gandharvas-and-Apsarases, serpents, gods, pure-folk (puṇyajaná), Fathers — all those, O Arbudi, do thou make our enemies to see, and do thou show forth specters.

The comm. identifies the 'pure-folk' with the yakṣas. ⌊With c, d, cf. viii. 8. 15, above.⌋ ⌊Cf. Kāuç. 73. 5.⌋

25. Mastery over you have the Maruts [gained], the heavenly Āditya, Brahmaṇaspati; mastery over you have both Indra and Agni, Dhātar, Mitra, Prajāpati; mastery over you have the seers gained (kṛ) — exhibiting among the enemies — in case of thy bite, O Arbudi.

One would like to emend devás to devā́s in a.

26. Masters (īçāna) of them all, stand ye up, equip yourselves, ye friends, god-folks; having wholly conquered in this conflict, scatter ye to your several worlds.

The mss. set the avasāna in this verse after yūyám, and SPP. very properly does the same. ⌊Our b, c = 2 a, b: b = 10. 1 a.⌋

10. To conquer enemies: to Trishandhi.

[Bhṛgvañgiras. — saptaviñçati. mantroktatriṣandhidevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 1. virāṭ pathyābṛhatī; 2. 3-av. 6-p. triṣṭubgarbhā 'tijagatī; 3. virāḍ āstārapañkti; 4. virāj; 8. virāṭ triṣṭubh; 9. purovirāṭ purastājjyotis triṣṭubh; 12. 5-p. pathyāpañkti; 13. 6-p. jagatī; 16. 3-av. 6-p. kakummaty anuṣṭuptriṣṭubgarbhā çakvarī; 17. pathyāpañkti; 21. 3-p. gāyatrī; 22. virāṭ purastādbṛhatī; 25. kakubh; 26. prastārapañkti.]

Not found in Pāipp. ⌊For its use by Kāuç. in connection with hymn 9, see introduction to hymn 9.⌋

Translated: Ludwig, p. 531; Henry, 129, 169; Griffith, ii. 88; Bloomfield, 126, 637.

1. Stand ye up, equip yourselves, ye specters, together with ensigns; ye serpents, other-folks, demons, run after our enemies.

⌊Pāda a = 9. 2 a, 26 b; c = 9. 16 e.⌋

2. Your mastery I know, [your] kingdom, O Trishandhi, together with red ensigns; what in the atmosphere, what in the sky, and what men (mānavá) [are] on the earth, let those ill-named ones sit (?upa-ās) in the mind (cétas) of Trishandhi.

The translation implies veda rā́jyam in a, while all the pada-mss. treat the word as a compound (veda°rā́jyam). The comm. takes veda as an independent word, but renders it as a 3d sing., with triṣandhis supplied as subject; and he understands the enemies as addressed by vas in a. He supplies ketavas to the three ye's in c, d, regarding mānavās as adj., 'human.' And he cuts off the last two pādas, adding them instead to vs. 3, and reading at the beginning trisandhe tve (" = tava "); explaining upāsatām by sambhajantām, and making the following nouns its subject. For durṇāmānas he has -nam (as also our B.O.).

3. Iron-(áyas-)mouthed, needle-mouthed, likewise thorn-tree-(vikan̄kaṭī-)mouthed, let the flesh-eaters, of wind-swiftness, fasten on our enemies with the three-jointed (tríṣandhi) thunderbolt.

The comm. regards the epithets as signifying flesh-eating birds, and supplies ⌊alternatively⌋ 'sent forth' (preritās) to the concluding instrumentals.

4. O Jātavedas, Āditya, put thou between much human flesh; let this army of Trishandhi be well-placed in my control.

Most of SPP's pada-mss. give sénāḥ in c; no such reading has been noted among our mss. One would like to improve meter and sense together by emending tríṣandhes to -dhinā, understanding the 'army' to be the enemy's. Antár dhehi at the beginning may also mean 'hide'; and the comm. juggles the line into signifying, 'O Jātavedas, make the corpses of our enemies hide the sun'!

5. Stand thou up, O god-folk, O Arbudi, with the army; this tribute is offered (ā-hu) to you ⌊pl.⌋; the offering [is] dear to Trishandhi.

The comm. reads āhutis (for -tas) in c, and āhutipriyā as compound in d. ⌊In some copies the i of priyā is broken.⌋

6. Let the white-footed one tie together, this shaft (çaravyā̀), four-footed; O witchcraft, be thou for our enemies, together with the army of Trishandhi.

The comm. reads for dyatu, in a, patatu : cf. vs. 7 a. By çitipadī he understands a white-footed cow, called a çaravyā̀ as being a çarūṇām bāṇānāṁ samūhaḥ.

7. Let the smoke-eyed (f.) one fall together, and the crop-eared one (f.) yell; it being conquered by the army of Trishandhi, let the ensigns be red.

The comm. supplies parakīye bale to jité; the pada-reading (simply jité) forbids us to regard the word as fem. dual. He takes the epithets in the first half-verse first as applying to the enemy's army, and then to the kṛtyā which is invoked against it. The verse is translated by Bloomfield, as noted above (see 9. 7), at AJP. xi. 340.

8. Let the winged ones descend, the birds, they that go about in the atmosphere, in the sky; let the wild beasts, the flies, take hold together; let the raw-flesh-eating vultures scratch at the human carrion.

The comm. explains radantām by svatuṇḍāiḥ pādāiç ca vilikhantu. ⌊Read diví ca yé?⌋

9. The agreement (saṁdhā́) which thou hast agreed on with Indra and with the bráhman, O Brihaspati, by that Indra-agreement do I call hither all the gods: conquer ye on this side, not on that!

The comm. (with two or three of SPP's authorities) reads -adhattās in a; and he treats indra-saṁdhayā as two independent words in c. Saṁdhā́m in a is clearly proved an intrusion by the meter.

10. Brihaspati of the Añgiras race, the seers sharpened by the bráhman, set up (ā-çri) in the sky the Asura-destroying weapon, Trishandhi.

One would like to emend āñgirasás to áñgirasas (as Ludwig translates). The comm. renders ā́ 'çrayan by asevanta, as if it were ā́ 'çrayanta.

11. By whom yonder sun, and Indra, both stand protected — Trishandhi the gods shared, in order to both force and strength.

12. All worlds did the gods completely conquer by means of that offering (ā́huti) — the thunderbolt which Brihaspati of the Añgiras race poured, an Asura-destroying weapon.

'Poured,' i.e. 'cast': a term used also elsewhere of the thunderbolt (BR. vii. 980).

13. The thunderbolt which Brihaspati of the Añgiras race poured, an Asura-destroying weapon — therewith do I blot out (ni-lip) yon army, O Brihaspati; I slay the enemies with force.

The comm. renders ni limpāmi by nitarāṁ chinadmi. He also has the strange reading amūs for amūm before sénām.

14. All the gods come over hither, who partake of [the offering] made with váṣat; enjoy ye this offering; conquer ye on this side, not on that!

15. Let all the gods come over hither; the offering [is] dear to Trishandhi; defend ye the great agreement by which in the beginning the Asuras were conquered.

The comm. appears to read in a -yanti, as in vs. 14 a, but he interprets it as an imperative this time.

16. Let Vāyu bend up the arrow-points of the enemies; let Indra break back their arms; let them not be able to set the arrow; let Āditya make their missile weapon (astrá) disappear; let the moon put (yu) them on the track of what is not gone.

The last clause is very doubtful and difficult; the comm. gives no aid, explaining with aprāptasyā "jigamiṣataḥ çatroḥ . . . panthānam asmatprāptyupāyabhūtam mārgaṁ yutāṁ tataḥ pṛthakkurutām (taking yutām from yu 'separate,' and adding) tādṛçam mārgaṁ çatrur na paçyatv ity arthaḥ. He divides the verse into two, making the second begin with ādityá eṣām.

17. If they have gone forward to the gods' strongholds, have made the bráhman their defenses; if (? yát) they have encouraged (? upa-vàc) themselves, making a body-protection, a complete protection — all that do thou make sapless.

The verse occurred above as v. 8. 6, and the comm. declines to repeat his explanation there given — which, however, is not in our hands.

18. Causing to follow the puróhita with the flesh-eating [fire] and with death, O Trishandhi, go forth with the army; conquer the enemies; go forward.

The last pāda is identical with iii. 19. 8 c.

19. O Trishandhi, do thou envelop our enemies with darkness; of them yonder, thrust forth by the speckled butter, let none soever be freed.

The last half-verse is nearly identical with viii. 8. 19 c, d. ⌊For the stock-phrase d, see iii. 19. 8, note.⌋

20. Let the white-footed one (f.) fall upon (? sam-pat) yonder lines of our enemies; let yonder armies of our enemies be confounded today, O Nyarbudi.

The second pāda is identical with 9. 18 b; to be put in any connection with it, the words of the first pāda require to be rendered otherwise than in 6 a, 7 a, above. The comm. again reads çucas for sicas, as in the other passage ⌊9. 18: comm. p. 181^{17}⌋.

21. Confounded [be] our enemies, O Nyarbudi; slay thou of them each best man (vára); slay [them] with this army.

The comm. strangely reads amitrān beside mūḍhās. ⌊The rationale of his variant is perhaps as in 9. 6 above (nnya = nya). The pada-text has amítrāḥ. But the comm. also takes mūḍhāḥ as = mūḍhān.⌋

22. Whoever is mailed, and who without mail, and what enemy is in march (? ájman); by bowstring-fetters, by mail-fetters, smitten by the march let him lie.

The mss. are in good part awkward about the combination jm (in ajmani, ajmanā), writing what looks like a tm or pm, but there is no real variant. The comm. explains ájman as ajati gacchaty anene 'ty ajma rathādi yānam. He gives abhihitas, a preferable reading, in d.

23. Who have defenses, who have no defenses, and the enemies who have defenses — all those, O Arbudi, being slain, let dogs eat on the ground.

The accent yé 'varmāṇaḥ, though read by all the mss. ⌊save R.⌋, is wholly inadmissible, and should be emended to yè 'v-.

24. Who have chariots, who have no chariots, those without seats and they who have seats (sādá) — all those, being slain, let vultures, falcons, birds (patatrín) eat.

We may fairly question whether 'seat' means here 'seat on horseback.' The comm. explains asādās by açvādiyānarahitāḥ padātayaḥ, and sādinas by açvārūḍhāḥ 'mounted on horses.'

25. Let the army of our enemies lie with thousand corpses (-kúṇapa) in the conflict of weapons, pierced through, cut to pieces (?).

The obscure kakajā́kṛtā at the end is guessed by the comm. to mean kutsitajananā vilolajananā vā kṛtā; he attempts no etymology, but evidently sees in it the root jā. In a he has the strange reading senām for çetām.

26. Let the eagles (suparṇá) eat him, pierced to the vitals, crying loudly, lying crushed, the evil-minded one — what enemy of ours wishes to fight against this opposing offering.

The translation implies the emendation (which Ludwig's version also makes) of suparṇāís to suparṇā́s in a. The comm. takes it as qualifying çarāis understood and adjunct of marmāvídham: 'pierced etc. by well-feathered arrows.' In the irregular meter of the first line, the division is perhaps best made before adantu; a small minority of SPP's mss. so regard it, and accent adántu accordingly, and he follows them in his text; our Bp. puts its pāda-division after adantu, and, with one other ms., leaves the word without accent. ⌊See Henry's elaborate conjectures, p. 172: marmāvídho róruvataḥ suparṇā́ gaṇāír adantu mṛditám̐ çáyānam. The other versions imply mármaviddham, and Bloomfield expressly conjectures marmaviddhám, overlooking the accent; but the comm. to Prāt. iv. 68 quotes marmāvídham as an instance of non-separation in pada-text.⌋

27. [The offering] which the gods follow (anu-sthā), of which there is no failure — with that let Indra, Vṛitra-slayer, slay, with the three-jointed thunderbolt.

⌊Here ends the fifth anuvāka, with 2 hymns and 53 verses. The quoted Anukr. says, referring to this last hymn, antyo vin̄çatiḥ sapta cā 'parāḥ.⌋

⌊The sum of the verses for hymns 1–2 and 4–10 is (68 + 189 =) 257. Reckoning hymn 3 (with the Berlin ed.) as of 56 vss., we get for the book (257 + 56 =) 313: and this is the summation given by codex I. On the other hand, reckoning hymn 3 as of (31 + 72 + 7 =) 110 vss. (see pp. 632, 628), we get for the book (257 + 110 =) 367. But the summation given by four of W's mss. (including P.W.B.) is 365. How to account for the discrepancy I do not see. One ms. sums up the last anuvāka as 51 (i.e. 26 + 25? — instead of 26 + 27 = 53) verses, and 10. 17 is indeed a galita-verse; but the Old Anukr. reckons hymn 10 as 27, not 25.⌋

⌊Three or four mss. sum up the sūktas "of both kinds" as 12.⌋

⌊Here ends the twenty-fifth prapāṭhaka.⌋

Book XII.

⌊This twelfth book is the fifth and last of the second grand division of the Atharvan collection. For a general statement as to the make-up of the books of this division, page 471 may again be consulted. The Old Anukramaṇī describes the length of the artha-sūktas, hymns 1, 2, 3, and 4, by giving the overplus of each hymn over 60 verses. The assumed normal lengths in the case of books ix., x., xi., and xii. seem to be respectively 20, 30, 20, and 60 verses. The whole book has been translated by Victor Henry, Les livres X, XI et XII de l'Atharva-véda traduits et commentés, Paris, 1896. The bhāṣya is again lacking. The fifth or last hymn is made up of 7 paryāyas (see pages 471–2), which, if they be counted separately, make the hymns number 11 instead of 5: see page 611, top.⌋

⌊The anuvāka-division of the book (as noted above, page 472) is into five anuvākas of one hymn each. The "decad"-division likewise is as described on page 472. A tabular conspectus for this book also may be added:

Anuvākas	1	2	3	4	5
Hymns	1	2	3	4	5
Verses	63	55	60	53	73¶
Decad-div.	5 tens + 13	5 tens + 5	6 tens	4 tens + 13	7 P

Here, as before, ¶ means "paragraph of a paryāya" (such as is numbered as a "verse" in the Berlin edition) and P means "paryāya." The last line shows the "decad"-division. Of these "decads," anuvākas 1, 2, 3, and 4 contain respectively 6, 6, 6, and 5 (in all, 23 "decads"); while anuvāka 5 has 7 paryāyas. The sum is 23 "decad"-sūktas and 7 paryāya-sūktas or 30 sūktas. Cf. the summation at the end of hymn 5.⌋

Found also in Pāipp. xvii. (excepting vss. 62, 63). Many of the verses are used by the Kāuç., as also the whole hymn (which is also by itself an anuvāka), under the name bhāuma, '[hymn] to earth': so at 38. 12, 16, in a ceremony for giving firmness to buildings; at 98. 3 (with vi. 87, 88), for safety from earthquake; and in 8. 23 it is (with iii. 12, vi. 73, 93) reckoned a vāstoṣpatya hymn. The first 7 verses (Kāuç. 24. 27) and the first 9 (? 24. 31, 35) are used in the āgrahāyaṇī ceremony. ⌊Further, cf. Keç. to 70. 8, 9.⌋ In Vāit., vss. 1, 13, 27, 30, and others are quoted. ⌊The whole hymn is prescribed in Nakṣ. Kalpa, 18, in a mahāçānti called pārthivī: see SPP. iii. 2025.⌋

1. Great (bṛhánt) truth, formidable right, consecration, penance, bráhman, sacrifice sustain the earth; let her for us, mistress of what is and what is to be — let the earth make for us wide room (loká); —

Found also in MS. (iv. 14. 11), which reads yajñā́s in b, and bhúvanasya (for bhávyasya) in c. The Anukr. does not heed that pāda a is jagatī. The verse (unless more of the hymn is meant to be included with it) is, according to Vāit. 12. 6, to be repeated by one who relieves on the ground the needs of nature. It is quoted by Kāuç. 24. 24 in the āgrahāyaṇī ceremony; also in the comm. to 24. 35 (cf. above); and it, with vs. 38, is reckoned (see note to Kāuç. 19. 1) among the puṣṭika mantras.

2. Unoppressedness in the midst of men (mānavá). Whose are the ascents (udvát), the advances (pravát), the much plain (samá); who bears the herbs of various virtue (nā́nāvīrya) — let the earth be spread out for us, be prosperous for us.

The mss. vary in a between badhyatás and madhyatás (Bp.P.M.I. have ba-), but only the latter can be right, and the translation adopts it; the former (which Ppp. also has, and mānaveṣu) seems to have come in under the influence of -bādham. ⌊Correct the edition.⌋ As the text stands, pāda a can only be an adjunct to vs. 1, and so Ppp. reckons it, and begins our b with asyās. But MS. (iv. 14. 11) reads asambādhā́ yā́ madhyató mānavébhyo; it also has mahát for bahú at end of b, and nā́nārūpās and bibhárti in c. This time the Anukr. notices that b has 12 syllables. Kāuç. 137. 16 quotes the verse ⌊in the preparation of the vedi⌋.

3. On whom [are] the ocean and the river (síndhu), the waters; on whom food, plowings, came into being; on whom quickens this that breathes, that stirs — let that earth (bhū́mi) set us in first drinking.

That is, doubtless, give us precedence over others (but MS. reads pūrvapéyam: see note to vs. 5). Ppp. reads for b yasyāṁ devā 'mṛtam anvavindan; and for second half-verse it has our 4 c, d, giving our 3 c, d as second half of vs. 5, with the easier reading jīvati, ⌊followed by⌋ viçvam ejāt in c. We should expect kṛṣáyas in b.

4. Whose, the earth's, [are] the four quarters; on whom food, plowings, came into being; who bears manifoldly what breathes, what stirs — let that earth (bhū́mi) set us among kine, also in inexhaustibleness (? ánya).

Ppp. reads in a yasyām and pṛthivyām, and in b gṛṣṭayas ⌊cf. note to ii. 13. 3⌋. As second half-verse it has our 5 c, d, giving our 4 c, d as 3 c, d, reading (after bahudhā) prāṇine jāñgano bhūmir goṣv açveṣu pinve kṛṇotu, thus relieving us of the difficult ánye. Kāuç. (137. 17) uses the verse next after vs. 2, in connection with making the sacrificial hearth four-cornered. The description given by the Anukr. of this and the two following verses is so wholly wrong that we cannot help suspecting a corrupt text. This verse is, if we make no resolutions in d, a regular triṣṭubh.

5. On whom the people of eld (pūrvajaná) formerly spread themselves (?vi-kṛ); on whom the gods overcame the Asuras; the station (? viṣṭhā́) of kine, of horses, of birds (váyas) — let the earth assign us fortune (bhága), splendor.

Ppp. reads in a nicakrire, and in b atyavartayan; also in c (found as ⌊its⌋ 4 c) vayasayya ⌊?⌋. MS. has a verse made up of our 5 a, b (without variant), 4 c (accenting bibhárti), and 3 d (with pūrvapéyam). The verse is mixed triṣṭubh and jagatī. ⌊In Ppp. this verse precedes our 4. — The sequence of the half-verses of the Vulgate as they stand in Ppp. seems therefore to be as follows: 3 a, b, 4 c, d, 5 a, b, 3 c, d, 4 a, b, 5 c, d.⌋

6. All-bearing, good-holding, firm-standing, gold-backed (-vákṣas), reposer of moving things (jágat), bearing the universal (vāiçvānará) fire, let the earth (bhū́mi), whose bull is Indra, set us in property.

The verse is found also in MS. (iv. 14. 11), which reads, in a–b, purukṣúd dhíraṇyavarṇā jágataḥ pratiṣṭhā́; and in d drávinam (the editor also admits in his text the bad reading índra ṛṣabhā́). It is quoted in Kāuç. 137. 28. ⌊I do not see why W. has preferred 'gold-backed' to 'gold-breasted' here and in vs. 26.⌋ ⌊By 'reposer' he means 'bringer-to-rest.'⌋

7. She the earth (bhū́mi pṛthivī́), whom the gods, sleepless, defend all the time without failure — let her yield (duh) to us honey, what is dear; then let her sprinkle us with splendor.

The verse is found also in MS. (iv. 14. 11), which reads in c ghṛtám instead of priyám.

8. She who in the beginning was sea (salilá) upon the ocean (arṇavá); whom the skilful (manīṣín) moved after with their devices (māyā́); the earth whose immortal heart covered with truth is in the highest firmament (vyòman) — let that earth (bhū́mi) assign to us brilliancy, strength, in highest royalty.

The verse is properly 11 + 12 : 11 + 11 : 8 + 8 = 61 syllables, and not very well described by the Anukr. The last two clauses perhaps have independent construction: '[assign] to us brilliancy [and] strength, [and] set [us] in highest royalty.'

9. On whom the circulating waters flow the same, night and day, without failure — let that earth (bhū́mi), of many streams (-dhārā) yield (duh) us milk; then let her sprinkle [us] with splendor.

The Anukr. does not heed that c is a jagatī pāda. ⌊In Ppp., this verse precedes our 7.⌋

10. Whom the Açvins measured; on whom Vishṇu strode out; whom Indra, lord of might (çácī-), made free from enemies for himself — let that earth (bhū́mi) to us, a mother to a son, release (vi-sṛj) milk ⌊to me⌋.

Some of the mss. read in d -trā́ṅ chácī-, and Bp. has accordingly -trā́n. Ppp. also has cakrā "tmane 'namitrāṅ cchacī-; and, at the end, naṣ payaḥ. ⌊Ppp's repetition of nas is more tolerable than the harsh change from pl. to sing. which W. seems to have overlooked.⌋

11. Let thy hills (girí) [and] snowy mountains (párvata), let thy forest-land (áraṇya), O earth, be pleasant (syoná); upon the brown, black, red, all-formed, fixed (dhruvá) earth (bhū́mi), the earth guarded by Indra — I, unharassed, unsmitten, unwounded, have stood upon the earth.

Ppp. reads in b āraṇyaṁ corrected to ar-, and naḥ after astu; also in c lohinīṁ, and in f adhi ṣṭhāṁ, which is better. ⌊Roth's Collation has in fact addhi.⌋ The verse (11 + 11 : 11 + 11 : 8 + 8 = 60) should be called atiçakvarī rather than virāḍ aṣṭi. Verses 11 and 12 are reckoned to the svastyayana gaṇa (see note to Kāuç. 25. 36).

12. What is thy middle, O earth, and what thy navel, what refreshments (ū́rj) arose (sam-bhū) out of thy body — in them do thou set us; be purifying (pū) toward us; earth (bhū́mi) is mother, I am earth's son; Parjanya is father — let him save (fill? pṛ) us.

Ppp. reads at end of a yaç ca nādyā.

13. On what earth (bhū́mi) they enclose the sacrificial hearth; on what [earth] men of all works extend the sacrifice; on what earth are set up (mi) the sacrificial posts, erect, bright, before the oblation — let that earth (bhū́mi), increasing, make us increase.

Ppp. reads in b viçvakarmaṇaḥ, and in d reads and combines çukrā "hutyā pur-. All the mss. accent at the end vardhamānā́. In Vāit. 15. 8, the verse is used to accompany the enclosing of the sacrificial hearth. In virtue of one jagatī pāda (b), the verse is a full çakvarī (56 syll.).

14. Whoso shall hate us, O earth; whoso shall fight [us]; whoso shall vex [us] with mind, who with deadly weapon — him, O prior-acting earth (bhū́mi), do thou put in our power.

'Prior-acting,' i.e., apparently, 'getting the start of him'; we should expect a nom. rather than a vocative case. Ppp. reads instead pūrvakṛtvane; also, in b, 'bhimanyā tāindanamā dhanena. Read in our text pṛtanyā́d yò (an accent-sign omitted); one of our mss. ⌊and five of SPP's authorities, and his text!⌋, however, read yó. According to the usual nomenclature of the Anukr., the verse is a virāḍ gāyatrī (11 + 11 : 12 = 34, hence bhurij). ⌊Dr. Ryder suggests that the mahābṛhatī here intended is one of 3 jāgata pādas (see Ind. Stud. viii. 243-4). Both this vs. and 17 may be scanned as 12 + 12 : 12 — cf. under vs. 17.⌋

15. Born from thee, mortals go about upon thee; thou bearest bipeds, thou quadrupeds; thine, O earth, are these five [races] of men, for whom, mortals, the rising sun extends with his rays immortal light.

Ppp. reads in b ca instead of the second tvam.

16. Let those creatures, without exception (samagrá), together yield fruit (duh) to us; the honey of speech, O earth, do thou assign unto me.

Té for tā́s at the beginning, allowing us to regard prajā́s as accus., would be a welcome emendation.

17. The all-producing (-sū́) mother of herbs, the fixed earth (bhū́mi), the earth maintained by ordinance, the auspicious, the pleasant, may we go about over always.

This verse (10 ⌊properly 11⌋ + 12 : 12 = 34 syll.) is overlooked by the Anukr.; it nearly accords in structure with vs. 14, above. ⌊Dr. Ryder observes that the dual (mahābṛhatyāu) of the Anukr.-text suggests the possible falling out of the pratīka of this verse. See under vs. 14.⌋ ⌊There is a play of words in dhármaṇā dhṛtā́m which cannot easily be reproduced in translation.⌋.

18. Thou hast become great, a great station (sadhástha); great is thy trembling, stirring, quaking; great Indra defends thee unremittingly. Do thou, O earth (bhū́mi), make us to shine forth as in the aspect (saṁdṛ́ç) of gold; let no one soever hate us.

Ppp. reads vīryeṇa for apramādam in c, and from e ⌊saṁdṛçi⌋ passes directly on to our 19 c (agnir antaṣ pur- etc.): probably an accidental omission. The verse (12 + 11 : 11 : 8 + 8 + 8 = 58) lacks two syllables of a full atiçakvarī.

19. Agni is in the earth (bhū́mi), in the herbs; the waters bear Agni; Agni [is] in the stones (áçman); Agni is within men; in kine, in horses are Agnis.

This and the two following verses are quite out of connection here, and seem to be an intrusion. They are quoted together in Kāuç. 2. 41 as accompanying the feeding of the fire with fuel; in 120. 5, in a ceremony against the cleaving open of the ground; and in 137. 30 (each singly) to accompany the strewing of the sacrificial hearth in the ājyatantra. The first part of the verse (as noted above) is wanting in Ppp.

20. Agni sends heat from the sky; the wide atmosphere is god Agni's; mortals kindle Agni [as] oblation-bearer, ghee-lover.

Ppp. combines in a divā ”tapaty.

21. Let the earth, fire-clad, black-kneed, make me sharpened, brilliant (tvíṣīmant).

This verse is quoted by pratīka in GB. i. 2. 9. As to the ritual uses of it and of vs. 20, see the note to vs. 19. Ppp. reads tviṣīvantaṁ in b.

22. On the earth (bhū́mi) they give to the gods the sacrifice, the oblation, duly prepared; on the earth (bhū́mi) mortal men (manuṣyà) live by svadhā́, by food; let that earth (bhū́mi) assign us breath, life-time; let earth make me one who attains old age.

The verse (8 + 8 : 8 + 8 : 11 + 11 = 54) should be called by the Anukr. svarāj instead of virāj. Ppp. reads in a juhvati instead of dadati.

23. What odor of thine, O earth, came into being, which the herbs, which the waters bear, which the Gandharvas and Apsarases shared — with that do thou make me odorous; let no one soever hate us.

Ppp. adds, after bhejire, yas te gāṁ açvaṁ arhati; and it reads for our d tenā 'smān surabhīṣ kṛṇu, and, in our e, dvakṣata. The verse (11 + 11 : 12 : 8 + 8 = 50) is as well described by the Anukr. as the latter's system admits. Verses 23–25 ⌊so the schol.⌋ are called in Kāuç. 13. 12 and 54. 5 gandhapravādās (likewise in the comm. to 24. 24); they are also reckoned as belonging to the second varcasya gaṇa (see note to Kāuç. 12. 10).

24. What odor of thine entered into the blue lotus; which they brought together at Sūryā's wedding — the immortals, O earth, [what] odor in the beginning — with that do thou make me odorous; let no one soever hate us.

Ppp. has again tenā 'smān surabhīṣ kṛṇu, and dvakṣata. ⌊To the definition of the⌋ verse (11 + 11 : 11 + 8 + 8 = 49) ⌊should be added "bhurij"⌋.

25. What odor of thine is in human beings (púruṣa); in women, in men, [what] portion, pleasure; what in horses, in heroes, what in wild animals and in elephants; what splendor, O earth (bhū́mi), in a maiden — with that do thou unite us also; let no one soever hate us.

Or, in d, mṛgeṣu hastiṣu may mean simply 'elephants' (lit. 'wild beasts having a hand'). Ppp. reads yas te bhāume puruṣeṣu . . . rucir yo vadhūṣu : yo goṣv açveṣu yo mṛgeṣu : . . . yad bhāume abhi saṁ sṛja; and in g dvakṣata. If the verse contains an uṣṇih pāda (namely c, the resolution aç-u-eṣu being rejected), it is nicṛt as a çakvarī.

26. Rock [is?] earth (bhū́mi), stone, dust; this earth (bhū́mi) [is] held together, held; to that earth, gold-backed (-vákṣas) have I paid homage.

Ppp. reads, in a–b, pāṅsv aryā bhūmi stṛtā dhṛtā, and omits c, d. ⌊Cf. note to vs. 6.⌋

27. On whom stand always fixed the trees, the forest trees (vānaspatyá), the all-supporting earth that is held [together] do we address.

Ppp. reads for d bhūmyāi hiraṇyavakṣasi dhṛtam acchāv-. Vāit. 2. 8 quotes the verse to accompany the laying down of the enclosing sticks.

28. Arising (ud-īr), also sitting, standing, striding forth, with right and left feet, let us not stagger upon the earth.

The Anukr. seems to assume the resolution -kṛ-ā- in b. This verse and 33 below are quoted in Kāuç. 24. 33 to accompany the taking of three steps, while looking around, in the āgrahāyaṇī ceremony.

29. The cleansing (vimṛ́gvan) earth do I address, the patient (kṣamá) earth (bhū́mi), increasing by worship (bráhman); may we sit down, O earth (bhū́mi), upon thee, that bearest refreshment, prosperity (puṣṭá), food-portion, ghee.

Ppp. reads at the beginning vimargvāya, in b vāvṛdhānaḥ, in c puṣṭiṁ, in d bhāume. The verse is quoted four times in Kāuç.: in 3. 8; 24. 28; 137. 40, to accompany a sitting down in different ceremonies; and in 90. 15, when causing a guest to stand upon a cushion.

30. Let cleansed (çuddhá) waters flow for our body; what mucus (? syédu) is ours, that we deposit on him we love not (ápriya); with a purifier (pavítra), O earth, do I purify myself.

Part of the pada-mss. (Bp. ⌊and one of SPP's⌋) accent mā́ in c. Ppp. has mā for nas in a; and, in b, yo me sehnur. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 58. 7 (and at second hand under 24. 24) in connection with rinsing the mouth after spitting; also in Vāit. 12. 6 in connection with easing nature.

31. What forward directions are thine, what upward, what are thine, O earth (bhū́mi), downward, and what behind, let those be pleasant to me going about; let me not fall down [when] supported (çri) on creation (bhúvana).

The verse is found also in MS. (iv. 14. 11), which reads, for b, yā́ç ca bhūmy adharā́g yā́ç ca paçcā́; also çivā́s for syonā́s in c. Ppp. has in b bhāume 'dharād, and in d çuçriyāṇe. This and the following verse are reckoned to the svastyayana gaṇa: see note to Kāuç. 25. 36.

32. Do not push (nud) us behind, nor in front, nor above and below; become thou welfare for us, O earth (bhū́mi); let not the waylayers find [us]; keep very far off the deadly weapon.

The directions 'forward' etc., in this and the preceding verse, are also equivalent, as elsewhere, to 'eastern' etc. Pāda d occurs below as xiv. 2. 11 a; e was found above as i. 20. 3 d etc. Ppp. reads mā for nas in a, omits b, reads in c bhāume me kṛṇu, and makes d and e change places, reading also vāyas for varīyas ⌊and vidhan for vidan⌋. The verse (11 + 8 : 8 + 8 + 8 = 43) is curiously defined by the Anukr.

33. How much of thee I look forth upon, O earth (bhū́mi), with the sun for ally (medín), so far let my sight not fail (mī), from one year (sámā) to another.

Ppp. has again bhāume in b. For the use of the verse in Kāuç., see note to vs. 28. It is quoted also in Vāit. 27. 7 as used by one gazing at the earth after mounting the sacrificial post. ⌊Pāda d we had at iii. 10. 1; 17. 4.⌋

34. In that, lying, I turn myself about upon the right [or] the left side, O earth (bhū́mi); in that we with our ribs lie stretched out upon thee that meetest us — do not in that case injure us, O earth (bhū́mi), thou underlier of everything.

'Underlier,' lit. 'counter-lier, one whose lying answers to that of another.' In a, b, perhaps rather 'in that I turn over toward [thee] the one or the other side' ⌊cf. vii. 100. 1⌋. Our Bp. puts its sign of pāda-division between c and d before instead of after yát, and the Anukr. supports it by counting a bṛhatī element in the verse (which is properly 8 + 11 : 8 + 8 : 8 + 8 = 51). The verse is prescribed in Kāuç. 24. 30, to accompany the act of turning over while lying down, in the āgrahāyaṇī ceremony. All the mss., with the edition, ⌊likewise SPP's mss. and ed.,⌋ accent paryā́varte; it should be paryāvárte. Ppp. puts the verse after 35, and reads api for abhi in b; and, for d, pṛṣṭvā yad ṛdva çemahe; and bhāume both times for bhūme.

35. What of thee, O earth (bhū́mi), I dig out, let that quickly grow over; let me not hit (arpay-) thy vitals nor thy heart, O cleansing one.

‘Grow over,’ i.e. heal up, like a wound. Ppp. has again bhāume in a; also oṣaṁ for kṣipram in b, and arpitam in d; this time (cf. vs. 29) it agrees with our text in the peculiar epithet vimṛgvari, lit. ‘wiping off.’ Kāuç. (46. 51) quotes the verse to accompany an act of digging in a prāyaçcitta ceremony; and again similarly at 137. 12.

36. Let thy hot season, O earth (bhū́mi), rainy season, autumn, winter, cool season, spring — let thine arranged seasons, years, let day-and-night, O earth, yield milk (duh) to us.

One would expect in c hāyanā́s ‘belonging to or constituting the year’; and Ppp., combining hāyanā 'hor-, favors that reading. Ppp. has also again bhāume in a. The irregularity of the verse (8 + 11 : 10 + 11 = 40) indicates corruption; it is a pañkti, of course, only by the sum of syllables. It is quoted in Kāuç. 137. 9, as one approaches to measure out the sacrificial hearth. ⌊Cf. 137. 4, note.⌋

37. She who, cleansing one, trembling away the serpent; on whom were the fires that are within the waters, abandoning the god-insulting barbarians, choosing, she the earth, Indra [and] not Vṛitra, kept herself (dhṛ) for the mighty one (çakrá), the virile bull.

The first pāda is extremely obscure; it is here translated mechanically, as closely as possible to the text. Bruce understands at the beginning yā́ : ā́pa (instead of the yā́ : ápa of the pada-text); and that would be a natural and easy emendation, if only the resulting sense were more acceptable. Ludwig renders as if we read sárpāt (‘trembling at the serpent’). The totally different reading of Ppp., ya āpas sarpan yatamānā vimṛgvari, indicates that the text is corrupt. Ppp. further reads in b agnayo 'psv, and stops the verse at dadatī, then adding our vs. 40. Our verse (12 + 11 : 11 + 11 : 11 = 56) adds up as a true çakvarī.

38. On whom are the seat and oblation-holder; on whom the sacrificial post (yū́pa) is planted; on whom worshipers (brahmán) praise (arc) with verses, with the chant, knowing the sacrificial formulas; on whom are joined the priests (ṛtvíj), for Indra to drink the soma; —

Ppp. reads in e yujyante 'syām ṛtyavas s-. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 24. 37 to accompany an oblation ⌊and by Dārila to 24. 24, in the āgrahāyaṇī ceremony⌋. It is also reckoned with vs. 1 among the puṣṭika mantras (see note to Kāuç. 19. 1). In Vāit. 15. 4, this verse and the two following are prescribed to accompany the subrahmaṇyā recitation; in 10. 8, it is used at the setting up of the sacrificial post.

39. On whom the former being-making seers sang out (ud-arc) the kine — the seven pious ones (vedhás), by their session, together with sacrifice [and] penance; —

Ppp. reads udānāt for udānṛcus in b; all our mss. accent úd ānṛcús, but the edited text has emended to udān-. Vāit. 22. 1 gives the verse as prescribed by a certain authority to be used instead of iii. 14. 2, in driving out the kine from the place of sacrifice.

40. Let that earth (bhū́mi) appoint unto us what riches we desire; let Bhaga join on after; let Indra go [as our] forerunner.

For consistency, our text should read in c -yuñtām, as called for by Prāt. ii. 20 (see the note). As noticed above, this verse is in Ppp. joined on to 37 as a part of it; in its place, as conclusion of 39, is given here sā naṣ paçūn viçvarūpān dadhātu jaradaṣṭiṁ mā pṛthivī kṛṇotu. ⌊In d of our vs. 40, Ppp. reads indro yātu.⌋

41. On whom, the earth (bhū́mi), mortals sing [and] dance with loud noises (? vyā̀ilaba); on whom they fight; on whom speaks the shout (ākrandá), the drum — let that earth (bhū́mi) push forth our rivals; let earth make me free from rivals.

Yudhyánte should be emended to yúdhyante. The verse (8 + 8 : 8 + 8 : 11 + 11 = 54) has no kakubh element in it, but as çakvarī it is virāj. Ppp. puts the verse after our vs. 42, and reads for b: janā martyā dvāilavā; ⌊in c yudhyante 'syām;⌋ and, for e, f, sā no bhūmiṣ pra dadhatāṁ sapatnān: yo no dveṣṭy adharaṁ taṁ kṛṇotu.

42. On whom is food, rice-and-barley; whose are these five races (kṛṣṭí) — to the earth, whose spouse is Parjanya, fattened (-médas) by the rain, be homage.

With the irregular, but not infrequent, combination yásye 'mā́ḥ in b, the verse is a regular anuṣṭubh; for the epithet svarāj of the Anukr. there is no ⌊sufficient⌋ reason. Ppp. reads for b yatre 'māṣ pañca gṛṣṭayaḥ, and ends with -medhase. Kāuç. uses the verse at 24. 38 (next after vs. 38), and at 137. 24, with homage to the ⌊earth (bhūmi)⌋.

43. Whose are the god-made strongholds; in whose field [men] fall out (? vi-kṛ) — the earth, womb of everything, let Prajāpati make pleasant (ráṇya) to us, spot by spot.

⌊BR. render viçvágarbha by ‘Alles im Schoosse tragend.’⌋ Ppp. reads yasyāṁ both times for yasyāḥ; also, at the end, niṣ ṭaṇotu. The Anukr. is more than usually scrupulous in calling the verse virāj. Read in b vikurváte.

44. Bearing treasure [and] good in many places hiddenly, let the earth give me jewel (maṇí), gold; giver of good, bestowing good things on us, let the divine one assign [them to us] with favoring mind.

Ppp. ⌊puts the verse after our 30, and⌋ reads at end of b dadhātu naḥ. Kāuç. quotes the verse at 24. 39, as used by one who desires jewels or gold. ⌊So Keç., p. 322: also SPP. (maṇihiraṇyādikāmaḥ) at p. 201^{18}; but at 201^{26} he cites the sūtra with Bl's reading (maṇiṁ hir-); cf. Caland, p. 66.⌋

45. Let the earth, bearing in many places people of different speech, of diverse customs (-dhárman), according to their homes, yield (duh) me a thousand streams of property, like a steady (dhruvá) unresisting milch-cow.

Ppp. reads in a janaṁ yaṁ bibhratī bahuvācasaṁ, and in c nas for me. The Anukr. does not heed that the last pāda in this verse, and the last two in vs. 44, are triṣṭubh. ⌊Keç., p. 322^{31}, couples this vs. with the preceding: cf. note to vs. 44.⌋

46. What stinging (vṛ́çcika) harsh-biting serpent of thine lies in secret, winter-harmed, torpid (? bhṛmalá); whatever worm, O earth, becoming lively, stirs in the early rainy season — let that, crawling, not crawl upon us; be thou gracious to us with that which is propitious.

Ppp. reads in a vṛçcakas, and for b ff. hemantalabdho bhramalo (!) kṛmir lisaṁ pṛthivyāi prāvṛṣī yad ejati. The treatment of krímis in c as neuter is very strange. ⌊Is it a collective neuter like Gewürm? cf. Noun-Inflection, JAOS. x. 570.⌋ In the description of the verse (11 + 12 : 7 + 8 + 8 + 8 = 54) by the Anukr. there is perhaps something omitted (or we are to read virāṭ çakvarī for parāç-). The verse is used according to Kāuç. 50. 17 (with ⌊iii. 26 (see introduction thereto) and 27 and⌋ vi. 56. 1) in the removal of vermin; also, according to 139. 8, with a number of other verses about serpents and the like; and it is reckoned to the rāudra gaṇa (note to Kāuç. 50. 13). In Vāit. 29. 10 it accompanies a libation to Rudra.

47. What many roads thou hast, for people to go upon, a track (vártman) for the chariot, and for the going of the cart, by which (pl.) men of both kinds, excellent and evil, go about — that road, free from enemies, free from robbers, may we conquer; be thou gracious to us with that which is propitious.

Ppp. reads bahudhā (for bahavas) in a, yebhiç car- at beginning of c, and panthām in d; and it omits the last pāda ⌊repeated from vs. 46⌋. The pratīka (ye te panthānaḥ), quoted in Kāuç. 50. 1, might refer either to this verse or to vii. 55. 1; the comm. to vii. 55 declares the latter to be intended.

48. Bearing the fool, bearer of what is heavy, enduring (titikṣú) the death (? nidhána) of the excellent and of the evil, the earth, in concord with the boar, opens itself to the wild (mṛgá) hog.

Ludwig understands gurubhṛ́t in a as 'bearer of the wise' (guru as antithesis of malva); the Pet. Lexx. translate nidhána as 'residence' (and so Bruce, 'abode'). Ppp. has at the beginning a very different text: sarpaṁ bibhratī surabhir; and it reads sūkareṇa in c and varāhāya in d.

49. What forest animals of thine, wild beasts set in the woods, lions, tigers, go about man-eating — the jackal (? ulá), the wolf, O earth, misfortune, the ṛkṣīkā, the demon, do thou force (bādh) away from us here.

The translation here given agrees with its predecessors in assuming emendation of té in a to te. Some of our mss. read in c–d itá rakṣīkām; and Bp. has after it ṛ́kṣaḥ. Ppp. gives eta rakṣīkāṁ rakṣo 'pa bādhā mat; and, at the beginning, yatāraṇyāṣ paç-; ⌊and ulaṁ in c like our text⌋. With a compare the nearly identical xi. 2. 24 a; in spite of their agreement, one can hardly help regarding mṛgās as an intruded word. The Anukr. apparently accepts the two redundant syllables as making up for the deficiency in b and d, since 14 + 11 : 12 + 11 = 48 syllables. ⌊As to the "man-eaters," cf. note to xv. 5. 7.⌋

50. What Gandharvas, Apsarases [there are], and what aráyas, kimīdíns: the piçācás, all demons — them do thou keep away from us, O earth (bhū́mi).

Ppp. combines in a gandharvā 'ps-, and has at the end bhāume yāvayaḥ.

51. She to whom two-footed winged-ones fly together, swans, eagles, hawks, birds; on whom the wind, Mātariçvan, goes about, making clouds of dust (? rájas) and setting in motion the trees — flame (arcís) blows after the forth-blowing, the toward-blowing, of the wind.

The second pāda is identical with xi. 2. 24 b. Upavā́m is metrically an intrusion into e: with the pāda is to be compared RV. i. 148. 4 c (which, however, casts little light upon it). Ppp. reads in c–d vātayate mātariçvā raj-; and, in e, it omits upavām, and has at the end arciṣe. The Anukr. appears to divide the last redundant pāda into two, an anuṣṭubh (8) and a kakubh (6); the whole makes two syllables more than a proper çakvarī (11 + 11 : 11 + 11 : 8 + 6 = 58). ⌊Hopkins, JAOS. xx.² 217, thinks that fire caused by the friction of branches is here alluded to, and cites parallels. We may add Indische Sprüche, 3759, which is very clear.⌋

52. On whom the black and the ruddy, combined, [namely] day-and-night, [are] disposed upon the earth (bhū́mi); the broad (pṛthivī́) earth (bhū́mi), wrapped [and] covered with rain — let her kindly (bhadráyā) set us in each loved abode.

Ppp. reads gṛṣṭam for kṛṣṇam in a, reads and combines saṁbhṛte 'horātre in a–b, and reads vṛtāvṛdhā in c, and dhāmnidhāmni in e. In c is to be understood, with the pada-text, vṛtā́ : ā́०vṛtā. An accent-mark under the final tā is needed in order to indicate the acute of sā́ in the next line. The verse (11 + 12 : 12 + 8 + 8 = 51) is not well described by the Anukr. ⌊A ca with syllabic value, inserted after kṛṣṇám, would be an effective, albeit cheap, means of improving the meter of a.⌋ The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 24. 41 (next after various of the preceding verses), as accompanying a mouth-rinsing and head-splashing with rainwater; and pāda c, again, in 137. 23, with a sprinkling with water.

53. Both heaven and earth and atmosphere [have given] me this expanse; fire, sun, waters, and all the gods have together given me wisdom (medhā́).

The translation of a, b is doubtful; vyácas may be in apposition with antárikṣam, and the gift as in the second line. The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregular combination me 'dam in a, which is needed to make the verse a simple anuṣṭubh. Ppp. combines māi 'daṁ, and it has at the end saṁ dadhāu. Not this verse, but vi. 53. 1 (according to the comm. on the latter), is quoted in Kāuç. 10. 20, in a ceremony for wisdom; ⌊but Dārila understands our verse as the one intended⌋.

54. I am overpowering, superior by name on the earth (bhū́mi); I am subduing, all-overpowering, vanquishing in every region.

The treatment of the compounds of sah (p. also abhīṣā́ṭ, viçvāṣā́ṭ) is the subject of several rules in the Prāt. (ii. 82; iii. 1; iv. 70). ⌊Cf. above, iii. 18. 5.⌋ The verse is by Kāuç. 38. 30 prescribed to be repeated as one goes to an assembly (pariṣad).

55. When yonder, O divine one, spreading thyself forward, told by the gods, thou didst expand (vi-sṛp) to greatness, then entered into thee well-being; thou didst make fit the four directions.

Ppp. at the beginning puts yat before adas; it has in b sṛṣṭā instead of uktā, and mahitvā (which is better); and in c ā vāmabhūtam av-. The Anukr. does not heed the redundant syllable in a.

56. What villages, what forest, what assemblies, [are] upon the earth (bhū́mi), what hosts, gatherings — in them may we speak what is pleasant (cā́ru) to thee.

With the first half-verse may be compared VS. iii. 45 a, b. Ppp. reads for a ye grāmyā yāny araṇyāni, and for c, d teṣv ahaṁ devi pṛthvi vibhyāsaṁ mayu satva ca.

57. As a horse the dust, she has shaken apart those people who dwelt upon the earth since (yā́t) she was born — pleasing, going at the head, keeper of creation (bhúvana), container of forest trees, of herbs.

Ppp. reads at the beginning açvī 'va, and is corrupt throughout; ⌊but it reads gṛbhir like our text⌋. The Anukr. calls the first pāda an atijagatī rather than admit the abbreviated form 'va for iva.

58. What I speak, rich in honey I speak it; what I view, that they win (? van) me; brilliant am I, possessed of swiftness; I smite down others that are violent (? dódhat).

The sense of b is obscure. Ppp. reads vadantu (for vananti); Bp. has vadanti, and O.s.m. (p.m.?) vahanti. Ppp. has at the end dodhata. Kāuç. quotes the verse at 24. 14 and 38. 29, each time adding mantroktam 'as expressed in the verse.' ⌊Ppp. puts this verse before our 57.⌋

59. Tranquil, fragrant, pleasant, with sweet drink in her udder, rich in milk, let earth (bhū́mi) bless me, earth together with milk.

Ppp. reads at the beginning santivā ⌊cf. iii. 30. 2, note⌋, and in c no 'dhi (in place of adhi). The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 24. 31, among many other verses from this hymn; ⌊further, by Dārila to 3. 4, and by Keç. to 70. 8, 9⌋.

60. Whom Viçvakarman sought after with oblation within the ocean, when she was entered into the mist (? rájas); an enjoyable vessel that was deposited in secret became manifest in enjoyment (bhóga) for them that have mothers.

Ppp. reads for b yasyām āsann ugrayo ⌊intending agnayo?⌋ 'psv antaḥ; and, in c, d, guhā çāir āvir bhor abhavan mātṛmadbhiḥ: which casts no light on the strange and obscure meaning.

61. Thou art the scatterer (? āvápana) of people, [art] a wish-fulfilling (kāmadúgha) Aditi, spreading out; what of thee is deficient, may Prajāpati, first-born of righteousness, fill that up for thee.

The word āvápana seems to mean sometimes, and perhaps here, a (wide, shallow?) receptacle onto which things are strewn or scattered. Ppp. has at the beginning vim for tvam, and in b viçvarūpā for paprathānā; for c, d it reads yat tāu "naṁ tat tāpūrayāti prajāpatiḥ prajābhis saṁvidānām; and it ends the hymn here. The Anukr. refuses to admit two familiar resolutions in a, and gratuitously calls the pāda a bārhata

(9 syll.). The second half-verse is twice quoted in Kāuç. (46. 52; 137. 13) in connection with filling up a hole that has been dug (iti saṁvapati); and the verse, in 137. 14, with removing elsewhither the dirt taken out.

62. Let standers upon thee, free from disease, free from yákṣma, be produced (prásūta) for us, O earth; awakening to meet our long lifetime, may we be tribute-bearers to thee.

The sense of upasthā́s (p. upa◦sthā́ḥ) in a is doubtful; Ludwig renders 'laps,' as if upásthās; ⌊and so Bloomfield⌋; Bruce 'that shall dwell in thee.' The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 50. 10, in a ceremony for success. The description of the Anukr. is unintelligible, as the verse is a perfectly regular triṣṭubh.

63. O mother earth (bhū́mi), do thou kindly set me down well established; in concord with the heaven, O sage (kávi), do thou set me in fortune, in prosperity (bhū́ti).

The verse is used by Kāuç. (24. 27) in connection with vss. 1–7; also by the comm. to 58. 19 in the annaprāçana ceremony. Vāit. 27. 8 prescribes it on descending from the sacrificial post (cf. note to vs. 33). ⌊For çriyā́m, the only form of its kind in the AV., see JAOS. x. 389.⌋

2. The flesh-eating and the householder's fires.

[Bhṛgu.—pañcapañcāçat. āgneyam uta mantroktadevatyam; 21–33. mārtvyaḥ. trāiṣṭubham; 2, 5, 12–20, 34–36, 38–41, 43, 51, 54. anuṣṭubh (16. kakummatī parābṛhatī; 18. nicṛt; 40. purastātkakummatī); 3. āstārapañkti; 6. bhurig ārṣī pañkti; 7, 45. jagatī; 8, 48, 49. bhurij; 9. anuṣṭubgarbhā viparītapādalakṣmī pañkti; 37. purastādbṛhatī; 42. 3-p. 1-av. bhurig ārcī gāyatrī; 44. 1-av. 2-p. ārcī bṛhatī; 46. 1-av. 2-p. sāmnī triṣṭubh; 47. 5-p. bārhatavāirājagarbhā jagatī; 50. upariṣṭādvirāḍ bṛhatī; 52. purastādvirāḍ bṛhatī; 55. bṛhatīgarbhā.]

⌊Partly prose—vss. 42, 44.⌋ Found also (except vss. 36, 52) in Pāipp. xvii., with slight differences of order, pointed out under the verses. The whole hymn (which is also an anuvāka) is quoted in Kāuç. 69. 7 (with vii. 62 and the mahā́çānti hymns), in the ceremony of preparing the house-fire; and a large proportion of the verses in this and other ceremonies; a few also are used in the Vāit.; ⌊and the hymn is cited by Dārila on Kāuç. 43. 5⌋.

Translated: Ludwig, p. 479 (omitting here vss. 21–26, 30–31); Henry, 188, 227; Griffith, ii. 102.—The RV. correspondents of a number of the verses (7, 8, 21–25, 26, 30, 31) are discussed in my Skt. Reader, pages 380 ff., 388.

1. Ascend the reeds (naḍá); no place for thee is here; this lead is thy portion; come! what yákṣma is in kine, [what] yákṣma in men, in company with that do thou go forth downward.

This and vss. 11, 54, and 55 are quoted together in Kāuç. 71. 5, when putting fuel on the flesh-eating (kravyād) fire; also, in 71. 8, vss. 1–4, 42, 43, 15, 16 (with iii. 21. 8), with quenching it. Ppp. combines te 'tra in a.

2. By evil-plotter and ill-plotter, by actor and helper, both all yákṣma and death do we thereby drive out from here.

Ppp. reads in c, d mṛtyūn̄ç ca sarvāṅs tene 'to yakṣmān̄ç ca nir etc. The first half-verse is like a half-verse in MS. iv. 14. 17; TA. ii. 4^7: duḥçaṅsānuçaṅsábhyāṁ ghanénā 'nughanéna ca ⌊cf. Kaṭha-hss., p. 72⌋.

3. Out from here do we drive death, perdition, out the niggard; whoso hates us, him, O non-flesh-eating Agni, do thou eat; whomso we hate, him do we impel to thee.

The pada-text has in c, ádhi; and most of the saṁhitā-mss. ádhy agne, in accordance with it, though one or two (Bs.E.) have áddhy agne, which is no various reading, but only an allowed equivalent. The case is like those in i. 22. 1 and v. 20. 12 above; the abbreviated reading adhy has been mistaken for adhi instead of addhi, and then accented accordingly. Bp. accents also akravya∘át. Our text emends to addhy àgne akravyāt, but should read instead agne, since there is no reason whatever for the accentuation addhí. A better reading would seem also to be kravyāt. Ppp. has adhy agne kravyād; but that, of course, might mean 'kravyāt.' Ppp. also has simply aṁ for yam u in d, omits the second u, and ends with suvāmaḥ. ⌊Ppp. reads yakṣmas for dviṣmas in d. So the Ppp. reading is adhy agne kravyād aṁ yakṣmas taṁ te pra suvāmaḥ.⌋

4. If the flesh-eating Agni, or if the tiger-like, hath entered this stall (goṣṭhá), being not at home (?), him, having made him to have beans for sacrificial butter, I send far forth; let him go unto the Agnis that have seat in the waters.

Part of the mss. (E.I.O.R.T.K.) have vyāghrás in a, and that is perhaps the true reading, since -ghrya seems to be found nowhere else. Ppp. reads in b anyokā viveça, and in c tan mā-. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant (tám intruded?) syllable in c. In Kāuç. 71. 6 the verse is used (with vss. 7 and 53) in making a libation of crushed beans with mother-of-pearl (? çukti) to the flesh-eating fire which is to be banished. ⌊The verse contains reminiscences of 7 and 8 below.⌋

5. If angry men put thee forth (pra-kṛ), with fury, a man having died, that, O Agni, is easy to be arranged by thee; we make thee flame up again.

Ppp. reads kṛtvā for kruddhās in a, mite for mṛte in b, and ca for tat in c. The Anukr. appears to sanction the resolution cakṛ-ur in a. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 70. 6; also in Vāit. 5. 13, to accompany the removal of fire from the householder's to the other two fires.

6. The Ādityas, the Rudras, the Vasus [have set] thee again; again, O Agni, the priest (brahmán), conductor of good; Brahmaṇaspati hath set thee again, in order to length of life-time to a hundred autumns.

With the first half-verse is to be compared that of VS. xii. 44 (also in TS. iv. 2. 3^5; MS. i. 7. 1), which inserts sám indhatām after vásavas, and reads, for b, púnar brahmā́ṇo (Ppp. also brahmāṇo) vasunītha (MS. vasudhīte) yajñāḥ ⌊MS. agne⌋. ⌊But see also WZKM. xi. 120.⌋ The verse (10 + 10 : 10 + 11 = 41; but c has really 11 syll.) is artificially described by the Anukr. It is made in Vāit. 28. 22 to accompany the laying of fuel in the ukhya.

7. If the flesh-eating Agni hath entered our house, seeing this other Jātavedas, him I take afar for the Fathers' sacrifice; let him kindle the hot drink (gharmá) in the highest station.

The verse is also RV. x. 16. 10, where is read vas for nas in a, devám for dūrám in c, and invāt for indhām in d. It is used in Kāuç. 71. 6 with vs. 4 (see note to latter).

8. I send far forth the flesh-eating Agni; let him go, carrying evil (riprá-), to Yama's subjects; here let this other Jātavedas carry the oblation, a god to the gods, foreknowing.

The verse is also RV. x. 16. 9 (and VS. xxxv. 19 ⌊with yamarā́jyam⌋): our text defaces the meter of c, d by omitting evá after ihá and inserting devás. ⌊Cf. MGS. ii. 1. 8 and p. 149.⌋ This and the two following verses are used in Kāuç. 71. 12 to accompany the removed fire. ⌊The same three vss. are quoted by the comm. to 81. 33.⌋

9. I, being sent, take the flesh-eating Agni, a death, making people fixed with the thunderbolt; I, knowing, separate (? ni-çās) him from the householder's fire; also in the world of the Fathers be he [their] portion.

Ppp. reads iṣitaṁ in a, and, in d, lokaṁ paramo yotu. The sense of b is so strange that we cannot but suspect a corrupt text. ⌊Roth would read tṛṅhantam, ZDMG. xlviii. 107.⌋ In d, nearly all the saṁhitā-mss. (all save Bs.E.) read loké 'pi, which is therefore probably the true text. The description by the Anukr. of this fairly regular triṣṭubh is very strange.

10. The flesh-eating Agni, active, praiseworthy, I send forth by the roads that the Fathers go; come thou not back by those that the gods go; be thou just there (átra); watch thou over the Fathers.

Ppp. reads, in c–d, mā devayānāiṣ pathibhir ā gā 'trāi 'va, which does not help the defective meter; of this the Anukr. takes no notice.

11. They kindle the devouring one (sáṁkasuka) in order to well-being, becoming cleansed, bright, purifying; he abandons evil (riprá), passes over sin; Agni, kindled, purifies with a good purifier.

Ppp. combines ene 'ti in c. The Anukr. does not heed that the first pāda is properly jagatī. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 71. 5 (see note to vs. 1). ⌊Caland, WZKM. viii. 368, thinks that this verse (not xviii. 4. 41) is intended at Kāuç. 86. 18.⌋ ⌊Over "devouring," as rendering of sáṁkasuka (which occurs in vss. 11–14, 19, 40), W. has interlined 'crushing' in three instances.⌋

12. God Agni the devouring hath ascended the backs of the sky; being released out of sin, he hath released us from imprecation.

Some of our mss. (P.M.W.E.) read nír éṇaso in c. Ppp. reads, here and below, saṁkusika-.

13. On this devouring Agni do we wipe off evils; we have become fit for sacrifice, cleansed; may he prolong our life-times.

The verse is found also in Āp. ix. 3. 22 (following a verse resembling our vs. 14), which reads saṁkusuke 'gnāu in a–b. Our mss., as often in such cases, vary between tāriṣat and tārṣat at the end (Bs.E.D.R.K. have tārṣat). The verse is quoted (with vss. 19, 40) in Kāuç. 71. 16 and 86. 19, to accompany the act of washing off (ity abhyavanejayati).

14. The crushing ⌊sáṁkasuka⌋, the bursting (víkasuka), the destroying (nirṛthá) and the noiseless (? nisvará) — they, of like possessions (? sávedas), have made from far thy yákṣma to disappear afar.

The translation implies emendation at the end to anīnaçan, which seems altogether necessary. Yet MS. (iv. 14. 17) and TA. (ii. 45) strangely have instead of it acīcatam (not -tan). ⌊But see Kaṭha-hss., p. 72, where the Berlin ms. is reported as reading cīcatan. The TA. comm. renders acīcatam by cātayantu.⌋ In b, TA. reads nisvanáḥ, and MS. nírṛto and nísvanaḥ; in c, MS. has 'smad (not 'smád!) for te, and TA. té ye 'smád (but the ye perhaps a blunder of the edition *); both ánāgasas instead of sávedasas (which looks like a mere blunder, intended to have the sense of saṁvidānā́s). Then TA. has sáṁkus-, víkus-, in a, and with it agrees Āp. (ix. 3. 22, a and b only, with vikiro yaç ca viṣkiraḥ for b). Moreover, both MS. and TA. accent yakṣmám.* Some of our mss. (Bp.I.K.) read nirrathás in b, but this is only an example of the frequent confusion of ṛ and ra. Ppp. has ⌊vikasukas in a, like our text⌋, savedhasas in c, and ucidyavo (for anīnaçam) at the end. *⌊The Poona ed., p. 126, gives té 'smád, but notes one ms. as having te ye 'smad; and it accents yákṣmam.⌋

15. The flesh-eating one that is in our horses, heroes, that is in our kine, goats-and-sheep, do we thrust out — the fire that obstructs the people.

Ppp. combines in a no 'çv-, and reads for b yo goṣu yo 'jāviṣu; ⌊and puts the verse after 16⌋. This verse and the one following are quoted with others (see note to vs. 1) in Kāuç. 71. 8.

16. Thee from inexhaustible (? ánya) men, kine, horses, thee the flesh-eating one do we thrust out — the fire that obstructs life.

Ludwig gets rid of the difficulty of ánya by taking it as anyá and the nouns in a, b as datives. Ppp. reads ajñānā for anyebhyas tvā; in c it puts nis after kravyādam. Some of our mss. (Bs.I.) combine niṣ kṛ- (níḥ and kṛ- should be separated in our edition). The Anukr. very unnecessarily scans the verse as 8 + 6 : 8 + 9, while it is easily read into a regular anuṣṭubh.

17. On what the gods wiped off, on what human beings (manuṣyà) also — on that having wiped off the drops of ghee (?), O Agni, do thou mount the sky.

All our mss. have amṛjata unaccented save one (E.), which has ásṛjata. ⌊All of SPP's have amṛjata save his J., which has, s.m., ámṛjata.⌋ Ghṛtastā́vas in c is translated after the Pet. Lexx., but the rendering is in the highest degree doubtful, on account both of form and of sense. Probably the reading is corrupt. Ppp. gives no help, as most of vss. 17, 18 is lost out of the ms.; ⌊but their order appears to be inverted⌋. Our mss. seem to read -stā́- very plainly ⌊and SPP. reports no variant⌋, but that need not prevent our understanding instead -snā́-, if more acceptable.

18. Being kindled, O Agni, thou to whom oblations are made, go (kram) thou not away against us; shine just here by day, and that [we] long see the sun.

Or dyavi, in c, 'in the sky' (so Ludwig). The last pāda is also i. 6. 3 d. ⌊Cf. also note to vi. 19. 2.⌋ There is no good reason for calling the verse nicṛt.

19. Wipe ye off on the lead; wipe ye off on the reeds; and what on the consuming fire; likewise on the dark (rāmá) ewe; headache on the pillow.

The rendering is very literal, and does not disguise the obscurity of the connection. Ppp. reads for b agnis saṁkusikaç ca yaḥ, which is more manageable: 'and on [that] which [is] the consuming fire': i.e. 'on the fire.' ⌊Caland, KZ. xxxiv. 457, comparing Avestan locutions, says that agnāu saṁkasuke ca yat is locative to agniḥ saṁkasukaç ca yaḥ: cf. vs. 40 and i. 30. 1.⌋ The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 71. 16; 86. 19, with vss. 13 and 40: see above, under vs. 13. The mss. in general, according to their wont, read in a mṛḍhvam (but Bs. mṛḍhḍham). ⌊For çīrṣakti, see ref's under i. 12. 3.⌋

20. Having settled what is foul upon the lead [and] headache upon the pillow, having wiped off on the black ewe, be ye cleansed, fit for sacrifice.

Compare xiv. 2. 67. ⌊Cf. MGS. ii. 1. 10.⌋

21. Go away, O death, along a distant road which is thine here, other than that the gods go upon; I speak to thee having sight, hearing; let these many heroes be here.

The verse (except d) is RV. x. 18. 1, and found also in VS. (xxxv. 7), TB. (iii. 7. 14^5), and TA. (iii. 15. 2 : vi. 7. 3). RV. has svás for our eṣás in b, and, for d, mā́ naḥ prajā́ṁ rīriṣo mó 'tá vīrā́n, and the other texts agree with it, save that VS. has anyás for svás in b. Ppp. omits iha in d. ⌊Cf. MB. i. 1. 15; also MGS. ii. 18. 2 m.⌋ The verse is used several times in Kāuç.: at 71. 11, 21; 72. 13; 86. 24.

22. These living ones have turned away from the dead; our invocation of the gods hath been auspicious (bhadrá) today; we have gone forward unto dancing, unto laughter; may we, rich in heroes, address counsel.

The verse (again with exception of d) is RV. x. 18. 3, and found also in TA. (vi. 10. 2). The last pāda in the other texts is drā́ghīya ā́yuḥ pratarā́ṁ (TA. -rā́ṁ) dádhānāḥ ; our d is identical with RV. i. 117. 25 d. TA.* has ā́ 'vavartin in a, and agāmā in c. ⌊With b cf. RV. x. 53. 3 d.⌋ The verse is used (with vs. 29) in Kāuç. 71. 18 and 86. 21. ⌊At vs. 30, W. wrote "speak to the counsel," and then interlined suggestion of "council."⌋
*⌊TA. has also prā́ñjo for prā́ñco.⌋

23. I set this enclosure for the living; let not another of them now go to that goal; living a hundred numerous autumns, let them set an obstacle to death with a mountain.

The verse is RV. x. 18. 4, and found also in VS. (xxxv. 15), TB. (iii. 7. 11^3), TA. (vi. 10. 2), and Āp. (ix. 12. 4; xiv. 22. 3). RV. differs from our text only by reading jīvantu in c, and antár (for tirás) in d. VS. agrees throughout with RV.; TB. differs only by having (like AV.) tirás in d (eṣā́n nu in b is doubtless a misprint, as mátyám in d is a misprint for mṛtyúm : see the comm. ⌊the Poona ed., p. 1137, corrects them both⌋), and árdham in b. TA. reads mā́ nó 'nu gād and árdham in b, and tirás and dadmahe in d. Āp. agrees exactly with TB. the first time; but the second time it has no nu (or 'nu) in b, and dadhmahe in d. ⌊Cf. MP. ii. 22. 24.⌋ Ppp. gives, in c, jyok for çatam, and combines çaradaṣ pu-. In Kāuç. 72. 17 the verse accompanies the setting down (of a stone) in the door; in 72. 2 the last pāda is recited while stepping over the stone.

24. Mount, choosing old age for life-time, pressing on, one after another, as many as ye be; you here let Tvashṭar, him of good births, in accord [with you], lead on to living your whole life-time.

The verse is (once more with exception of the last pāda) RV. x. 18. 6, and found also in TA. (vi. 10. 1). RV. reads ṣṭhá after yáti in b, and ihá for tā́n vas in c, and its d is dīrghám ā́yuḥ karati jīváse vaḥ. TA. differs from RV. by having gṛṇānā́s in a, surátnas (for sajóṣās) in c, and karatu in d. Ppp. puts the verse after our 25, and combines in a–b vṛṇānā 'nu. The verse is used in Kāuç. 72. 13 with vss. 21, 32, 44, 55, and others from elsewhere.

25. As days take place (bhū) one after another, as seasons go along with seasons, as an after one does not desert (hā) a preceding — so, O creator (dhā́tṛ), arrange their life-times.

This verse is RV. x. 18. 5, found also in TA. (vi. 10. 1). For sākám, at end of b, RV. reads sādhú, and TA. kḷptā́ḥ.

26. The stony one flows (rī); take ye hold together; play the hero, pass over, O friends; quit here them that are of evil courses; may we pass up unto powers (? vā́ja) that are free from disease.

The verse is RV. x. 53. 8, and found also in VS. (xxxv. 10) and TA. (vi. 3. 2). RV. has út tiṣṭhata for vīráyadhvam in b, jahāma and (for durévās) áçevās in c, and çivā́n vayám (for anamīvā́n) in d. ⌊VS. agrees with RV. save that it accents sákhāyaḥ in b and reads, for c, átra jahīmó 'çivā yé ásan.⌋ TA. agrees in general with RV., but has revatīs ⌊unaccented⌋ for rīyate in a, and in d puts út tarema after abhí vā́jān. Vss. 26 and 27 are quoted in Kāuç. 71. 24 and 86. 27 to accompany the symbolical act of crossing over northward; and in Vāit. 12. 11 to accompany (at any time) the crossing of streams.

27. Stand up, pass over, O friends; the stony river here runs (syand); quit ye here them that are unpropitious; may we pass up unto propitious pleasant powers.

This variation of vs. 26 gives part of the RV. variants to that vs. ⌊For a discussion of the RV. verse, see notes to my Skt. Reader, p. 388.⌋ Ppp. makes b identical with 26 a. The use by Kāuç. was stated in the preceding note.

28. Take ye hold on that of all the gods in order to splendor, becoming cleansed, clear, purifying; stepping over difficult tracks, may we revel a hundred winters with all our heroes.

The first half-verse is identical with vi. 62. 3 a, b, save that the latter begins with vāiçvānarī́m. We have doubtless to supply nā́vam 'boat.' But Ppp. has sūnṛtām for varcase in a; and the comm. to Nirukta vi. 12 quotes the pratīka in this form, explaining sūnṛtām by vācam (Roth). According to Kāuç. 72. 6, it is a young heifer (vatsatarī) that is caused to be laid hold on.

29. By upward roads, full of wind, by distant (pára) ones, stepping over those that are lower (ávara), thrice seven times did the departed (páreta) seers bear back death with the track-obstructor.

Ppp. reads for b apakrāmanto duritaṁ parehi. In Kāuç. 71. 18 and 86. 21, this verse is quoted with vs. 22 'for the purpose expressed in the texts' (mantroktam); and in 71. 19 and in 86. 22 the second half-verse is quoted to accompany 'the effacement (lup) of the tracks to the streams.' ⌊W's "(lup)" was intended to express his doubt as to the warrantableness of Bloomfield's change of lup to yup. Caland expresses the same doubt, WZKM. viii. 369: cf. his Todtengebräuche, p. 120.⌋

30. Come ye, obstructing the track of death, assuming further on a longer life-time; sitting in your station, thrust ye [away] death; then may we, living, speak to the council.

The first half-verse is RV. x. 18. 2 a, b, and is found also in TA. (vi. 10. 2); for our é 'ta, RV. reads yád āíta, TA. yád āima (āima unaccented, unless there is a misprint ⌊Poona ed. rightly āíma, p. 444⌋); and TA. has pratarā́m in b. ⌊Cf. MGS. ii. 1. 13 and p. 153.⌋ The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 71. 20 and 86. 23 in connection with doing something to (symbolical) boats; and the second half-verse in Kāuç. 72. 10. Ppp. reads pratiram in b, and jīvās in d, thus in the latter pāda rectifying the meter. The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregularities in a and d, perhaps because they balance each other. ⌊As to vidáthan, cf. note to vs. 22, and Bloomfield in JAOS. xix.² 14.⌋

31. Let these women, not widows, well-spoused, touch themselves with ointment, with butter; tearless, without disease, with good treasures (-rátna), let the wives ascend first to the place of union (yóni).

This verse is repeated below, as xviii. 3. 57. It is RV. x. 18. 7, and found also in TA. (vi. 10. 2). RV. has viçantu, and TA. mṛçantām, for our spṛçantām in b, and TA. suçévās for surátnās in c; RV. also combines anaçrávo 'nam- in c. Ppp. reads saṁ viçanta in b; and it adds another corresponding verse for the men: ime vīrar avidhavās sujānayā narā "ñjanena sarpiṣā etc. (d) syonād yoner adhi talpaṁ vṛheyuḥ ⌊intending ruheyuḥ⌋. With our verse, in Kāuç. 72. 11, grass shoots dipped in butter are handed to the women; and 72. 12 appears to quote the Ppp. verse (the pratīka is given as ime jīvā avidhavāḥ sujāmayaḥ) to accompany a similar act to the men.

32. I separate (vy-ā-kṛ) these two by oblation; I shape them apart with a spell (bráhman); I make for the Fathers unwasting svadhā́; I unite these with a long life-time.

Ppp. reads for c sudhāṁ pitṛbhyo amṛtaṁ duhānā. From Vāit. 6. 2 the separation would appear to be that of the other two fires when taken from the householder's fire; but Kāuç. 70. 10 has it repeated while one looks upon the householder's and the flesh-eating fires; the latter is most likely to be its true application. It is also quoted in Kāuç. 72. 13 with several other verses, from this hymn and elsewhere, as noted under vs. 24.

33. What Agni, O Fathers, hath entered into our hearts, an immortal into mortals, that god do I enclose in me; let him not hate us, nor let us [hate] him.

Ppp. reads in b amartyas for amṛtas, and, in c, mahyaṁ taṁ prati gṛh-. The verse is found also in TS. (v. 7. 9^{1}) and MS. (i. 6. 1); both read, for b, ámartyo mártyāṅ āvivéça; for c, d, TS. has tám ātmán pári gṛhṇīmahe vayám mā́ só asmā́ṅ avahā́ya párā gāt, and MS. tám ātmáni pári gṛhṇīmasī 'há néd eṣó asmā́n avahā́ya parā́yat. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 70. 15 for recitation while the hearts are touched.

34. Having turned away from the householder's fire, go ye forth to the right with the flesh-eating one; do ye what is dear to the Fathers, to self, what is dear to the priests (brahmán).

Ppp. reads, for a, b, apāvartyā 'gniṁ gārhapatyaṁ kravyādā 'py etu dakṣiṇā; and, in d, kṛṇuta (not -tā). Kāuç. 71.4 quotes the verse, to accompany a corresponding action. ⌊Caland, Todtengebräuche, Note 417, would read krávyādaḥ, as voc.⌋

35. The flesh-eating Agni that is unremoved (á-nir-ā-hita), taking to himself the double-portioned riches of the oldest son, destroys [him] with ruin.

Ppp. begins with vibhā-; it omits our vs. 36.

36. What one plows, what one wins (van), and what one gains (vid) by pay (vasná) — all that is not a mortal's, if the flesh-eating one be unremoved.

As usual in such cases, in most of the mss. it is wholly doubtful whether vastena or -sne- or -sre- is intended in b; the true reading is vasnéna. The verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp. Bp. reads ásti at end of c.

37. He becomes unfit for sacrifice, of smitten splendor; not by him is the oblation to be eaten; [him] the flesh-eating one cuts off from plowing, kine, riches, whom it pursues.

Ppp. reads, in a, ye agnayo for ayajñiyó; and, in c, kṛṣṭiṁ gāṁ dhanaṁ. Bp. has in b ná : énena. The bhavati which spoils the meter of a is doubtless an intrusion ⌊although Ppp. also has it⌋.

38. A mortal, going down to mishap, speaks forth repeatedly with greedy ones (? gṛ́dhya); whom (pl.) the flesh-eating Agni, from near by, after-knowing, follows (? vi-tāv).

The translation is purely mechanical, the sense being wholly obscure. Nothing corresponding to vitā́vati is found anywhere else; the Pet. Lex. suggests emendation to vidhāvati; Ludwig, alternatively, to vitāmyati or vitāmati. Yet c, d are repeated below as 52 c, d (that verse is wanting in Ppp., which, however, has these two pādas in vs. 50). The much corrupted version of Ppp. gives no help as to the verse in general: bahu krudhīṣ pra vadanty anti tarmato 'nveti ca : kravyādam agnir ⌊intending kravyād yam ag-?⌋ anuvidvān vibhāvati (vitāvati?).

39. The houses are united with seizure (grā́hi) when a woman's husband dies; a knowing priest (brahmán) is to be sought, who shall remove the flesh-eating one.

Ppp. reads in b yat strīyāṁ mriyate. 'United' (in a), i.e. 'caused to be affected.'

40. What evil (riprá), pollution we have committed, and what ill-doing, from that let the waters cleanse me, and from the crushing Agni what.

The last clause seems a false construction, the true one being something like the version of Ppp.: agnis saṁkusikaç ca yaḥ; but Ludwig fills it out to "and [from that] which [arises] from Agni Saṁkasuka." ⌊As to the construction, see Caland as cited under vs. 19.⌋ ⌊As to saṁkasuka, cf. note to vs. 11.⌋ Ppp. further reads duritaṁ (for çamalam) in a; and it has çundhantu in c ⌊cf. note to vi. 115. 3 and the VS. variant there⌋. The Anukr. understands the verse as 6 + 8 : 8 + 8 = 30 syllables; but the pada-mss., less acceptably, mark the pāda division as occurring after cakṛmá. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 71. 16 and 86. 19 in company with others, as noted under vs. 13.

41. These fore-knowing ones (f.) have turned hither upward from below by roads that the gods go upon; upon the back of the virile (vṛṣabhá) mountain the ancient streams (sarít) go about new.

'Waters' (ā́pas) is doubtless to be supplied with the adjectives in a, b. Ppp. combines tā 'dharād at the beginning, and reads ṛṣabhasya in c. It is doubtless by a blunder (catasras for tisras) that the Anukr. appears to reckon this regular triṣṭubh to the anuṣṭubhs of the hymn. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 72. 3.

42. O non-flesh-eating Agni, push out the flesh-eating one; bring the god-sacrificing one.

The Anukr. scans this verse as 5 + 6 + 8 = 19 syllables, acknowledging the unelided a of akravyāt, and separating nuda ā́ dev-. The prose yajus (as it really is) is quoted in Kāuç. 69. 8 as accompanying the bringing of a light from the frying-pan (bhraṣṭra), and in 71. 8 with other verses, as noted under vs. 1 above. ⌊The first half-verse is defaced in Ppp.⌋

43. The flesh-eating one entered into this man; he has gone after the flesh-eating one; having made two tigers severally, I take him, who is other than propitious.

Ppp. reads pra viveça in a, and nānā 'haṁ in c. The verse is quoted, with others (see note to vs. 1), in Kāuç. 71. 8.

44. Concealment of the gods, defense (paridhí) of men (manuṣyà), the householder's fire is set (çritá) between both classes.

In accordance with the Anukr., the mss. interpose no stroke of interpunction in this verse, which plainly is not metrical, though the last 8 syllables read like an anuṣṭubh pāda. It is quoted, with others (see note to vs. 24), in Kāuç. 72. 13. Ppp. reads ubhayād in c. ⌊The medial avasāna is lacking in SPP. and should be deleted from the Berlin ed.⌋

45. Lengthen thou out, O Agni, the life-time of the living; let them who are dead go unto the world of the Fathers; do thou, a good householder's fire, burning away the niggard, assign to this man an ever better dawn.

Ppp. reads, for a, jīvānām agneṣ pratar dīrgham āyuṣ, and, in c, d, arātīr uṣām-uṣāṁ çrayaṁ çrayasi dadhat. Kāuç. and Vāit. quote as pratīka only the beginning of c;

this looks rather as if they made one verse of our 45 c, d and 46. In Kāuç. (71. 2) it accompanies setting down fuel on the householder's fire; in Vāit. (4. 8) it is used with one of the offerings of the sacrificer's wife. It (11 + 13 : 11 + 11 = 46) is very ill defined as simply a jagatī.

46. Overcoming, O Agni, all [our] rivals, do thou assign to us their refreshment [and] wealth.

The Anukr. agrees with the mss. in reckoning these two triṣṭubh pādas as a whole verse.

47. Take ye hold after this saving (pápri) carrier (váhni) Indra; he shall carry you out of difficulty [and] reproach; by him smite away the on-flying shaft; by him ward off (pari-pā) Rudra's hurled [missile].

Ppp. reads, for b, sa yo vidvān vijahāti mṛtyum; ⌊and its d is like ours⌋. The verse (13 + 11 : 11 + 11 = 46) is unintelligibly ill described by the Anukr. One of the four dissyllabic words in a is apparently an intrusion — perhaps most probably indram, since one does not see why Indra should make his appearance in this Agni hymn (but see vs. 54), and the epithet vahni belongs especially to Agni. In Kāuç. 72. 7 the verse is used (next after vs. 28) to accompany laying hold on a bull ⌊cf. introd. to iv. 22⌋.

48. Lay ye hold after the draft-ox [as] float (plavá); he shall carry you out of difficulty [and] reproach; mount this boat of Savitar; may we cross over misery by the six wide [directions].

This and the remaining verses of the hymn are given by Ppp. in the order 49–51, 54, 53, 55, 48 (52 being wanting). ⌊Cf. MGS. ii. 1. 14 and p. 146.⌋ In Kāuç. 72. 8, this verse and the next are used (next after vss. 28, 47) in laying hold on a couch (talpa); the third pāda in 71. 23 and 86. 26, in causing some one to embark on a (symbolical) boat containing gold and barley. There is no good reason for calling the verse bhurij.

49. Day-and-night thou goest after, bearing, standing comfortable (kṣemyá), prolonging [life], having good heroes; bearing, O couch, healthful (ánātura), well-minded ones (m.), do thou long be for us smelling of men (púruṣagandhi).

The description of the Anukr. seems to require us to resolve -ra-ā-tre in a. The use by Kāuç. was noticed under the preceding verse.

50. They fall under the wrath of the gods, they live always evilly, after whom the flesh-eating fire, from near by, like a horse, scatters reeds.

Ppp. reads in a deveṣu, and this is the usual and regular construction with ā-vraç. Further, for d it has our 38 d and 52 d. The Anukr. gives iva two syllables in d. Our Bp. reads antikā́n (instead of -kā́t) here and in 38 c and 52 c. ⌊One could easily scan d as an anuṣṭubh pāda, áçvevānvápate naḍám (Gram. § 233 a), if it were worth scanning.⌋

51. Whoever, without faith, from desire of riches then sit together with the flesh-eating one, they verily feed the fire (ā-dhā) about the pot (kumbhī́) of others ⌊always⌋.

That is, doubtless, never have a fire of their own. The pada-text in a–b is dhana°-kāmyā́ : ā́t : kravya°ádā; Ppp. has a different reading, -kāmyāṣ krav-, thus getting rid of the difficult ā́t. ⌊The mark of pāda division is after ā́t; it should be before it.⌋ The Anukr. seems to authorize the resolution ṣa-ām in c.

52. He desires, as it were, to fly forth with his mind; repeatedly he returns again — they whom the flesh-eating Agni, from near by, after-knowing follows.

We had the obscure second half-verse above as 38 c, d. The verse is wanting in Ppp., as already noted. The substitution of patati for pipatiṣati would rectify the meter of a. ⌊Pāda b seems clearly to refer to rebirth: cf. Praçna Upanishad, i. 9.⌋

53. A black ewe [is] of cattle [thy] portion; lead, too, they call thy gold (? candrá), O flesh-eating one; ground beans ⌊are⌋ thy portion [as] oblation; seek (sac) thou the thicket of the forest-spirit (araṇyānī́).

Ppp. reads (better) uta for api in b. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 71. 6 (with vss. 4 and 7: see note to vs. 4), and again in 71. 14, in connection with setting down the light (dīpa).

54. Having made offering of withered (? járat) cane (iṣīkā), of tilpíñja, of dáṇḍana, of reeds; having made fuel of this, Indra removed Yama's fire.

Various kinds of reed or cane are doubtless named in a, b. Jarant is lit. 'aged.' Ppp. reads in c tān indre 'dhmaṁ. The Anukr. does not note c as defective; we may resolve either índṛ-a or kṛtu-ā́. The verse is quoted (with vss. 1, 11, 55: see note to vs. 1) in Kāuç. 71. 5, to accompany the feeding of the flesh-eating fire.

55. Having sent in opposition an opposing (pratyáñc) song (arká), I, foreknowing, have entered abroad on the road; I have directed away the lifebreaths of them yonder; these here I unite with long life-time.

The first half-verse is difficult and doubtful. The use made of the verse by Kāuç. gives no help; it is quoted in 71. 5 as noted above, under vs. 54; and in 72. 13 with several other verses, as noted under vs. 24. Ppp. reads ācakāra at end of b. ⌊W. has overlooked the hí and the accent of the two perfects: perhaps, 'since I have entered [and] have directed . . . , [accordingly] I unite' etc. Henry, p. 238, inserts another hí after amī́ṣām.⌋

3. Cremation as a sacrifice.

[Yama.— ṣaṣṭiḥ. mantroktasvargāudanāgnidevatyam. trāiṣṭubham: 1, 42, 43, 47. bhurij; 8, 12, 21, 22, 24. jagatī; 13. ? ; 17. svarāḍ ārṣī pañkti; 34. virāḍgarbhā; 39. anuṣṭub-garbhā; 44. parābṛhatī; 55–60. 3-av. 7-p. çañkumaty atijāgataçākvarātiçākvaradhārtya-garbhā 'tidhṛti (55, 57–60. kṛti; 56. virāṭ kṛti).]

⌊Partly prose — namely parts of vss. 55–60.⌋ Found also ⌊except vs. 28⌋ in Pāipp. xvii. (with slight differences of verse-order, noted under the verses). Nearly all the verses of the hymn are used, according to Kāuç. 60–63, and on the whole in their natural order, and combined especially with xi. 1 (often a verse from each hymn being quoted in the same rule), in the sava ceremony; very few verses anywhere else. Vāit. quotes only 4 verses.

Translated: Henry, 195, 238; Griffith, ii. 110; Bloomfield, 185, 645.

1. Stand, a man (púmāṅs), upon men; go to the hide; call thither her who is dear to thee; of what age (? yā́vant) ye two first came together in the beginning, let that be your same age in Yama's realm.

Ppp. combines puṅso adhi and omits ihi in a. Kāuç. 60. 31 has the verse used when the sacrificer is made to stand upon the ox-hide which is to be his station during the ceremony. The various antecedents have been prepared to the accompaniment of the first verses of xi. 1.

2. So much [be] your sight, so many your powers (vīryà), so great your brilliancy (téjas), so many-fold your energies (vā́jina); Agni fastens on (sac) the body when [it is his] fuel (?); then, O paired ones (mithuná), shall ye come into being from what is cooked (pakvá).

The pada-text has yadā́ : édhaḥ in c, as translated. Ppp. reads before it agniṁ çarīraṁ sajate, and after it atha; and in a, b it makes cakṣus and tejas change places. ⌊In OB. v. 258, pakvá is defined as 'the charred remains and ashes of a corpse.' Pāda d recurs in vs. 9.⌋ ⌊W. makes a query on the margin: "the husband and wife burnt together?? and born anew and alike out of the cremation?"⌋

3. Together in this world, together on the [road] the gods travel, together also unite ye (du.) in the realms of Yama; purified by purifiers, call ye to yourselves whatever seed (rétas) came into being from you.

All the mss. agree in the unaccented asmin in a. The verse appears to be quoted (as 'third verse') in Kāuç. 60. 33, to accompany a calling upon their offspring (apatya).

4. Enter together, ye sons, into the waters, coming together, ye rich in life, unto this living one (m.); of them (f.) share ye the one which (m.) they call immortal, the rice-dish which your (du.) generatrix cooks.

The meaning and connection are very obscure. 'Of them' seems to refer to the waters (f.). Ppp. removes one difficulty by reading vas instead of vām in d; it has in b ⌊-dhanyāt⌋ sametā ⌊cf. vs. 25⌋. In Kāuç. 60. 35 the verse is used when the pair lie down together, accompanied by their offspring, after a vessel of water has been set on the hide.

5. What one your (du.) father cooks, and what one [your] mother, in order to release from evil (ripré) and from pollution of speech — that hundred-streamed, heaven-going rice-dish hath permeated (vi-āp) with greatness both firmaments (nábhas).

Ppp. reads at the beginning yaṁ vaṣ pitā.

6. Both firmaments, and worlds of both kinds, what heaven-going ones are conquered of the sacrificers — which one of them is chiefly (? ágre) full of light, full of honey, in that combine ye (du.) with your sons in old age.

Ppp. combines in c yo 'gre, and part of our mss. (P.M.W.T.) read the same.

7. Take ye (du.) hold upon each forward direction; to this world they that have faith attach themselves (sac); what of you that is cooked is served up in the fire, combine ye, O husband-and-wife, in order to its guarding.

The verse is nearly accordant with vi. 122. 3. 'Forward' (prā́ñc) is also 'eastern.' ⌊Note here again the sequence of the cardinal points (pradakṣiṇa), and cf. end of introd. to iii. 26.⌋ The Anukr. passes the irregularity of the second half-verse (11 + 11 : 10 + 12 = 44) without notice. Kāuç. 61. 1 quotes this verse alone; and 61. 2 quotes 7-10 as used while they follow around the vessel of water. Ppp. reads, for c, d, as follows: mimāthāṁ pātṛ tad vāṁ pūrṇam astu çivāṁ pakvaṣ pitryāyaṇe 'ty ('bhy ?) āmayat.

8. Attaining unto the southern quarter, turn ye (du.) about unto this vessel; in it shall Yama, in concord with the Fathers, assure abundant protection unto your cooked [offering].

'In it': i.e., as the gender shows, in the vessel. Some of our mss. make very bad work with vām in c, reading vāyám (P.M.W.), vayám (Bs.s.m.), varā́m (R.), vāṁ yam (T.). It is absurd of the Anukr. to reckon the verse (11 + 11 : 12 + 11 = 45) a jagatī.

9. This western of the quarters verily is a thing to be preferred, in which Soma is over-ruler and favorer; to it resort (çri) ye (du.); attach yourselves to the well-doers; then, O paired ones, shall ye come into being from what is cooked.

The last pāda is identical with 2 d above. But Ppp. reads instead adhā pakvena saha saṁ bhavema, which is nearly identical with vi. 119. 2 d and the concluding pāda of 55-60 below. The Anukr. takes no notice of the deficiency of the first pāda.

10. A superior realm, having superiority by progeny, may the northern of the quarters make our (pl.) apex (? ágra); a five-fold (pā́ñta) meter hath the man become; may we come into being together with all, having all their limbs.

Ppp. reads pañktiç chandaṣ at the beginning of c. We have to resolve pa-āñ- in order to make a full pāda.

11. This fixed [quarter] is virā́j; homage be to it; let it be propitious to [my] sons and to me; do thou, O goddess Aditi, having all choice things, like an active herdsman defend our cooked [offering].

The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 61. 3, next after the four preceding ones.

12. Do thou embrace us, as a father his sons; let propitious winds blow here for us on the earth; what rice-dish the two deities cook here, let that know our penance and also truth.

Ppp. reads çagdā for bhūmāu in b, and vittam for vettu at the end. 'That' (tát) in d is neuter, and so not correlative to 'what' (yám m.) in c. P.M.W. read svaja naḥ at end of a. The verse lacks two syllables of being a good jagatī. ⌊The verse is quoted at Kāuç. 61. 4.⌋

13. Whenever the black bird, coming hither, hath sat upon the orifice, surprising (tsar) what is resolved (vi-sañj), or when the barbarian woman (dāsī́) with wet hands smears over — cleanse, ye waters, the mortar [and] pestle.

Ppp. combines in a çakune ’ha, and reads in c dāsī vā yad, and in d ⌊cf. vss. 21 and 26 and note to vi. 115. 3⌋ çundhatā ’’paḥ. Kāuç. quotes the verse in 8. 14, and the comm. also under 2. 6, but they cast no light on the obscure first half-verse. The verse is a good triṣṭubh, yet the Anukr. attempts to give it some special description, of which the text is corrupt and unintelligible (yad-yat kṛṣṇa ity āthā).

14. Let this pressing-stone, broad-based, vigor-bestowing, purified by purifiers, smite away the demon; mount thou the hide; yield great protection; let not the husband-and-wife fall into evil proceeding from sons (pāútra).

Ppp. has at the end gāthām, with which, of course, dampatī would have to be understood as vocative, unaccented. Expressions like that in d are found in several of the Sūtras: in AGS. i. 13. 7, mā ’ham pāutram aghaṁ ni yām (should be gām, probably); in PGS. i. 5. 11, yathe ’yaṁ strī pāutram aghaṁ na rodāt; and the same in HGS. i. 19. 7, with pāutram ānandam as antithesis to it. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 61. 18 (in connection with xi. 1. 9), to accompany the setting of mortar, pestle, and winnowing basket, after sprinkling, upon the hide.

15. The forest tree hath come to us together with the gods, forcing off the demon, the piçācás; he shall rise up (ut-çri), shall speak forth his voice; with him may we conquer all worlds.

Ppp. reads and combines sāu ’cchrāyātāi in c, and reads api for abhi in d. According to Kāuç. 61. 21, one sets up the pestle with this verse; in 125. 3 the verse is used with reference to the sacrificial post ⌊in case it puts forth fresh shoots⌋; and similarly in Vāit. 10. 8 ⌊in the paçubandha⌋.

16. Seven sacrifices (médha) the cattle enclosed — which ⌊the relative pronoun⌋ of them was full of light, and which was pining; to them thirty deities attach themselves; do thou (m.) conduct us (pl.) unto the heavenly (svargá) world.

Our Bp. reads tā́m in c, and a few of the saṁhitā-mss. (P.M.W.E.) agree with it; tā́m is certainly wrong, but tám would be an acceptable improvement. Ppp. has medhasvān instead of jyotiṣmān (and the latter must be taken as having the sense of the former); also cakarṣa in b, and neṣi in d. ⌊For neṣa, see Gram. § 896.⌋ The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 61. 13, to accompany the handling or stroking of something by the two spouses ⌊with their offspring⌋. Pāda b has a redundant syllable, unnoticed by the Anukr., unless we contract to yāi ’ṣām.

17. Unto the heavenly world shalt thou conduct us (pl.); may we be united with wife, with sons; I grasp [her (?)] hand; let her (?) come here after me; let not destruction pass us, nor the niggard.

The last pāda is nearly the same with vi. 124. 3 d; cf. also ii. 7. 4 c, d. Ppp. ends d with no ’rātiḥ. The verse is a good triṣṭubh, and its description by the Anukr. is absurd. Kāuç. 61. 14 uses the latter half-verse, not in a way to cast light on its meaning.

18. The seizure (gráhi), evil (pāpmán)—may we go beyond them (pl.); dissipate thou the darkness; mayest thou speak forth what is agreeable; made of forest tree, uplifted, do not injure; do not crush to pieces ⌊vi-çṛ⌋ the god-loving rice-grain.

Jihiṅsīr in c is a misprint for jíhiṅsīr, which all the ⌊i.e. W's⌋ mss. read. ⌊So read 9 of SPP's authorities: and 4 have jáhiṅsīs; but SPP. prints jihiṅsīs, accentless, with 3 of his mss. Perhaps the accent is to be regarded as antithetical.⌋ A part of our mss. (O.T.K.D.R.p.m.) read çarīs in d; Ppp. has çarāis ⌊see the references under vi. 32. 2⌋. The verse (with xi. 1. 9 b) accompanies in Kāuç. 61. 22 the pounding with the pestle.

19. About to become all-expanded, ghee-backed, go thou, of like origin (sáyoni), unto that world; hand thou (upa-yam) the rain-increased sieve; let that winnow away the husk, the chaff.

The first half-verse is identical with 53 c, d below. Some mss. (I.O.D.K.: also half of the Kāuç. mss.) read palā́vām in d. Ppp. has vidvān instead of etam in b. With c, according to Kāuç. 61. 23, the çūrpa is grasped; with a (or the whole verse?), according to 24, it is raised; with d, according to 25, the sifting is done. The third pāda lacks a syllable, unless we may resolve çu-úrpam. ⌊For "sieve," here and in vs. 20, read rather "winnowing-basket"?⌋

20. The three worlds are commensurate with the bráhmaṇa: yon heaven, namely, earth, atmosphere; having seized the [soma-]stalks, take ye (du.) hold after; let them swell up (ā-pyā); let them come again to the sieve.

All our mss. (except D.) read asāu, unaccented, in b; emendation to asāú was plainly necessary. All the saṁhitā-mss. (except E.) separate in c gṛbhītvā́ anv-, which, accordingly, might perhaps as well have been left, though the Prāt. does not recognize the case of irregular hiatus. Ppp. seems to combine the two words in the usual fashion; but it has -rabhetām; also, in b, pṛthivyām ant-. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 61. 27 in connection with touching the winnowed grains (?); and, in 28, the last words of d (punar etc.), with scattering them, apparently, again on the sieve.

21. Manifoldly separate [are] the forms of cattle; thou becomest one-formed together with success; that red skin—that thrust thou [away]; the pressing-stone shall cleanse like a fuller (? malagá) the garments.

Or b may be 'thou comest into being one-formed with success.' Malagá occurs nowhere else; its use with iva makes it impossible to tell whether the pada-text would divide mala॰gaḥ. Ppp. reads bhavati in b and malagāi 'va in d. ⌊Again, as in vss. 13 and 26, it reads çundhāti for çumbhāti: cf. note to vi. 115. 3.⌋ The quotation in Kāuç. 61. 26 casts no light on the meaning. Our text ought to read sámṛddhyā at end of b. The verse is very ill named jagatī by the Anukr.; the treatment of iva in d as only one syllable makes a regular triṣṭubh of it.

22. Thee that art earth I make enter into earth; this like body of thee [is] separated; whatever of thee is burnt (? dyuttá), [or] scratched by driving (árpaṇa); with that do not leak; I cover that over by a spell (bráhman).

Ppp. reads, for a, bhūmyāṁ bhūmim adhi dhārayāmi; in c, arpaṇaṁ ca; in d, çuçror apa tad, thus restoring the meter. The verse (12 + 11 : 11 + 13 = 47) is very ill defined simply as a jagatī. In Kāuç. 61. 30, the verse accompanies the smearing of a vessel (kumbhī); in Vāit. 28. 12, the fashioning of a kettle.

23. Mayest thou welcome as a mother a son; I unite (sam-dhā) thee that art earth with the earth; a kettle, a vessel, do not stagger upon the sacrificial hearth, overhung by the implements of offering [and] by sacrificial butter.

The first pāda is apparently addressed to the earth, differently from the others. Ppp. puts the verse before our vs. 22, and reads in c kumbhīr vedyāṁ saṁ carantāṁ. One or two of our mss. (Bs.O.) read uṣā́ in c.

24. Let Agni, cooking, defend thee on the east; let Indra, with the Maruts, defend on the south; may Varuṇa fix thee in the maintenance (dharúṇa) of the western [quarter]; on the north may Soma give thee together.

Ppp. corrects the meter of b by reading rakṣāt; and that of d by having varuṇas instead of somas. The verse is irregular, but by no means a jagatī. ⌊If we make varuṇas and somas exchange places, as suggested by Ppp., and read rakṣāt with Ppp., the vs. becomes a good triṣṭubh.⌋ In Kāuç. 61. 32 it is used when arranging the fire about the kettle.

25. Purified with purifiers, they purify themselves from the cloud; they go both to heaven and to earth [as their] worlds; them, lively, rich in life, firm-standing, poured into the vessel (pā́tra), let the fire kindle about.

Ppp. puts the verse after our vs. 26, and reads at end of b dharmaṇā (cf. RV. x. 16. 3 b), and in c, d jīvadhānyāt sametā ⌊cf. vs. 4⌋ pā́trā ’siktāt. The verse is defective by a syllable in a, but the Anukr. passes this without notice. Kāuç. 61. 34 quotes the verse to accompany putting into the strainer.

26. They come from the sky, they fasten on (sac) the earth; from the earth they fasten upon the atmosphere; being cleansed, they just cleanse themselves; let them conduct us to the heavenly world.

The accent of çúmbhante in c is unmotived. Ppp. reads ⌊cf. vss. 13 and 21 and note to vi. 115. 3⌋ çundhanti, which (or çumbhanti) is decidedly preferable. That the reading in a is diváḥ p- is noted in the comm. to Prāt. ii. 68.

27. Both as it were prevailing (prabhú) and also commensurate, also bright and clean, immortal — as such do ye, O waters, directed, helping, cook the rich-dish for the two spouses, ye of good refuge.

The translation implies in d emendation of āpaḥ‿çíkṣantīḥ to ā́paḥ çíkṣ-, the former seeming wholly unacceptable. Ppp. combines and reads praçiṣṭā ’pas sīkṣ-. Our text reads with the mss.

28. The numbered drops (stoká) fasten on the earth, being commensurate with breaths-and-expirations, with herbs; being scattered on, unnumbered, of good color, the clean ones have obtained all cleanness.

This verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp. It is quoted in Kāuç. 61. 36 to accompany the scattering in of the rice-grains after washing.

29. They struggle up (ud-yudh), they dance on, being heated; they hurl foam and abundant drops (bindú); like a woman that is in her season, seeing her husband, unite yourselves, O waters, with these rice-grains.

The translation assumes the emendation, made in our edited text, of ṛ́tviyā yā́, for the ṛ́tviyāya of all the mss. ⌊See SPP's note on this matter, p. 231. He says ṛtviya = māithuna.⌋ Ppp. reads ṛtviyāvāis tāis taṇḍ-. In Kāuç. 61. 37 the verse accompanies the making of the water to boil.

30. Make thou them stand up, as they sit on the bottom; let them touch themselves all over with the waters; I have measured with vessels (pā́tra) the water that is here; measured are the rice-grains that are these directions.

The last pāda is translated as if yádīmā́ḥ (p. yádi imā́ḥ) were meant as equivalent to yád imā́ḥ, corresponding to the yád etát of c. Ppp. has sṛjantām at end of b.

⌊Here, at the end of a decad-division, ends the twenty-sixth prapāṭhaka.⌋

31. Reach thou forth the sickle (párçu), hasten, take [it] quickly; let them, not harming, cut (dā) the herbs at the joint; they of whom Soma compassed the kingship — let the plants be without wrath toward us.

One or two of our mss. read in a páraçum (M.W.; O. párárçum); and, as usual, some (O.D.R.) accent rā́jyam in c. Ppp. has harantu for harāu 'ṣam in a; and, in c, somo yāsām. Amanyutāḥ is undivided in the pada-text. In Kāuç. 61. 38 the first pāda is used with handing over the sickle for gathering the darbha-grass; the second pāda,* in 61. 39, with cutting it above the joints; and in 1. 24, 25 both for a similar purpose; so also the first pāda (or the verse) in 8. 11; and yet again both in the comm. to 137. 4. *⌊Quoted as oṣadhīr dāntu parvan at i. 25 and 61. 39. According to Daç. Kar. (note to 137. 4), the quotation pra yacha parçum covers a pāda and a half, that is, it includes the ahiṅsantas which is omitted in the quotation of b.⌋

32. Strew ye a new barhís for the rice-dish; be it dear to the heart, agreeable to the eye; on it let the gods [and] the divine ones (f.) settle (viç) together; sitting down (ni-sad), let them partake of this with the seasons.

The mss. read in b priyā́m, but our text makes the unavoidable emendation to -yám. Some of the mss. also are bothered over the unusual combination lgva in b: ⌊thus Bs. has vaglàv astu;⌋ R. valgáv astu; T. valgvustu. And again, in d, Bs. reads -çnan ṝt-, and O.s.m.R. -çnanty ṛt-. The verse accompanies in Kāuç. 61. 40 the strewing of the barhis.

33. O forest tree, sit on the strewn barhís, being commensurate with the Agni-praises (agniṣṭomá), with the deities; like a form well made by an artisan (tváṣṭṛ) with a knife, so (enā́) let the eager ones be seen round about in the vessel (pā́tra).

Bp. and Bs.s.m. read svádhiyā at end of c. The anomalous hiatus enā́ (p. enā́) ehā́ḥ is noted in Prāt. iii. 34. Ppp. reads svadhityāināhyāṣ pari pātre dadṛçyām, which is welcome as ridding us of the wholly unsupported form dadṛçrām; ⌊cf. Gram. § 813⌋. In Kāuç. 61. 43, the verse accompanies the setting of a vessel (pātrī) upon the barhis; in Vāit. 10. 7, the laying of the sacrificial post upon the same (the editor of Kāuç. regards it as quoted also in 15. 11, but the verse there intended must be rather vi. 125. 1).

34. In sixty autumns may he (?) seek unto the treasure-keepers; may he attain unto the sky with the cooked [offering]; may both fathers [and] sons live upon him; make thou this one to go unto the heaven-going end of the fire.

The last pāda admits of various other constructions. Both here and in vs. 41 (where pāda a is repeated) Bp. reads at the beginning çaṣṭhyā́m. In c, O.p.m.R. accent jīvā́n. Ppp. puts the verse after our vs. 35, and reads, for a, ṣaṣṭyāṁ çaradbhyaṣ paridadhma enam; for c, upāi 'naṁ putrān pitaraç ca sīdām; in d, imam for etam. There is no reason why the Anukr. should regard the verse as anything but a regular triṣṭubh. In Kāuç. 62. 9 it accompanies the setting down of the rice-dish westward from the fire.

35. A maintainer, maintain thyself in the maintenance of the earth; thee that art unmoved let the deities make to move (cyu); thee shall the two spouses, living, having living sons, cause to remove (ud-vas) out of the fire-holder.

Ppp. combines -vyā 'cyutam in a–b, omits the meter-disturbing (and probably intrusive) tvā of c, reads in c -putrā, and in d ud vāsayāthaṣ p-. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in our c. In Kāuç. 61. 41, the verse accompanies the removal of the vessel; in Vāit. 10. 9, the insertion of the end of the sacrificial post in the ground.

36. Thou hast come together unto all the worlds, having conquered; however many [be] the desires, thou hast made them wholly satisfied; plunge ye (du.) in — both the stirring-stick [and] the spoon; take thou him up upon one vessel.

This obscure verse wins no light from Kāuç. (62. 1), which says simply iti mantroktam, connecting it with xi. 1. 24. Some of our mss. (P.M.W.T.) read abhí for ádhi in d. We should expect in c gāhetām, as the nouns are not vocative. Ppp. reads in a samāgān abhicikya, and in b kāmān samitāu purastāt. ⌊See p. lxxxviii.⌋

37. Strew thou on, spread forward, smear over with ghee this vessel; as a lowing cow (usrā́) [toward] a young [calf] desiring the teat, do ye, O gods, utter the sound hing toward this one.

'Strew on': i.e., specifically, make an upastaraṇa or covering of butter. In Ppp. the second half-verse is wholly corrupt. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 61. 45, as accompanying the operation described, and the next verse is added in 61. 46 when the operation is completed.

38. Thou hast strewn on, hast made that world; let the broad unequalled heavenly world (svargá) spread itself out; to it shall resort (çri) the mighty eagle; the gods shall reach him forth to the deities.

Ppp. begins with apāskārāir, and makes çrayātāi and suparṇas change places in c.

39. What in any case thy wife cooks beyond thee, or thy husband, O wife, in secret from thee, that do ye unite; that be yours together; agreeing (? sampāday-) together upon one world.

Kāuç. 62. 11 quotes the verse (iti mantroktam), but casts no light upon it. ⌊Has a second pácati fallen out after jāye?⌋

40. How many of her fasten on (sac) the earth, what sons came forth into being from us (pl.) — all those do ye (du.) call to you in the vessel; knowing the navel, the young ones (çíçu) shall come together.

The mss. (excepting R.D.) leave sacante in a unaccented. Ppp. reads after it 'smat. The verse, especially the first pāda, is obscure. 'Navel' = 'central point, place of union.' The Anukr. does not heed the deficiency of a syllable in c; it means us, perhaps, to resolve ta-ā́n.

41. What streams (dhā́rā) of good (vásu) [there are], fattened with honey, mixed with ghee, navels of immortality — all those doth the heaven-goer (? svargá) take possession of; in sixty autumns may he seek unto the treasure-keepers.

The last and obscurest pāda is identical with 34 a. The Anukr. perhaps accepts the redundant syllable of b and the deficient of c as balancing each other. The verse is used, with 44 below, in Kāuç. 62. 18, to accompany the further pouring in of juices. Ppp. reads samaktās for prapīnās in a, and dhāmayas at end of b, and combines -pā 'bh- in d.

42. He shall seek unto it, [as] treasure-keepers unto a treasure; let those who are others be not lords (ánīçvara) about; given by us, deposited, heaven-going, with three divisions it has ascended to three heavens (svargá).

Ppp. again combines in a -pā 'bhy. Kāuç. 62. 10 makes the verse accompany the division of the rice-dish into three parts. There is no reason for calling it bhurij, as the Anukr. does.

43. Let Agni burn the demon that is godless; let the flesh-eating piçācá not have a draught here; we thrust him, we bar him away from us; let the Ādityas, the Añgirases, fasten on him.

Doubtless we should emend to rundhmas in c. Ppp. reads in d ādityā no añg-, thus rectifying the meter. The Anukr. notices this time the redundance of the pāda. Doubtless, as often elsewhere, we are to contract to ādityāt 'nam. In Kāuç. 62. 14 the verse is made to accompany the carrying of fire around the offering. ⌊BR. render the force of pra by defining pra-pā as 'sich an's Trinken machen.'⌋

44. To the Ādityas, the Añgirases, I announce this honey mingled with ghee; with cleansed hands, not smiting down [anything of] the Brahman's, go ye (du.), O well-doers, unto this heavenly world (svargá).

The description by the Anukr. is quite wrong. The use by Kāuç. 62. 18 was noted above, under vs. 41. ⌊For the use of the genitive, W. has noted a reference to Delbrück's Altindische Syntax, p. 161.⌋

45. I have obtained this highest division of it, from which world the most exalted one obtained [it] completely; pour thou on the butter (sarpís); anoint with ghee; this is the portion of our Aṅgiras here.

Ppp. has in a a different order of words: idaṁ kāṇḍam uttamaṁ prāpam asya. The verse (with xi. 1. 31: the first half of each) is quoted in Kāuç. 62. 15, and again (the second half of each) in 62. 17, in connection with anointing the vessel with butter.

46. Unto truth, unto penance, and unto the deities, we deliver this deposit (nidhí), [this] treasure (çevadhí); let it not be lost (ava-gā) in our play, nor in the meeting; do not ye release it to another in preference to (purā́) me.

One or two of our mss. (R.D.) accent at the end mā́t; and the word is not found without accent unless here and at xi. 4. 26. ⌊SPP. reads mā́t with 8 of his authorities, against 7 that have mat.⌋ Ppp. reads in b dadhmas. This and the two following verses are quoted, with a number of others, in Kāuç. 68. 27, at a later point in the rice-dish ceremony. ⌊With c, cf. 52 a.⌋

47. I cook; I give; verily upon my action [and] deed (? karúṇa) the wife; a virgin (? kāúmāra) world hath been born, a son; take ye (du.) hold after vigor (váyas) that hath what is superior.

The translation here is purely mechanical. Ppp. puts the verse after our vs. 48, and reads in a, for dadāmi, ud vadāmi ⌊thus suggesting the probably correct restoration of the pāda (aham u dadāmi)⌋, and in c putrās. The verse (10 + 11 : 11 + 11 = 43) is very ill described by the Anukr.

48. No offense is here, nor support (? ādhārá), nor that one goes agreeing (sam-am) with friends; this vessel of ours is set down not empty; the cooked [dish] shall enter again him that cooked it.

This verse is little more intelligible than the preceding. Ppp. puts c after d, and reads at the end of c astu instead of etat. ⌊It is hardly worth while to discuss the accent of ásti.⌋

49. May we do what is dear to them that are dear; whosoever hate [us], let them go to darkness; milch-cow, draft-ox, each coming vigor (váyas) — let them thrust away the death that comes from men.

Or, 'that concerns, comes upon, men' (pāúruṣeya). The Anukr. seems to accept the two redundant syllables of c (evá an intrusion) as compensating for the deficiency in a. According to Kāuç. 62. 19, the verse is used of 'the milch-cow etc.' north of the fire.

50. The fires are in concord, one with another — he that fastens on the herbs, and he that [fastens on] the rivers; as many gods as send heat (ā-tap) in the sky — gold hath become the light of him that cooks.

Ppp. reads sindhum in b, and *dadhatu (for pacatas) in d. In Kāuç. 62. 22, the verse (with xi. 1. 28) is made to accompany the laying on of a piece of gold; it is also quoted in 68. 27, with vss. 46–48, etc.: see note to vs. 46. The Anukr. does not notice the lack of a syllable in a. *⌊Intending dadhato ?⌋

51. This one of skins (tvác) hath come into being on man; not naked are all the animals (paçú) that are other; ye (du.) cause to wrap (paridhā) yourselves (ātmán) with authority (kṣatrá), a home-woven garment, the mouth of the rice-dish.

The translation is as literal as possible; but other constructions may be made in the second half-verse. Ppp. leaves the hiatus between a and b, babhūva an-; it combines -gnās sarve in b; and it reads in c dhāpayeta, with a division-line after it. Kāuç. 62. 23 makes the verse accompany the depositing of such a garment, with gold. ⌊Has the vs. anything to do with the legend, cited under ii. 13. 3, about the cow and her skin, which the gods took from man and gave to the cow?⌋

52. What [untruth] thou shalt speak at the dice, what at the meeting, or what untruth thou shalt speak from desire of gain — clothing yourselves (du.) in the same web (tántu), ye shall settle in it all pollution.

Ppp. rectifies the meter of a by reading vadasi ; in b it has dhane instead of vadās ; in c it gives saha for abhi. The Anukr. does not notice the deficiency in a. The verse is quoted in Kāuç. 63. 1 (next after vs. 51), with the explanation 'the two become dressed in the same garment.' ⌊With a, cf. 46 c.⌋

53. Win thou rain; go unto the gods; thou shalt make smoke fly up out of the skin; about to become all-expanded, ghee-backed, go thou, of like origin, unto that world.

The second half-verse is identical with 19 a, b above. Ppp. begins b with tatas instead of tvacas ; and it has a different second half: viçvavyacā viçvakarmā svargas sayoniṁ lokam upa yāhy ekam, which seems less unintelligible. In Kāuç. 63. 5 the verse is quoted (together with xi. 1. 28 b) with the direction 'he draws off [the garment?].'

54. The heaven-goer hath variously changed his body, as he finds (? vidé) in himself one of another color; he hath conquered off the black one, purifying a shining one (rúçat); the one that is red, that I offer (hu) to thee in the fire.

The adjectives here are all fem., relating to 'body' (tanū́). The defective meter of b helps to make the isolated ⌊or rather, unusual?⌋ vidé ⌊see Gram. § 613⌋ suspicious; the Anukr. takes no notice of the deficiency. The first half-verse is corrupt in Ppp., so that the comparison gives us no help. In Kāuç. 63. 8 the verse accompanies the scattering on of other husks (phalīkaraṇān). ⌊For the form ajāit, see the references under vi. 32. 2.⌋

55. To the eastern quarter, to Agni as overlord, to the black [serpent] as defender, to Āditya having arrows, we commit thee here; guard ye him for us until our coming; may he lead on our appointed [life-time] here unto old age; let old age commit us unto death; then may we be united with the cooked [offering].

⌊Vss. 55–60 are partly unmetrical.⌋ We are surprised to find the pause before instead of after the phrase etám pári dadmaḥ. With the items in the first division of these verses are to be compared the corresponding ones in iii. 27. 1–6. The concluding pāda of the metrical refrain is identical with vi. 119. 2 d. The pada-reading at the end of the prose is ā́ : asmā́kam : ā́°etoḥ. In every verse, Ppp. omits tvā before diçé (an improvement) and reads dadhmas for dadmas. In the refrain ⌊of every verse, apparently⌋, it has dadhātv adhā for dadātv atha. In this verse it combines diçe agnaye. The metrical description of the Anukr. is very puzzling; the part common to all the verses is 6 + 10 : 11 + 11 + 11 = 49 syllables; then the varying parts range ⌊with some resolutions⌋ from 25 to 31 syllables: all together, from 74 to 80 syllables; and atidhṛti is regularly 76, and kṛti 80; but the Anukr., after calling all atidhṛti, appears to call all but one kṛti. The verses are quoted in Kāuç. 63. 22, in connection with the rest of the hymn.

56. To the southern quarter, to Indra as overlord, to the cross-lined [serpent] as defender, to Yama having arrows, we commit thee here; guard ye etc. etc.

57. To the western quarter, to Varuṇa as overlord, to the pṛ́dāku as defender, to food having arrows, we commit thee here; guard ye etc. etc.

58. To the northern quarter, to Soma as overlord, to the constrictor as defender, to the thunderbolt having arrows, we commit thee here; guard ye etc. etc.

Our edition follows all the mss. in accenting rakṣitré 'çányāi; it should be, of course, -trè.

59. To the fixed quarter, to Vishṇu as overlord, to the spotted-necked [serpent] as defender, to the herbs having arrows, we commit thee here; guard ye etc. etc.

Ppp. reads vīrudbhyas for oṣadhībhyas.

60. To the upward quarter, to Brihaspati as overlord, to the white [serpent] as defender, to rain having arrows, we commit thee here; guard ye etc. etc.

⌊Here ends the third anuvāka, with 1 hymn and 60 verses. The quoted Anukr. says svargaḥ ṣaṣṭiḥ, i.e., 'the svarga[-hymn] is sixty.' The stem svarga, in one form or another, occurs a dozen times in the hymn.⌋

4. The cow (vaçā́) as belonging exclusively to the Brahmans.

[Kaçyapa. — tripañcāçat. mantroktavaçādevatyam. ānuṣṭubham: 7. bhurij; 20. virāj; 32. uṣṇigbṛhatīgarbhā; 42. bṛhatīgarbhā.]

Found also in Pāipp. xvii. (with slight differences of verse-order ⌊4, 6, 5, 8, 7, 9 and 17, 19, 18, 20⌋). Not noticed at all in Vāit., and in Kāuç. only once, in 66. 20, where, with x. 10, it (or the first verse) is to be spoken by the giver of a cow, after sprinkling etc.

Translated: Ludwig, p. 448; Henry, 203, 248; Griffith, ii. 120; Bloomfield, 174, 656.

1. I give [her] — thus should he say, if they have noticed (? anu-budh) her — [I give] the cow (vaçā́) to the priests (brahmán) that ask for her; that brings progeny, descendants.

Perhaps ánu ábhutsata is rather 'have recognized': i.e., have made her out to be the kind of cow that is called vaçā́; or there may be in it something of the meaning of anu-jñā: 'have approved, or taken a liking to.' ⌊Cf. MGS. i. 8. 6 and p. 150.⌋

2. He bargains away his progeny and becomes exhausted of cattle who is not willing to give the cow (gó) of the gods to the sons of seers that ask for her.

3. By a hornless one they are crushed for him; by a lame one he falls (? ard) into a pit; by a crippled one his houses are burned; by a one-eyed one his possessions are taken away (?).

The adjectives are feminine, and the sense doubtless is that as the result of giving such defective cows the thing threatened will happen. In a, probably the subject to be understood is gṛhā́s, as in c; b and c have perhaps become transposed — and, in that case, svám might be the subject also of árdati. ⌊Ppp. has kāṭam, like the Vulgate.⌋ The translation of d implies emendation (which seems advisable ⌊cf. W. in AJP. xiii. 302⌋) of kāṇáyā to kāṇáyā́: i.e. kāṇáyā : ā́ : dīyate. Ppp. has jīyate 'is harmed,' which would remove the difficulty. ⌊On kūṭá, see von Bradke, KZ. xxxiv. 157.⌋

4. Anæmia (vilohitá) from the station of the dung visits (vid) the master of kine; so is the agreement (?) of the cow; for door-damaging (?) art thou called.

Nearly everything in the second half-verse is doubtful. The majority of our mss. read sáṁvidyam (p. sáṁ°vidyam), but sā́ṁ- instead is given by M.s.m.O.s.m. and D.; and in R. sā́ṁ- is emended to sāṁ-. Sā́ṁvidya seems a much more probable form of stem. The Pet. Lexx. render 'possession,' which is very unsatisfactory. Duradabhnā́ (also in vs. 19) seems pretty clearly the reading of nearly all our mss. in c, though it might, as usual in such cases, be -bhrā́ in most; Bp. has (both times) apparently -bhdnā, and O. ⌊in vs. 4⌋ -bdnā or -b-h-nā (the b and h separate letters, as again below in xiii. 1. 25 c). The word is not divided in the pada-text. The translation given is ⌊suggested by⌋ that of the Pet. Lexx.; Ludwig renders here 'unbetrieglich' (undeceivable), but leaves the word untranslated in vs. 19. The second person ucyáse is quite unexpected; ⌊most of our⌋ saṁhitā-mss. read hy ù3cyáse; ⌊and SPP's are much at variance⌋. ⌊As alternative rendering in a, b, W. notes 'from standing on her dung.'⌋ Ppp. reads, in c, d, svāṁ vidyuṁ duritagrāhy uccase.

5. From the station of the two feet of her, soaking (? viklíndu) namely visits [him]; unexpectedly (?) are they crushed who snuff at her with the mouth.

Here, too, much is obscure and doubtful. The first part might be: 'From the station of her ⌊or 'from standing on her,' as W. queries⌋, soaking of the feet visits [him],' as it is hard to see what two feet have to do with a cow. And in d yā́s can be either subject or object, and jíghrati either sing. or pl. I take anāmanā́t from root man; Ludwig renders it 'without becoming ill'; the Pet. Lexx. explain the word as meaning a kind of disease. Ppp. reads, in a, b, asyā 'dhiṣṭhānād vikulaṁ dvin nāma.

6. Whoever punches (ā-sku) the two ears of her, he falls under the wrath of the gods; if he thinks "I am making a mark," he makes his possessions less.

Ppp. begins yo 'syāṣ karṇāv āskanoty, and reads in c lakṣmīṣ kurvīta. ⌊Pāda b recurs as 12 c. For the construction, cf. 26 d, 47 d: and, per contra, 12 d, 34 d, and

51 c.⌋ We are to make the combination kurve 'ti. ⌊As to the marking of cattle's ears, cf. vi. 141. 2 and note, and Zimmer, p. 234. In a marginal note, W. compares MS. iv. 2. 9 (p. 315). The MS. passage and this vs. and the root akṣ are discussed by Delbrück, Gurupūjākaumudī, p. 48–49. — Ppp. puts the vs. between 4 and 5.⌋

7. If, for any one's advantage, any one cuts off the tail-tuft of her, then his colts die, and the wolf slays his calves.

Or (in a), 'for any advantage or use.' Ppp. makes 7 c, d and 8 c, d change places. It reads also vālān in b.

8. If of her, while being with her master, a crow hath vexed (hīḍ) the hair, then his boys die, [and] the yákṣma visits him unexpectedly (?).

As to anāmanā́t, see note to vs. 5. The first pāda apparently means 'in presence of her master,' and so, 'without his interference for her protection.' ⌊Ppp. combines tataṣ k- in c.⌋

9. If the lye, the dung of her a barbarian woman flings together, then is born what is deformed, what will not escape from that sin.

All our mss. appear to read distinctly palpūl- in a, yet they are never to be trusted to make the distinction between lp and ly. Apparently the word is used here for 'urine,' and the meaning is 'if such precious stuff is carelessly treated by a slave-woman (dāsī).' Ppp. reads 'pirūpaṁ in c. We have to resolve as-i-āḥ to fill out the meter of a.

10. When being born, the cow (vaçā́) is born for (abhí) the gods together with the Brahmans; therefore she is to be given to the priests (brahmán); that people call the guarding (gópana) of one's possessions.

The pada-text makes the extraordinary division gó°panam ⌊for the sake of the play upon go 'cow'?⌋, as if the word were not a simple derivative from root gup! 'For' (abhí): more literally 'unto, into the possession of.'

11. They who come to the winning (vaní) of her, theirs is the god-made cow ⌊vaçā́⌋; they called it bráhman-scathing, if anyone keeps her to himself.

Pāda b seems to mean virtually 'she is by the gods made theirs.' Ppp. reads at the end (as also in vss. 21, 25) nu priyāyate, and nipr- is certainly very questionable, since no nipriya nor even root prī + ni occurs. The minor Pet. Lex. gives the word two totally different explanations, under nipriyāy and priyāy respectively.

12. Whoever is not willing to give the cow (gó) of the gods to the sons of seers that ask for her, he falls under the wrath of the gods and the fury of the Brahmans.

Ppp. reads, for a, b, ya enāṁ yācadbhya ārṣeyebhyo nirucchati. ⌊We had a, b above as 2 c, d, and c as 6 b.⌋

13. Whatever may be his use for the cow (vaçā́-), he should then seek another [cow]; she, ungiven, harms a man, if he is not willing to give her when asked for.

Ppp. has a quite different version of a–c: yasyā 'nya syād vaçābhogo 'nyām icchetu barhiṣaḥ: hiṅsrā ṇi dhatsva gopatiṁ. We should expect pū́ruṣam at end of c, as elsewhere in such a position.

14. As a deposited treasure (çevadhí), so of the Brahmans is the cow (vaçā́); accordingly ⌊etát⌋ they come unto her, in whosesoever possession she is born.

15. They come thus unto their own property, namely the Brahmans unto the cow; as one might scathe them in any other respect (?), so is the keeping back of her.

The third pāda is unclear, and the bad meter makes the reading suspicious; yet Ppp. has the same, and varies only in combining brāhmaṇā 'bhi in b, and combining and reading 'syā 'dhirohaṇaṁ in d. Most of our mss. (all except D. and R.s.m.) have the false accent brā́hmaṇās in b; our text emends. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in c.

16. She may go about until ⌊ā́⌋ the space of three years, being of unrecognized (vi-jñā) speech (-gada); should he know the cow, O Nārada, then the Brahmans are to be sought.

This is obscure, but appears to mean that the cow may not betray herself as a vaçā for as much as three years; but, as soon as she is recognized as such, she must be delivered over to the Brahmans. The pada-text has in a, of course, evá : ā́ : tr-.

17. Whoever declares her to be not the cow, the deposited deposit of the gods, at him Bhava-and-Çarva, both, striding about, hurl the arrow.

18. Whoever knows not the udder of her, and likewise the teats of her, to him she yields milk with both, if he has been able to give the cow.

That is, probably, if her owner has sought no profit from her (cf. Ludwig). The first pāda is quoted under Prāt. ii. 52, as an example of ūdho (not ūdhar) before a sonant. A number of our mss. read veda, without accent.

19. Door-damaging (?) lies she on him, if he is not willing to give her when asked for; he does not succeed in the desires which, without having given her, he would fain accomplish (cikīrṣa-).

The translation implies the obviously necessary emendation of yā́m to yā́n in d ⌊so Ludwig⌋. As to duradabhnā́ at the beginning, see the note to vs. 4. That the conjectural rendering is extremely unsatisfactory is plain. Ppp. has instead, for a, duritavīnapāçaye; and, in c, d, apparently kāmas sam ṛdhyate yam ad-, thus supporting our emendation. ⌊In Ppp. this verse precedes our 18.⌋

20. The gods asked for the cow, having made the Brahman their mouth; the wrath (héḍa) of them all incurs (ni-i) the man (mā́nuṣa) who gives not.

The translation implies emendation in b to brāhmaṇám. Ppp. reads in a yācanti, which does not rectify the meter. ⌊Read devā́so?⌋

21. He incurs the wrath of cattle (paçú) who gives not the cow to the Brahmans — if a mortal keeps to himself the deposited portion of the gods.

The saṁhitā-mss. accent in b brāhmaṇébhyo dadat, and the pada correspondingly adadat (instead of ádadat). Our text makes the necessary emendation. Ppp. gives for d ṛtāse nu priyāyate. ⌊See note to 11, above.⌋

22. If a hundred other Brahmans should ask the cow of its master, yet (átha) the gods said of her: the cow is his who knoweth thus.

All our mss. save two (I. and [?] E.s.m.) read etām (without accent) in c; our text follows the two.

23. Whoever, not having given her to one who knoweth thus, then shall give the cow to others, hard to go upon for him in his station is the earth with its deity.

In b the pada-text has anyébhyaḥ : adadat, and the saṁhitā-mss. correspondingly -bhyo dadad v-; this is emended in our text to -bhyó 'd- (as if ádadat, as in vs. 21); but a decidedly better emendation would be to -bhyo dádat, as translated. Ppp. reads anyasmāi d-, which favors this understanding of the pāda; it also combines tasmā 'dh- in c.

24. The gods asked the cow [of him] in whose possession she was first (ágre) born; that same one may Nārada know; together with the gods he drove her away.

The connection of c, d is obscure, and tempts to conjectural emendations; Ludwig suggests vidvā́n for vidyāt: 'knowing her to be such, Nārada together with the gods drove her away (as theirs)'; this is quite acceptable. Ppp. reads at the end udājitā. One or two of our mss. (D.R.p.m.) accent nāradáḥ. The Anukr. takes no notice of the lack of a syllable in a. ⌊Read devā́so as in 20?⌋

25. The cow makes a man (pū́ruṣa) destitute of descendants, poor in cattle, if, when she is asked for by the Brahmans, then he keeps her to himself.

Ppp. reads in b pāuruṣam, and in d nu priyāyata. The Anukr. takes no notice of any deficiency in c; we may best resolve bṛ-āh-. ⌊Read brāhmaṇébhiç ?⌋

26. For Agni-and-Soma, for Love (kā́ma), for Mitra and for Varuṇa — for these the Brahmans ask her; under their wrath falls he who gives not.

27. So long as the master of her should not himself overhear the verses (ṛ́c), so long may she go about among his kine (gó); she may not abide in his house after he has heard.

The translation implies the evidently necessary emendation of vaçet at the end to vaset; R., indeed, has the latter; ⌊and so have 8 of SPP's authorities, against 7 with vaçet;⌋ Ppp. is corrupt: nā 'sya çrutā gṛhe sya. The Anukr. takes no notice of any redundancy in b; but it can hardly expect us to make a pāda-division between no and 'paçṛṇuyāt. The 'verses' are doubtless those with which the Brahmans come to claim their rightful property.

28. If any one, having overheard the verses of her, has then made her go about among his kine (gó), both the life-time and the growth of him do the gods, made wrathful, cut off (vraçc).

Nearly all our mss. (E. has ácī-) ⌊and all of SPP's⌋ leave acīcarat in b unaccented; and then, as if by way of compensation, they mostly (except Bs.s.m.D.R.) accent vṝçcanti.

29. The cow, going about variously, the deposited deposit of the gods, manifests her forms, when she desires to go (?) to her station (sthā́man).

That is, her rightful and appointed place. The translation implies in b the reading kṛṇute instead of kṛṇuṣva, although the former is found only in O.p.m.D.T. (-uti). ⌊Three of SPP's pada-mss. have kṛṇute.⌋ The comm. to Prāt. ii. 63 quotes āviṣ kṛṇute rūpāṇi, which is not found in the text unless here. The translation also implies at the end jigāṅsati. The Prāt. (i. 86) seems to imply the occurrence in the text of such forms, and the sense obviously calls for them here and in the next verse; see the note to Prāt. i. 86. Ppp. reads in d yathā for yadā.

30. She manifests herself when she desires to go to her station; then the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ makes up her mind for the asking of the priests (brahmán).

That is, prepares herself to be asked for by them; brahmábhyas, dat. by attraction. ⌊Read again jigāṅsati: see note to vs. 29.⌋ Read in d yācñyā́ya, though the mss. mostly have -ñcy-, as they often blunder over such an unusual consonant-group. Ppp. reads uto for atho in c.

31. She plans (sam-kḷp) [it] with her mind; then she goes unto the gods; thence the priests (brahmán) go on to ask for the cow.

32. By offering of svadhā́ to the Fathers, by sacrifice to the deities, by giving of the cow, the noble (rājanyà) does not incur (gam) the mother's wrath.

Ppp. reads devebhyaḥ at end of b. The description of the Anukr. very unnecessarily forbids us to resolve -bhi-aḥ in b.

33. The cow is mother of the noble; so came it (n.) into being in the beginning; they call it a non-abandonment (? ánarpaṇa) of her that she is presented to the priests (brahmán).

The Pet. Lexx. render the difficult ánarpaṇa by 'a not giving away'; Ludwig, by 'no restitution.' Ppp. combines tasyā ’’hur in c.

34. As one might snatch (? ā-lup) from the spoon sacrificial butter held forth for the fire, so he who gives not the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ ⌊to the priests⌋ falls under the wrath of Agni.

Perhaps, 'as [the fire] might snatch,' etc. — seizing on the butter before it is duly offered. Ppp. reads for a yad ājyaṁ pratijagrāha, and in d omits ā, thus rectifying the meter. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in our text; we are doubtless to get rid of it by contracting to agnáy' ā́. ⌊Were emendation necessary, one might be tempted to suggest agnā́v ā́: but cf. note to vs. 6 b.⌋

35. With the sacrificial cake as calf, milking well, she draws near to him in the world; she yields (duh) to him all his desires — [namely,] the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ to him who has presented her.

Ppp. reads, in b, loke 'syo 'pa; and, for c, sahasmāi sarvān kāmān mahe. The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregular meter in pādas a and c. All the saṁhitā-mss. accent loké 'smā in b; our text emends to lokè.

36. All his desires, in Yama's realm, does the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ yield to him who has presented her; likewise they call hell the world of him who keeps her back when asked for.

The pada-text reads nárakam, and the difference of the two texts is noted in Prāt. iii. 21; iv. 90. Ppp. reads tathā for atha in c.

37. Being impregnated, the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ goes about angry at her master: thinking me barren, let him be bound in the fetters of death.

38. And he who, thinking her barren, cooks the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ at home (amā́)—his sons and sons' sons also does Brihaspati cause to be asked for.

Ppp. reads in b, for amā ca, the equivalent gṛheṣu; further, in c, d, asya svaputrān pāutrāç cātayate bṛh-. ⌊Over "at home" W. interlines "in private": see vs. 53.⌋

39. She sends down great heat, going about a cow (gó) among kine; further, to the master who has not given her the cow (vaçā́) milks poison.

In b, apparently, 'being treated as an ordinary cow.' The 'milks' in d does not necessarily mean that she gives actual milk. Ppp. reads tato in c, for atho ha, thus rectifying the meter; the Anukr. takes no notice of the redundancy of the pāda, caused by the apparently intrusive ha.

40. It is a thing dear to the cattle that she is presented to the priests (brahmán); further, that is a thing dear to the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋, that she be an oblation to the gods.

Lit. 'among the gods' (p. deva°trā́).

41. What cows the gods shaped out (ut-kḷp), rising up from the sacrifice, of them Nārada selected for himself the fearful viliptī́.

The root kḷp (kalpay-) with ud occurs nowhere else. In c, P.M.W.I.E.p.m.R. read viliptī́m, which would be the more normal accus. of -tī́, but the meter is against it. But the accent -tyám is entirely inadmissible; it must be emended to -tyàm; ⌊cf. JAOS. x. 379, 369⌋. What sort of a cow (vaçā́) is intended by viliptī́ (which ought to signify 'smeared over') is altogether obscure. Ppp. reads instead vilapatiṁ.

42. The gods questioned (mīmāṅs-) about her: is this a cow ⌊vaçā́⌋, or not a cow? Of her Nārada said: she is of cows the most truly cow (vaçā́tama).

The more proper reading in b would seem to be ávaçā́3iti; but all the saṁhitā-mss. read ávaçé 'ti, as in our text, although the pada gives the sign of protraction (3) also after avaçā, as it should be. But the Prāt. (i. 97) requires -çé 'ti simply: see the rules i. 97 and 105, and the notes to them. The verse (8 + 8 : 7 + 10) is very ill described by the Anukr. Ppp. reads in a devā 'mīm-; for b, vaçe 'yāṁ ntavaçe 'ti; and it omits iti at the end. ⌊For the use of the superlative in d, cf. the punning lampoon on the name of Gotama, Indische Sprüche^{2}, 4875.⌋

43. How many, pray (nú), Nārada, are the cows which thou knowest, born among men (manuṣyà-)? those I ask of thee who knowest; of which may a non-Brahman not partake (aç)?

Ppp. reads, for c, katimā "sāṁ bhīmatamā (like our vs. 45 c).

44. The viliptí, O Brihaspati, and the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ that has given birth to [such] a cow — of that one a non-Brahman who should hope for prosperity (bhū́ti) may not partake.

The translation implies at the beginning emendation to viliptí yā́ (as in vs. 46); the proper reading might also be viliptyàs, nom. pl.; -tyā́s seems inadmissible; Ppp. reads vilaptyā (for -ās?). Ppp. has further tāsāṁ for tasyās in c. Sūtávaçā is rendered according to the requirement of the accent; the Pet. Lexx. define as 'a cow remaining barren after the birth of one calf'; and the legends told in explanation of the name in TS. vi. 1. 3^6 and MS. ii. 5. 4 support that understanding. ⌊Cf. Henry's translation, p. 208, and note, p. 256.⌋ Pāda c is redundant in this verse, as are also 46 c and 43 d; the Anukr. heeds none of these cases.

45. Homage be to thee, O Nārada; [be] the cow to him who at once knows it. Which one of them is the most fearful, not having given which, one would perish?

Ppp. reads in a te 'stu, and in b vaçām, which is easier (Ludwig translates ⌊as if the text were vaçā́ḥ⌋). In d, our text might better read ádattvā.

46. She that is viliptí, O Brihaspati, further the cow that has given birth to [such] a cow — of that one a non-Brahman who should hope for prosperity may not partake.

Ppp. reads at the beginning viluptiṁ bṛhaspataye yā ca sū-, and in c again (as in vs. 44) tāsāṁ.

47. Three verily are the kinds of cow: the viliptí, she that has given birth to [such] a cow, the [simple] cow ⌊vaçā́⌋; these one should present to the priests (brahmán), [then] he falls not under the wrath of Prajāpati.

Ppp. once more reads viluptīs sū- in b; it is easier to conjecture a meaning for viluptī than for viliptī. Most of our saṁhitā-mss. accent só 'nāv- in d; our text makes the necessary correction to sò. The irregularities of b and c are unnoticed in the Anukr.; ⌊or rather, it lets them balance each the other⌋.

48. This, O Brahmans, is your oblation — so, when asked ⌊therefor⌋, should he think, if they should ask of him the cow, which in the house of him who has not given her is fearful.

49. The gods talked about the cow in wrath, saying: he hath not given it to us; with these verses (ṛ́c) [they talked about] Bheda; therefore indeed he perished.

Ppp. reads upa for pari in a, and, for b, sa no rājata heḍitā ; and in c it rectifies the meter by giving bhedasya. The Anukr. does not heed the deficiency in our verse.

50. And Bheda gave her not, when asked by Indra for the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋; for that offense the gods cut him off in the contest for superiority.

Some of our mss. (Bp.E.D.K.) read etām (unaccented) in a; nearly all (not Bs.s.m.D.) accent āgasó 'vṛçcan in d. Ppp. has at the beginning utāi 'tāṁ bh-; its second half-verse is corrupt.

51. They who, wheedling, advise (vad) to the non-giving of the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋, the villains fall under the fury of Indra through ignorance.

Ppp. combines in a vaçāyā 'dā-, and in c–d jālmā "vṛç-.

52. They who, leading away her master, then say: do not give — they, through ignorance, go to meet the hurled missile of Rudra.

Pari yanti is rendered as if prati y-, for which it is perhaps a misreading. Ppp. reads cetasas for acittyā. Part of our mss. (Bp.R.K.) leave āhus unaccented, and all have te instead of té in c.

53. If as offered (hu) and if as unoffered one cooks the cow ⌊vaçā́⌋ in private (amā́), coming into collision with the gods accompanied by the Brahmans, he goes supine (jihmá) out of the world.

All the saṁhitā-mss. curiously read in c sábrāhmaṇānn (O. -ṇāṁn) ṛtvā́ ; the pada-text has sá॰brāhmaṇān : ṛtvā́. ⌊For amā́, cf. vs. 38.⌋

⌊Here ends the fourth anuvāka, with 1 hymn and 53 verses. The quoted Anukr. says saptabhir ūnā tu "vaçāḥ," i.e. 'the cows[-hymn] is a [sixty] deficient by seven.'⌋

5. The Brahman's cow.

[Atharvācārya. — sapta paryāyāḥ. brahmagavīdevatāḥ.*]

⌊Partly metrical: vss. 15–17, 47–53, 55–70 are so reckoned by W. in the Index, p. 6.⌋ Found also in the main in Pāipp. xvi., but in the central parts with omissions and disorder of which the details are not given; ⌊vss. 58, 60, 64–73 are wanting⌋. Not quoted at all by Vāit., nor probably by Kāuç., since 'the two Brahman-cow hymns' mentioned in Kāuç. 48. 13 are doubtless v. 18, 19; although the comm. ⌊Dārila: cf. Keçava, p. 351^{20}⌋ declares these ⌊v. 18, 19⌋ to constitute one of the 'two,' and xii. 5 the other. *⌊The Berlin ms. reads prāguktarṣibrahmagavīdevatāḥ: so also SPP's citation, Critical Notice, p. 21. This seems to mean that Kaçyapa is the ṛṣi; h. 4 clearly has the same "deity" as this.⌋

1. By toil, by penance [is she] created, acquired by bráhman, supported (çritá) on righteousness.

All our saṁhitā-mss. combine vittá ṛté. The appearance of meter in the verse (8 + 8) is perhaps not accidental; but there is no metrical structure elsewhere in the section.

2. Covered with truth, enclosed with fortune, enveloped with glory.

Why the verse is called sāmnī rather than prājāpatyā, like its predecessor, cannot be told. The pada-text does not divide prā́vṛtā, although, in the apparently parallel case, it divides pári॰vṛtā.

3. Set about with svadhā́, surrounded with faith, guarded by consecration, standing firm in the offering, the world her post (nidhā́na).

The pada-mss. absurdly write práti॰sthitāḥ (instead of -tā). The metrical description of the Anukr. is not less absurd; to make the required 30 syllables, we have to resolve pári-ūḍhā.

4. Bráhman her guide, the Brahman her over-lord.

Ppp. combines brāhmaṇo adh-. The á- needs to be restored in order to make the 13 syllables required by the definition of the Anukr.

5. Of the Kshatriya who takes to himself that Brahman-cow, who scathes the Brahman, —

6. There departs the happiness (sūnṛ́tā), the heroism, the good luck.

⌊The London Anukr. text reads prathamā bhāu prājāpatyānuṣṭu pakrāmatīti (vs. 6) satyena (etc., vs. 2): may be the pratīka of vs. 6 is misplaced and should be put before [u]bhāu (vs. 6 can be stretched to 16 syllables), or else the definition of 6 is fallen out.⌋ Ppp. reads puṇyalakṣmī.

10. And milk, and sap, and food, and food-eating, and righteousness, and truth, and sacrifice (iṣṭá), and bestowal (pūrtá), and progeny, and cattle: —

11. All these depart from the Kshatriya who takes to himself the Brahman-cow, who scathes the Brahman.

Lit. 'all these of the K.,' 'that belong to him.' Ppp. omits vs. 10, and abbreviates vs. 9 to āyuç ca çrotraṁ ca, and vs. 11 to tāni sarvāṇy apa krāmanti kṣatriyasya. All our saṁhitā-mss. read in vs. 10 ca ṛtám. The Anukr. says of vss. 7–10, etāç catasraḥ punaḥ punaḥ pādāntareṇa padābhyāsād ekapadāḥ: ⌊that is, they are 1-p. because repeatedly or in each case the groups ending with ca have to be recited with a pāda-interval, i.e. (as Dr. Ryder suggests) because there is in each verse no main cesura⌋.

[Paryāya III. — ṣoḍaça. 12. virā́ḍ viṣamā́ gā́yatrī; 13. āsury anuṣṭubh; 14, 26. sā́mny uṣṇih; 15. gā́yatrī; 16, 17, 19, 20. prājā́patyā́ 'nuṣṭubh; 18. yā́juṣī jagatī; 21, 25. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 22. sāmnī bṛhatī; 23. yājuṣī triṣṭubh; 24. āsurī gāyatrī; 27. ā́rcy uṣṇih.]

12. This same Brahman-cow [is] fearful, having deadly poison, witchcraft incarnate (sākṣā́t), kū́lbaja when covered.

Kū́lbaja occurs only here and in vs. 53 below; in the latter verse, Ppp. reads instead pūlyājām.

13. In her are all terrible things and all deaths.

14. In her are all cruel things, all men-killers (puruṣavadhá).

15. This Brahman-cow, when taken to oneself, binds the Brahman-scather, the god-reviler, in the shackle of death.

Several of the saṁhitā-mss. (Bs.P.M.W.E.) read -gavy à3dīyá-, curiously enough. All our mss. have páḍv-, and one or two -vīn̄ç- or -vin̄ç-. The verse admits of being read as a gāyatrī, probably not by accident, and might better have been printed as such.

16. Verily (hí) a hundred-killing weapon (mení) is she; verily the destruction of the Brahman-scather is she.

17. Therefore indeed is the cow of the Brahmans hard to be dared against by one who understands (vi-jñā).

18. [She is] a thunderbolt when running, Vāiçvānara when driven up (údvīta).

19. A missile when extracting (ut-khid) her hoofs, the great god when looking away.

20. Keen-edged (kṣurápavi) when looking; when bellowing, she thunders at one.

Bp. reads vā́sya-. Vss. 19 and 20 were perhaps intended as metrical (8 + 8). ⌊As to mení, vs. 16, cf. Geldner, Festgruss an Böhtlingk, p. 32.⌋

21. Death when uttering hing; the formidable god when slinging about her tail.

All the saṁhitā-mss. read -tyù3gró ⌊K. ùg-⌋. This verse also has 16 syllables, divisible into 8 + 8, but evidently only by accident.

22. Total scathing when twisting about her ears; king-yákṣma when urinating.

The Anukr. does not heed that the verse has one syllable too many for a regular sāmnī bṛhatī.

23. A weapon (mení) when being milked; headache when milked.

24. Debility when approaching (upa-sthā); mutual strife when felt of.

Párāmṛṣṭā might also come from root mṛj and mean 'rubbed off.'

25. A shaft when her mouth is being fastened up; mishap (ṛ́ti) when being slain.

The pada-text has api°nahyámāne, and two or three of our saṁhitā-mss. (P.M. O.p.m.K.R.) retain the e before ṛ́tir.

26. Deadly poisonous when falling down; darkness when fallen down.

27. Going after him, the Brahman-cow exhausts the breaths of the Brahman-scather.

[Paryāya IV. —ekādaça. 28. āsurī gāyatrī; 29,37. āsury anuṣṭubh; 30. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 31. yājuṣī triṣṭubh; 32. sāmnī gāyatrī; 33,34. sāmnī bṛhatī; 35. bhurik sāmny anuṣṭubh; 36. sāmny uṣṇih; 38. pratiṣṭhā gāyatrī.]

28. [She is] hostility when being cut up, the eating of one's children when being shared out.

Two of the pada-texts (D.Kp.) read pāútra°ādyam. It is so difficult in most mss. to distinguish dy and gh, that the reading pāútrāgham (cf. pāútram aghám, xii. 3. 14), which Pet. Lex. conjectures as an emendation, might possibly be intended here.

29. A gods' missile when being taken, failure when taken.

The participles, especially the present passive ones, in these verses, are very much bungled over by the mss. For hriyámāṇā here are read hriy-, hrīy-, hṛy-, hiy-; and Bp. has ṛtā́ for hṛtā́. It is necessary to make the awkward renderings with 'being,' to distinguish present participle from past. The definition of the Anukr. implies the resolution vi-ṛd-.

30. Evil when being set on, harshness when being set down.

31. Poison when heating (?pra-yas), takmán when heated.

All the mss. read práyastā, but Bp. has pra°yáñchantī, Bs. -yachantī, emended to -yasy-, P.M.W. -yásyañchantī (M. emended to -yasy- ⌊?⌋).

32. Evil (aghá) when being cooked, bad dreaming when cooked.

The description of the Anukr. implies the resolution -pni-am.

33. Uprooting when being turned about (? pari-ā-kṛ), destruction when turned about.

The participles are rendered according to the Pet. Lexx. The Anukr. expects us to resolve pari-ā- once, but not both times. Bp. reads -ākrīyá-.

34. Discord by smell; pain (çúc) when being taken up, a poison-snake when taken up.

The pada-text leaves both participles undivided, as prescribed by Prāt. iv. 62. 'Taken up,' doubtless in preparation for being served up as food. Bp. reads udhrīyá-.

35. Non-prosperity when being served up, disaster when served up.

The mss. again fluctuate between -hriyá-, -hrīyá-, -hiyá-, and, at the end, between -hṛtā, -hatā (P.M.p.m.W.), and -hūtā (D.). The Anukr. notices this time that the verse is bhurij.

36. Çarva angered when being dressed (piç), Çimidā when dressed.

37. Ruin when being partaken of, perdition when partaken of.

38. When partaken of, the Brahman-cow cuts off the Brahman-scather from the world, from both this one and the one yonder.

Bp. appears to read lokā́n, and M.R.T. correspondingly -ā́ṅ ch-; O. ⌊D.Kp.⌋ have -ā́t ch-; the rest -ā́ ch-, which means -ā́c ch-, since ch and cch are equivalent and exchangeable. The metrical definition of the Anukr. is ambiguous.

[Paryāya V. —aṣṭa. 39. sāmnī pañkti; 40. yājuṣy anuṣṭubh; 41, 46. bhurik sāmny anuṣṭubh; 42. āsurī bṛhatī; 43. sāmnī bṛhatī; 44. pipīlikamadhyā 'nuṣṭubh; 45. ārcī bṛhatī.]

39. The slaying of her is witchcraft, her cutting up (āçásana) is a weapon (mení), the contents of her bowels a secret charm.

All of these, of course, understood as directed against the offender. Ppp. combines tasyā "han-.

40. [She is] homelessness when hidden (?pari-hnu).

The Pet. Lexx. conjecture pari-hnu (not found elsewhere) to mean 'disavow, disown.'

41. The Brahman-cow, having become the flesh-eating Agni, entering into the Brahman-scather, eats him.

42. All his limbs, joints, roots, she cuts off (vraçc).

43. She severs (chid) his paternal connection, makes perish his maternal connection.

44. All the marriages, acquaintances of the Brahman-scather does the Brahman-cow scorch (?api-kṣā), when not given back by a Kshatriya.

Some of our mss. (O.D.T.R.) accent -dīyámānā, although part of them (O.T.R.) have accented -trīyeṇā́ 'pun-. The description of the passage (7 + 6 : 8 + 10 = 31) by the Anukr. is very strange, and valueless.

45. Without abode, without home, without progeny, she makes him; he becomes without succession (?); he is destroyed :—

The translation of aparā॰paraṇá (so the pada-text) is according to the conjecture of the Pet. Lexx. The metrical definition of the Anukr. implies reading karoti ap-.

46. Whatever Kshatriya takes to himself the cow of a Brahman who knoweth thus.

[Paryāya VI. —pañcadaça. 47, 49, 51–53, 57–59, 61 (?). prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; 48. ārṣy anuṣṭubh; 50. sāmnī bṛhatī; 54, 55. prājāpatyo 'ṣṇih; 56. āsurī gāyatrī; 60. gāyatrī.]

47. Quickly, indeed, at his killing the vultures make a din (āilabá).

Ppp. reads at the end kurvatāi 'lavaṁ. The text of the Anukr. seems defective here. All that is said about the nine verses of 16 syllables is as follows: ādyā skandhogrīvīs tvayā pramūrṇam ⌊vs. 61⌋ prājāpatyānuṣṭubhaḥ. All the verses not of this measure are regularly described. Ludwig translates this whole section ⌊and the next⌋, p. 529.

48. Quickly, indeed, about his place of burning dance the long-haired women, beating on the breast with the hand, making an evil din.

The mss. write no avasāna-mark between the two halves of the verse. Ppp. again reads āilavaṁ. Prāt. iii. 92 notes the non-lingualization of nṛt after pari. ⌊Bloomfield discusses the vs., AJP. xi. 339 or JAOS. xv., p. xlv.⌋

49. Quickly, indeed, in his abodes do the wolves make a din.

Ppp. reads, after vāstuṣu, gañgānaṁ kurvate 'pa vṛṣāt.

50. Quickly, indeed, they ask about him: what that was, is this now that?

We should expect rather kíṁ tád āsī́3t ⌊instead of yát tád etc.⌋, since without a question there is no good reason for the protracted ī. Ludwig translates as if that were the reading. O.D.R. accent ā́sī́3d, as is the rule in the Brāhmaṇas. Ppp. reads, after pṛchanti, etad āsīd ataṁ nu dā.

51. Cut thou, cut on, cut forth, scorch, burn (kṣā).

52. O daughter of Añgiras, exhaust thou the Brahman-scather, that takes to himself [the cow].

Ppp. reads ādadhānaṁ.

53. For thou art called belonging to all the gods, witchcraft, kū́lbaja when covered.

Cf. vs. 12 above. Ppp. reads (as there noted) pūlyājām.

54. Burning (uṣ), consuming, thunderbolt of the bráhman.

55. Having become a keen-edged death, run thou out.

Ppp. reads vibhāvasuḥ instead of vi dhāva tvam; the latter reading probably carries on the figure implied in kṣurapavi, which applies especially to the armed wheels of a battle-chariot.

56. Thou takest to thyself the honor of the scathers, their sacrifice and bestowal, their expectations.

Iṣṭám pūrtáṁ ca: i.e., as later, the fruits of these good works. The Anukr. would have done much better to accept the resolution ca āç-, and reckon the verse as 16 syllables.

57. Taking to thyself what is scathed for him who is scathed, thou presentest [it to him] in yonder world.

58. O inviolable one, become thou the guide of the Brahman out of imprecation.

The translation implies emendation of abhíçastyā to -tyāḥ. The verse is wanting in Ppp.

59. Become thou a weapon (mení), a shaft; become thou deadly poisonous from evil (aghá).

60. O inviolable one, smite forth the head of the Brahman-scather that has committed offense, of the god-reviler, the ungenerous.

This verse also is wanting in Ppp. ⌊Pādas b, c recur below, vs. 65.⌋

61. Let Agni burn the malevolent one, slaughtered, crushed (mṛd) by thee.

Ppp. reads tayā pravṛkṇo rucitam agnir dahatu duṣkṛtam.

62. Cut (vraçc) thou, cut off, cut up; burn thou, burn off, burn up.

63. The Brahman-scather, O divine inviolable one, do thou burn up all the way from the root.

Or 'to the root.' Bs.P.M. read mū́lān. In Ppp., ⌊vss. 62–63 are somewhat altered and⌋ the remaining vss. are wanting.

64. That he may go from Yama's seat to evil worlds, to the distances.

65. So do thou, O divine inviolable one, of the Brahman-scather that has committed offense, of the god-reviler, the ungenerous, —

66. With a thunderbolt hundred-jointed, sharp, razor-pronged, —

67. Smite forth the shoulder-bones, forth the head.

68. His hairs (lóman) do thou cut up (sam-chid); his skin strip off; —

69. His flesh cut in pieces; his sinews wrench off; —

70. His bones distress (pīḍ); his marrow smite out; —

71. All his limbs, [his] joints unloosen.

72. Let the flesh-eating Agni thrust him from the earth, burn (uṣ) up; let Vāyu [do so] from the atmosphere, the great expanse (varimán); —

73. Let the sun thrust him forth from the sky, burn him down.

The Anukr. accepts the resolution ni oṣatu.

⌊The quotations from the Old Anukr. for the seven paryāyas may here be given together: I. vacanāni ca ṣaṭ; II. pañca; III. ṣoḍaça; IV. ekādaça; V. aṣṭa ca; VI. brahmagavyām pañcadaça; VII. tasmād dvādaçakaḥ paraḥ. The sum is 73. — As is readily seen, these quotations together make an anuṣṭubh çloka; and they are printed in metrical form by SPP., vol. i., p. 21 (Critical Notice). ⌊Here ends the fifth anuvāka, with 1 hymn (or 7 paryāyas) and 73 vacanas or vacana-avasānarcas.⌋

⌊By some mss. the book is summed up as of 4 artha-sūktas [their vss. number 231] and 7 paryāya-sūktas [73 "verses"], or as of "11 sūktas of both kinds," with a total of 304 verses.⌋

⌊The twenty-seventh prapāṭhaka ends here.⌋

Book XIII.

⌊Hymns to the Ruddy Sun or Rohita.⌋

⌊We come now to the third grand division of the text, books xiii.–xviii. In the first division (books i.–vii.) we had the short hymns of miscellaneous subjects, and in the second (books viii.–xii.) we had the long hymns of miscellaneous subjects. In the third, the principle governing the arrangement and division of the material is in the main clearly that of unity of subject (compare the General Introduction and the Table of Contents): thus book xiii. consists of hymns to the Ruddy Sun or Rohita; xiv. consists of wedding verses; xv. is the book about the Vrātya; and xviii. consists of hymns for the dead. Accordingly, it is perhaps worthy of note that the Old Anukramaṇī does not describe the length of any hymn in book xiii. by reference to a certain length assumed as a norm. The whole book has been translated by Victor Henry, Les hymnes Rohitas. Livre XIII de l'Atharva-véda traduit et commenté, Paris, 1891. Henry's work was made the subject of a detailed review by Bloomfield in the American Journal of Philology (xii. 429–443) for 1891. Then, at Paris in 1892, appeared Le mythe de Rohita, traduction raisonnée du 13e livre de l'Atharva-véda, by Paul Regnaud. As appears below, Ludwig's translation covers the first three of the four hymns of the book; Deussen's, the first and third; and Bloomfield's, the first. For books xii.–xvi. inclusive, the bhāṣya is wanting.⌋

⌊Paryāya-hymns: for details respecting them, see pages 471–2. The fourth or last hymn of this book is a paryāya-sūkta with 6 paryāyas. For the discrepancy of numeration as between the two editions, see page 611.⌋

⌊The anuvāka-division of the book is into four anuvākas of one hymn each, and is thus (like the anuvāka-division of book xii.) coincident with the hymn-division. A conspectus for book xiii. follows:

Anuvākas	1	2	3	4
Hymns	1	2	3	4
Verses	60	46	26	56¶
Decad-division	6 tens	4 tens + 6	2 tens + 6	6 P

Here ¶ means "paragraph of a paryāya" (such as is numbered as a "verse" in the Berlin edition) and P means "paryāya." Of the "decads," anuvākas 1, 2, and 3 contain respectively 6, 5, and 3 (in all, 14 "decads"); while anuvāka 4 has 6 paryāyas. The sum is 14 "decad"-sūktas and 6 paryāya-sūktas or 20 sūktas (cf. p. 737).⌋

1. To Rohita (the sun, as ruddy one).

[Brahman.—ādhyātmam ; rohitādityadevatyam (3. mārutī ; 28–31. āgneyyaḥ ; 31. bahudevatyā). trāiṣṭubham : 3–5, 9, 12, 15. jagatī (15. atijāgatagarbhā) ; 8. bhurij ; [16. ? ;] 17. 5-p. kakummatī jagatī ; 13. atiçākvaragarbhā 'tijagatī ; 14. 3-p. puraḥparaçākvarā viparītapādalakṣmyā pañkti ; 18, 19. 5-p. kakummaty atijagatī (18. paraçākvarā bhurij ; 19. parātijāgatā) ; 21. ārṣī nicṛd gāyatrī ; 22, 23, 27. prākṛtā ; 26. virāṭ paroṣṇih ; 28–30 (28. bhurij), 32, 39, 40, 45–50 and 51–56* [and 57–58]. anuṣṭubh (52, 55. pathyāpañkti ; 55. kakummatī bṛhatīgarbhā ; 57. kakummatī) † ; 31. 5-p. kakummatī çākvaragarbhā jagatī ; 35. upariṣṭādbṛhatī ; 36. nicṛn mahābṛhatī ; 37. paraçākvarā virāḍ atijagatī ; 42. virāḍ jagatī ; 43. virāṇ mahābṛhatī ; 44. paroṣṇih ; 59, 60. gāyatrī.]

Found also in Pāipp. xviii. ⌊with vs. 30 after 31 ; vss. 56–57, 59–60 are lacking; vs. 58 is lacking in Pāipp. xviii., but is found in Pāipp. xx.⌋. A number of the verses are used in various parts of Kāuç., and several (four) in Vāit. *⌊So the Berlin ms. (against jagatī of the London ms.) : and atijagatī more nearly fits the vs.⌋ †⌊Here the Anukr. text looks as if in disorder : it seems as if yaṁ vāta (vs. 51) iti ṣaḍ anuṣṭubhaḥ ought to refer to the 6 vss. 51, 53–54, 56–58.⌋

Translated : Muir, v. 395 (parts) ; Ludwig, p. 536 ; Scherman, p. 73 (parts) ; Henry, 1, 21 ; Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 218 (cf. his introduction, p. 212 ff.) ; Griffith, ii. 133 ; Bloomfield, 207, 661.—Furthermore, Bloomfield, in his review (AJP. xii. 429–443) of Henry, discusses a considerable number of passages from this hymn. These discussions will be briefly cited by reference to "AJP. xii." He considers that the hymn is secondarily "an allegorical exaltation of a king and his queen."

1. Rise up, O powerful one (?vājín) that [art] within the waters, enter into this kingdom [that is] full of pleasantness ; the ruddy one (róhita) that generated this all—let him bear thee, well-borne, unto kingdom.

Róhita is evidently a name or form of the sun ; and the vājin (Henry, 'conqueror of booty') addressed is also the sun. The verse ⌊with faulty accents⌋ is found also in TB. (ii. 5. 2^1), which reads ⌊asi after yó in a⌋, ā́ viça in b, and, for d, sá no rāṣṭréṣu súdhitāṁ dadhātu, which seems better, as removing the difficulty of the sun establishing the sun. Ppp. reads viçvabhṛtaṁ for viçvaṁ idam in c ; and it has pipartu for bibhartu at the end ; ⌊we had the converse at xi. 5. 4⌋. The resolution ud-ā́-ihi is required to fill out the meter of a. All the four hymns of the book (under the name rohitās) are prescribed in Kāuç. 99. 4 to be used in case of a darkening (eclipse) of the sun. The first half-verse is, according to Kāuç. 49. 18, to be used in the witchcraft ceremony of the 'water-thunderbolts' (see x. 5) 'when the boat sinks.' ⌊Cf. AJP. xii. 431.⌋

2. Up hath arisen the power (?vā́ja) that is within the waters ; mount (ā-ruh) thou the clans (víç) that are sprung from thee (tvádyoni) ; assuming (dhā) the soma, the waters, the herbs, the kine, make thou the four-footed, the two-footed ones to enter here.

In b begins the play of words upon the root ruh 'ascend, mount, grow,' and its compounds and derivatives; this play is suggested by the at least apparent relationship between ruh and rohita, ⌊and is found with considerable elaboration throughout⌋ these hymns. Here it doubtless signifies 'have supremacy over.' Ppp. combines in b viçā "roha, in c dadhānā 'po 'ṣadh-, and in d dvipadā "veç-; and this last we have to accept in order to make a triṣṭubh pāda. In a the resolution of ā́ agan, and in b that of tuád-, make the meter right. The Anukr. takes no notice of any irregularity in the verse.

3. Do ye [who are] formidable, O Maruts, sons of the spotted mother, with Indra as ally, slaughter our foes; the ruddy one shall listen to you, ye liberal ones (sudā́nu), ye thrice seven Maruts that enjoy sweets together.

The first half-verse occurred above as v. 21. 11 a, b. We can hardly help emending triṣaptā́so to tríṣaptāso. Ppp. reads instead triṣaptā. The verse is found also in TB. (ii. 5. 2^3), which reads in a ugrā (which is better), in b sayújā prá ṇī́tha (corrupt), in c açṛṇod abhidyavaḥ, and in d (with the desired accent) trísaptāso. The verse lacks a syllable (in b) of being a proper jagatī.

4. The ruddy one ascended (ruh), mounted the ascents (rúh); [he,] the embryo of the wives, [mounted] the lap of births; him, taken hold of by them (f.), the six wide [spaces] discovered; seeing in advance the track, he hath brought (ā-hṛ) hither the kingdom.

The verse is found also in TB. (ii. 5. 2^1), which reads in a (much better) róhaṁ-rohaṁ (for rúho ruroha), at the beginning of b prajā́bhir vṛ́ddhim, and in c sáṁrabdho avidat. Such variations are of interest especially as showing how little connected sense was recognized in these verses by those who established the texts. This verse has no right to the name of jagatī, since all its pādas have a trochaic close; the two redundant syllables in a and c are removed by the TB. readings. ⌊For ā́hāḥ, see Prāt. ii. 46.⌋ ⌊With regard to the transition-sound between -dan and ṣáḍ, see Prāt. ii. 9, note.⌋

5. The ruddy one hath brought hither thy kingdom; the scorners have scattered; fearlessness hath become thine; unto thee, being such, let heaven-and-earth, by the revátīs, yield (duh) here thy desire by the çákvarīs.

Our mss. are divided in d between duhāthām and -tām: the majority give -thām (so Bs.s.m.Bp.O.D.R.T.K.); while P.M.W.E.p.m. have -tām; ⌊and so has Ppp.⌋. Kp. reads āsthat in b, the other pada-mss. -an; if -at is accepted, it will mean 'he has scattered the scorners'; the form may best be viewed, probably, as coming from sthā, like ādat from dā and ādhat from dhā ⌊see Skt. Gram. § 847⌋; a root asth is extremely improbable; ⌊it is discussed at AJP. xii. 439 and IF. v. 388, where references to previous discussions are given; to these add KZ. xxxii. 435; cf. also note to vii. 76. 3 above⌋. The verse occurs also in TB. (ii. 5. 2^1), which has very different readings: ā́hārṣīd rāṣṭrám ihá róhito mṛdho vy àsthad ábhayaṁ no astu: asmábhyaṁ dyāvāpṛthivī çákvarībhī rāṣṭráṁ duhāthām ihá revátībhiḥ. The verse is no jagatī; by the frequent and permissible contraction to -pṛthvī in c it becomes a fairly good triṣṭubh (badly constructed in a). It is reckoned as belonging to the abhaya gaṇa: see note to Kāuç. 16. 8. ⌊Ppp., like TB., puts mṛdho before vy ā- in b.⌋ ⌊For vss. 4–5, see AJP. xii. 432.⌋

6. The ruddy one generated heaven-and-earth; there the most exalted one stretched the line (tántu); there was supported (çri) the one-footed goat (?ajá); by strength he made firm (dṛh) heaven-and-earth.

Ppp. reads in c ekapād yo. The verse occurs in TB. (ii. 5. 2^3), with only slight variants: tásmin for tátra in b and c, and ékapāt in c. ⌊Cf. AJP. xii. 443.⌋

7. The ruddy one made firm heaven-and-earth; by him was established the sky (svàr), by him the firmament (nā́ka); by him the atmosphere, the spaces (rájas) were measured out; by him the gods discovered immortality (amṛ́ta).

The verse is found in TB. (ib.), the second half-verse reading quite differently: só antárikṣe rájaso vimā́nas téna devā́ḥ súvar ánv avindan. Ppp. combines and reads in d devā 'mṛtatvam.

8. The ruddy one examined (vi-mṛç) the all-formed, collecting to himself the fore-ascents and the ascents; having ascended the sky with great greatness, let him anoint (sam-añj) thy kingdom with milk, with ghee.

The TB. version (ii. 5. 2^2) has, for a, ví mamarça róhito viçvárūpaḥ; in b, samācakrāṇáḥ; in c, gatvā́ya (for rūḍhvā́ ⌊improving the meter⌋); for d, ví no rāṣṭrám unattu páyasā svéna. Ppp. combines in a -to 'mṛçat, and reads in b samākṛṇvānaṣ.

9. What ascents, fore-ascents thou hast, what on-ascents (ārúh) thou hast, with which thou fillest the sky, the atmosphere, with the bráhman, with the milk of them increasing, do thou watch over the people (víç) in the kingdom of the ruddy one.

Though the first three pādas count 12 syllables each, only a is jagatī in structure. With a, b compare xviii. 2. 9 a, b. ⌊For vss. 8–9, see AJP. xii. 433.⌋

10. What clans (víç) of thine came into being out of ardor (tápas), those have come hither after the young (vatsá), the gāyatrī́; let them enter (ā-viç) into thee with propitious mind; let the ruddy young with its mother go against [them].

Or (in a) 'what clans came into being out of thy heat.' In b, the pada-text has ihá : ā́ : aguḥ. In d, sáṁmātā means more probably 'having a common mother,' but the sense is too obscure to allow of much confidence in any translation. The TB. version (ii. 5. 2^2) reads in a tápasā (better); for b, gāyatráṁ vatsám ánu tā́s ta ā́ 'guḥ; in c, máhasā svéna; in d, putró (for vatsó). The Anukr. does not heed that the last pāda is jagatī. Ppp. combines in d vatso 'bhy.

11. The ruddy one hath stood aloft upon the firmament (nā́ka), generating all forms, [he,] young, poet; Agni shineth forth with keen light; in the third space (rájas) he hath done dear things.

Ppp. reads bhāsi in c. The Anukr. again passes without notice the jagatī pāda b. ⌊W. suggests by interlineation as alternative, 'hath made for himself dear forms.'⌋

12. The thousand-horned bull Jātavedas, offered to with ghee, soma-backed, having good heroes — let him not abandon me; let me not, a suppliant, abandon thee *; assign thou to me both prosperity in kine and prosperity in heroes.

The verse is found also in TB. (iii. 7. 27), K. (xxxv. 18), and Āp. ⌊ix. 3. 1⌋. TB. (with which Āp. ⌊substantially⌋ agrees throughout) has, for b, stómapṛṣṭho ghṛtávānt suprátīkaḥ; and, for c, d, mā́ no hāsīn metthitó nét tvā jáhāma gopoṣám̐ no vīrapoṣám̐ ca yaccha. Ppp. reads in b ghṛtāhutis so-. The irregular verse (12 + 11 : 12 + 12, but with triṣṭubh cadences throughout) is very ill described by the Anukr. as simply a jagatī. *⌊All the translators, with W., seem to overlook the accent of jáhāni: nét can hardly mean aught else than 'lest.'⌋

13. The ruddy one is generator and mouth of the sacrifice; to the ruddy one I make oblation with speech, with hearing, with mind; to the ruddy one go the gods with favoring mind; let him cause me to ascend with ascensions (róha) of meeting (sāmityá).

The pada-texts read blunderingly in d sām°ityāt (instead of -yāḥ). Henry emends to samityāt 'in order to union with him'; but sámiti has the well-established sense of 'meeting, gathering, assembly'; hence Ludwig (for rohāiḥ s-) 'with abundant success in the samiti.' ⌊See AJP. xii. 434.⌋ Ppp. reads at the end rohayāti. The verse is kindred with ii. 35. 5 in general expression. Its metrical structure (12 + 15 : 13 + 11 = 51) is wholly irregular; the definition of the Anukr. ⌊52 syllables⌋ ⌊nearly⌋ fits it mechanically.

14. The ruddy one disposed the sacrifice for Viçvakarman; therefrom have these brilliancies come unto me; may I speak thy navel (nā́bhi) upon the range (majmán) of existence.

The last pāda is repeated below as vs. 37 d. Ppp. reads in a vi dadhāt. The metrical definition implies the resolution vi ad-, and two resolutions in b (-si úpa and mā im-, doubtless), to make a paṅkti (14 + 12 : 14 = 40).

15. Unto thee ascended bṛhatī́ and paṅktí, unto [thee], O Jātavedas, kakúbh with honor; unto thee ascended the uṣṇíhā syllable, the váṣaṭ-utterance; unto thee ascended the ruddy one along with seed.

Or uṣṇihā°akṣaráḥ (so p.) is, in spite of its accent, an adjective to vaṣaṭkāraḥ (so Henry). Read in a bṛhaty ùtá; though all our mss. except ⌊O.⌋ K. happen to agree here in lengthening the ù. Saha at the end is, of course, a misprint for sahá. Ppp. reads at for uta in a, and viçvavedaḥ in b. ⌊The Anukr. appears to count the syllables as 11 + 10 : 13 + 13 = 47.⌋ The metrical irregularities in this book exceed the ordinary measure. ⌊For vss. 15, 17–20, cf. AJP. xii. 434.⌋

16. This one clothes himself in the embryo (womb?) of the earth; this one clothes himself in the sky, the atmosphere; this one, on the summit of the reddish one, has penetrated the heaven (svàr), the worlds.

Ppp. reads viṣṭapas sv- in c–d, and sam ānaçe in d. The verse (9 + 9 : 8 + 8 = 34) seems to be overlooked in the Anukr., or its definition has dropped out of the mss. Verses 16–20 are prescribed in Kāuç. 54. 10 to accompany, in the godāna-ceremony, the dressing of the child in a new garment. They are much better suited to that use than to their surroundings here.

17. O lord of speech, [be] earth pleasant to us; [be] the lair (yóni) pleasant, [be] our couch very propitious; just here be breath in our companionship; thee here, O most exalted one, let Agni surround with life-time, with honor.

Henry understands sakhyé as dat. of sákhi, against the accent. The Anukr. apparently views the verse as ⌊10 + 10 : 10 + 12 + 6 = 48⌋. The verse (with the two following?) is included among the vācaspatiliñgās, used in Kāuç. 41. 15 in a ceremony for good luck. Ppp. reads at the end -ṣṭhi pary ahaṁ varcasā dadhāmi.

18. O lord of speech, the five seasons that are ours, that came forth into being as Viçvakarman's — just here be breath in our companionship; thee here, O most exalted one, let the ruddy one surround with life-time, with honor.

The mss. read in a yé nāu (but I.R. yó nāu ⌊yónāu⌋); ⌊SPP's text and most of his authorities have yé nāu: but two have yónāu;⌋ the edition makes the apparently necessary correction to yé no. ⌊The Anukr. seems to scan as 11 + 12 : 10 + 14 + 6 = 53.⌋ Ppp. omits ye nāu (or no) in a, and sam- in b, and āyuṣā near the end.

19. O lord of speech, [generate] well-willing and mind; generate kine in our stall (goṣṭhá), progeny in our wombs (yóni); just here be breath in our companionship; thee here, O most exalted one, I surround with life-time, with honor.

Ppp. reads in b prajām, and in d avahaṁ (for aham), omitting, as before, āyuṣā, ⌊and having again dadhātu at the end, repeated unintelligently from the preceding⌋.

20. May Savitar, god Agni, surround thee [with honor]; with honor may Mitra-and-Varuṇa deck (abhi[+ dhā]) thee; striding down all niggards come thou; thou hast made this kingdom full of pleasantness.

The shift from pári in a to abhí in b makes a mixed and difficult construction. Ppp. combines devo 'gnir in a and sarvā 'rātīr in c, and reads (better) kṛṇuhi in d.

21. Thou whom the spotted one (f.), the side-horse, draws (vah) in the chariot, O ruddy one, thou goest with brightness (çúbh), making flow the waters.

This verse corresponds to RV. viii. 7. 28, which, however, has considerable variants: for a, yád eṣām pṛ́ṣatī (p. -tīḥ) ráthe; in b, róhitaḥ; in c, yā́nti çubhrā́ (p. -rā́ḥ). As is usual in such cases, some of our mss. read pṛ́ṣṭis in b, and ṛṇán in c. And most read rohitaḥ ⌊unaccented⌋ at end of b (only Bs.R.K. -ta), as if under influence of the RV. version. ⌊SPP. adopts in his text rohita, but reports six of his mss. as giving rohitaḥ, without accent.⌋ Ppp. adds at the end tene 'maṁ brahmaṇaspate ruhaṁ rohayo 'ttamam. The verse is quoted in a ceremony for prosperity by Kāuç. (24. 42), which volunteers the added explanation dyāuḥ pṛṣaty ādityo rohitaḥ; and it is also included among the puṣṭika mantras: see note to Kāuç. 19. 1. Kāuç. 24. 43 states further that a spotted cow is given (as sacrificial fee); and the comm. appears to direct that vss. 21–26 accompany the gift.

22. She that is ruddy (róhiṇī) is submissive to the ruddy one, being liberal (sūrí), of beautiful color, vast (bṛhatī́), very splendid; by her may we conquer booty (?vā́jān) of all forms; by her may we overcome all fighters.

Róhiṇī, doubtless the dawn. Our pada-mss. read in c -rūpām, by a blundering misapprehension of the assimilated nasal in the combination -pāñ ja- ⌊Prāt. ii. 11⌋. M.p.m. ⌊and SPP's C.⌋ read at end syāma; the passage is quoted as an instance of sy- in the comm. to Prāt. ii. 107. Ppp. reads sūryas suv- in b, and combines pṛtanā 'bhi in d. In the Anukr. (by an exceptional usage hardly met with elsewhere) this verse and the next, and a little later vs. 27, are specified as prākṛta ⌊mss. prakṛta⌋: i.e., as following the established norm of the hymn, which is triṣṭubh.

23. Here the seat (sádas), she that is ruddy, of the ruddy one; yonder the road by which the spotted one (f.) goes; her the Gandharvas, the Kaçyapas, lead up; her the poets defend unremittingly.

All the mss. except O.D. (and these differ perhaps only by accident) read in c gandharvāḥ, as if vocative.

24. The sun's yellow (hári) bright (ketumánt) horses, immortal, constantly draw the easy-running chariot; the ghee-drinking ruddy one, shining (bhrā́j), the god, entered the spotted sky.

Bs.E. combine in b amṛtās su-. The Anukr. does not heed the jagatī pāda b.

25. The ruddy one, the sharp-horned bull, who encompassed Agni, the sun, who props asunder (vi-stabh) the earth and the heaven — out of him do the gods create creations.

Ppp. begins with ayaṁ roh-. The curious reading of O. in c, ṣṭab-h-nāti (the b and h two different letters), was noted above, under xii. 4. 4. ⌊"Encompassed": Bloomfield, "became superior to," AJP. xii. 443.⌋ Kāuç. 18. 25 gives the verse, in company with several others, as to be used in the so-called citrākarman (ceremony concerning the asterism citrā) to accompany the partaking of a milk rice-dish; and the Paddhati includes both it and the following verse in the salila gaṇa.

26. The ruddy one mounted the sky, out of the great sea (arṇavá); the ruddy one ascended all ascents.

That the verse is reckoned as belonging to the salila gaṇa was noted under the preceding verse.

27. Measure thou out (vi-mā) the milk-giving, ghee-dripping (ghṛtā́ñc) [cow]; this is the unresisting milch-cow of the gods. Let Indra drink the soma; let there be comfort (kṣéma); let Agni commence praising; do thou thrust away the scorners.

Ppp. reads eṣām at end of b. With the verse is to be compared Āp. xi. 4. 14: vi mime tvā payasvatīṁ devānāṁ dhenuṁ sudughām anapasphurantīm: indraḥ somam pibatu kṣemo astu naḥ, which accompanies the measuring out of a vedi in shape of a cow. In Vāit. 15. 7; 28. 23, it is used in a like manner; and so also in Kāuç. 137. 10, in preparing for the ājyatantra; ⌊cf. also note to 137. 4⌋.

28. Agni, kindled, being kindled, increased with ghee, offered to with ghee — let the overpowering, all-overpowering Agni slay them who are my rivals.

This verse (though there are others having the same pratīka) is doubtless the one quoted (next after vs. 1) in Kāuç. 49. 19, to accompany the laying of bonds upon the "boat" there treated of; ⌊rather, the laying of sticks with strings on them upon the fire: Caland, p. 173⌋. The description of the Anukr. strangely forbids us to make the elision -dho 'gnīḥ in a.

29. Let him slay them, burn [them] away, — the enemy (ári) who fights us; by the flesh-eating fire do we burn away our rivals.

Ppp. reads in a enāṁ; we require enaṁ, as antecedent to b, which, as the verse now stands, seems to describe the subject of the verbs in a. Ppp. has also agnis for aris in b.

30. Do thou, O Indra, having arms, smite them down downward with the thunderbolt; then my rivals have I taken to myself with Agni's brightnesses (téjas).

Ppp. puts the verse after our 31, and reads at the end ā dadhe. ⌊Or ā́diṣi may be referred to dā 'cut' + ā: so W. in a ms. note to his Index, and so BR. But BR's forms from vi. 104 are referred by W. to dā 'tie.'⌋

31. O Agni, make our rivals fall below us; stagger the truculent (utpípāna) fellow, O Brihaspati; O Indra-and-Agni, O Mitra-and-Varuṇa, let them fall below [us], impotent in their fury.

Lit. 'not making their fury effective against' us. The Anukr. apparently understands the structure of the verse as 12 + 14 : 8 + 6 + 8 = 48; but there is no good reason for dividing the last redundant pāda into two. Ppp. reads utapidānaṁ (for utpipānam ⌊discussed AJP. xii. 441⌋) in b.

32. Do thou, O heavenly sun, arising, smite down my rivals; smite them down with the stone; let them go to lowest darkness.

Ppp. appears to read avāi 'nāṁ raçmibhir jahi rātrīṇāṁ tamasā vadhīs taṁ hantv adhamaṁ tamaḥ. ⌊We had our d at x. 3. 9 d.⌋

33. The young (vatsá) of the virā́j, the bull of prayers (matí), mounted, bright-backed, the atmosphere; with ghee they sing (arc) the song (arká) unto the young; him, being bráhman, they increase with bráhman.

Ppp. combines in b -pṛṣṭho ant-. TB. (ii. 8. 8^9) has a corresponding verse, but with numerous variants: pitā́ virā́jām ṛṣabhó rayīṇā́m antárikṣaṁ viçvárūpa ā́ viveça: tám arkāír abhy àrcanti vatsám bráhma sántam bráhmaṇā vardháyantaḥ. ⌊Bloomfield, AJP. xii. 441, would emend arkám to aktám; but the TB. variant is very much against it.⌋ Our verse is quoted in Kāuç. 12. 4, at the end of a charm for securing one's wishes.

34. Both ascend thou to heaven and ascend to earth; both ascend to kingdom and ascend to property; both ascend to progeny and ascend to immortality; make thyself contiguous with the ruddy one.

The verse is quoted in Vāit. 13. 5 to accompany the leading up of the cow that is to be exchanged for the soma-plant.

35. The kingdom-bearing gods who go to surround (abhítas) the sun — in concord with them let the ruddy one, with favoring mind, assign kingdom to thee.

The combination tā́ṅṣ ṭe is quoted as example under Prāt. ii. 84. The verse (7 + 8 : 9 + 11 : or 8 in a, if we resolve deva-ā́ or rāṣṭr-a-) is far too irregular to be defined simply as an upariṣṭādbṛhatī.

36. Sacrifices purified by bráhman carry thee up; yellow (hári) roadsters draw (vah) thee; thou shinest over (ati-ruc) across the ocean, the sea.

The verse might better be called virāj than nicṛt (11 + 11 : 12). Ppp. reads in b abhyaktuṁ (for adhvagato); and in c -se arṇavam, as do some of our mss. (O.R.T.K.). ⌊Pādas a and b recur below, vs. 43.⌋

37. On the ruddy one are set (çritá) heaven-and-earth, on the goods-conquering, kine-conquering, booty-conquering one, of whom the births are a thousand and seven; may I speak thy navel on the range of existence.

Ppp. reads for b vasujid gojit saṁdhanājiti, and in c draviṇāni saptatir. The obscure last pāda is identical with vs. 14 c.

38. Glorious thou goest to the directions and quarters, glorious of cattle and of people (carṣaṇí); glorious in the lap of earth, of Aditi, may I become pleasant (cā́ru) like Savitar.

Ppp. reads nu instead of ca in a, and asmi instead of bhūyāsam in d; and it combines pṛthivyā 'di- in c. There is a deficiency of a syllable, unnoticed in the Anukr., in a, unless we resolve ya-āsi.

39. Being yonder, thou knowest here; being on this side, thou seest those things; from this side they see the shining space (rócana), the inspired sun in the sky.

Ppp. begins c with yataṣ paç-.

40. Thou, a god, molestest (mṛc) the gods; thou goest about within the sea (arṇavá); they kindle the same fire; it the high (pára) poets know.

'It,' i.e. 'the fire' (tám). Ppp. reads marcayati and carati. ⌊Bloomfield, AJP. xii. 437, emends to devám arcayasi; but Ppp., and the antithesis of a and b, admirably suggested by Deussen's dennoch, are in favor of marc-.⌋

41. Below the distant, thus beyond the lower, bearing her calf with her foot, the cow hath stood up; whitherwards, to what quarter, hath she forsooth gone away? where giveth she birth? for [it is] not in this herd.

This is a repetition of ix. 9. 17, and, as there are two successive verses beginning with aváḥ páreṇa, this one is quoted here in the mss. with the unusual expression aváḥ páreṇé 'ti pū́rvā. ⌊The Anukr. doubtless balances the extra syllable in a by counting kúa as one syllable in d.⌋

42. One-footed, two-footed [is] she, four-footed; having become eight-footed, nine-footed, thousand-syllabled, a series of existence; out from her flow apart the oceans.

This verse is the pādas b–e of ix. 10. 21 (RV. i. 164. 41 b–d, 42 a) ⌊see under ix. 10. 21 for variants⌋. It and the preceding are very little in place in our hymn. ⌊With d cf. 3. 2 b, below.⌋

43. Mounting the sky, immortal, do thou favor my words; sacrifices purified by bráhman carry thee up; yellow roadsters draw thee.

Pādas b and c are identical with 36 a, b. Instead of adhvagatas, Ppp. reads ghṛtaṁ pibantaṁ. Bp. accents prá : áva.

44. I know that of thine, O immortal one, namely (yát) thy climb (ākrámaṇa) in the sky, thy station (sadhástha) in the highest firmament.

Vyòmani would make a more regular paroṣṇih, but the Anukr. takes no notice of the deficiency.

45. The sun overlooks (ati-paç) the sky, the sun the earth, the sun the waters; the sun, the one eye of what exists, hath mounted the great sky.

The verse is made in Vāit. 16. 11 to accompany the antaryāmahoma after sunrise.

46. The wide ones (urvī́) were the enclosures; the earth took shape as sacrificial hearth; there the ruddy one set (ā-dhā) these two fires, cold and heat.

47. Having set cold and heat, having made the mountains sacrificial posts (yū́pa), having rain as sacrificial butter, the two fires of the sky-finding ruddy one performed sacrifice (yaj).

The Anukr. appears to ratify the resolution kṛtu-ā́ in b. Ppp., in this verse as later, combines agnī ''jāte. ⌊For 46, Hillebrandt, Ved. Mythol. i. 179, cites ÇB. i. 2. 57.⌋

48. The fire of the sky-finding ruddy one is kindled with bráhman; therefrom heat, therefrom cold, therefrom the sacrifice was born.

The majority of mss. read correctly yajñò 'jāy- at the end; the rest vary between -ñó aj- and -ñò aj-. Ppp. reads -ño aj-; and, in b, samāhitaḥ for sam idhyate.

49. The two fires [are] increasing by bráhman, increased with bráhman, offered to with bráhman: kindled with bráhman, the two fires of the sky-finding ruddy one performed sacrifice.

Ppp. reads for a brahmaṇā 'gnis saṁvidāno, and in b -ddho, -hutaḥ, and again combines in c agnī ''jāte. With b compare vs. 28 b.

50. The one is all set in truth, the other is kindled in the waters: kindled with etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b samāhitas ⌊again: cf. 48⌋ for sam idhyate, and adds another pāda: satye adbhis samāhitaḥ.

51. What one the wind adorns about, or what one Indra, Brahmaṇaspati: kindled with etc. etc.

Ppp. omits vā in b.

52. Having shaped (kl̥p) the earth as sacrificial hearth, having made the sky sacrificial fee, then having made heat his fire, the ruddy one made all that has soul, with rain as sacrificial butter.

53. Rain as sacrificial butter, heat as fire, earth as sacrificial hearth took shape; there, with songs (gír), the fire shaped these mountains aloft.

Ppp. reads 'gnir in a, and some of our mss. (P.M.p.m.W.) give the same. P.M.W. also have in common the blunder bhū́mipr ak- in b. It is doubtless by a loss of part of its text that the Anukr. does not define vss. ⌊57–58⌋ as anuṣṭubh, although it describes a minor feature of vs. 57, taken as an anuṣṭubh. ⌊With 52, cf. vs. 46.⌋

54. Having shaped [them] aloft by songs, the ruddy one said to the earth: in thee let this all be born, what is (bhūtá) or what is to be.

Ppp. reads at the end bhavyam.

55. That first sacrifice was born [as] the one that is, that is to be; from that was born this all, whatsoever shines out (vi-ruc) here, brought (ā-bhr̥) by the ruddy one [as] seer.

Ppp. ends the hymn with this verse, although vs. 58 is found in another place. It combines jajñe 'daṁ, as we are doubtless to read, though not with the sanction of the Anukr., which calls the pāda br̥hatī. ⌊Cf. iv. 23. 7.⌋

56. Whoever both kicks a cow with the foot and urinates in face of the sun — of such a one I hew off (vraçc) thy root; thou shalt not further cast (kr̥) shadow.

⌊Cf. the note on the vs. concerning posture in urination at vii. 102: and add that Buddhaghosa, in his comment on the description of the Acelakas, at Dīgha Nikāya, viii. 14 (as reported by Davids, Translation, p. 227), speaks of the standing posture as wrong. — As to making water with face towards the sun, cf. MBh. xiii. 104. 75 (5029), and note to Manu iv. 48 in my Reader, p. 349, and the references there given, especially the reference to Jolly's Viṣṇu, SBE. vii. 194 f. — As for the loss of the shadow, cf. the Peter Schlemihl story; also Jātaka, i. 102^{9}; vi. 337^{11}.⌋

The character of this and the following verses shows that Ppp. has reason for not making them a part of the hymn. This verse makes its appearance in Kāuç. 49. 26, at the conclusion of a series of witchcraft ceremonies. ⌊For the theoretical k of pratyáñk, see note to vi. 51. 1.⌋

57. Thou that goest past me shading me, and between me and the fire, I hew off thy root; thou shalt not further cast shadow.

The connection appears to demand this pregnant rendering of abhichāyáṁ 'so as to cast thy shadow on' (so also Ludwig). It is easy to read b as a regular anuṣṭubh pāda, though the Anukr. allows it only six syllables.

58. Whoso this day, O heavenly sun, shall go between both thee and me — on him we wipe off evil-dreaming, pollution, and difficulties.

This verse is found in Ppp. xx., which reads for c tasmin duṣvapnyaṁ sarvaṁ.

59. Let us not go forth from the road, nor, O Indra, from the sacrifice with soma; let not the niggards stand between us.

That is, between us and something else, so as to cut us off from our desire or object. The verse is, without variant, RV. x. 57. 1, and found also in JB. iii. 168. It is used once in Vāit. (18. 8), and several times in Kāuç. (54. 18; 82. 6; 89. 11; also by the schol. under 42. 15; 58. 17).

60. What line, accomplisher of the sacrifice, is stretched clear to the gods, that, sacrificed unto, may we attain.

The verse is RV. x. 57. 2, which reads at the end naçīmahi. It is used by the schol. to Kāuç. 58. 17, with vs. 59, in the ceremony of name-giving.

2. To the sun.

[(Brahman. — ādhyātmam; rohitādityadevatyam. trāiṣṭubham:) 1, 12–15, 39–41. anuṣṭubh; 2, 3, 8, 43. jagatī; 10. āstārapañkti; 11. bṛhatīgarbhā; 16–24. ārṣī gāyatrī; 25. kakummaty āstārapañkti; 26. purodvyatijāgatā bhurig jagatī; 27. virāḍ jagatī; 29. bārhatagarbhā 'nuṣṭubh; 30. 5-p. uṣṇigbṛhatīgarbhā 'tijagatī; 34. ārṣī pañkti; 37. 5-p. virāḍgarbhā jagatī; 44, 45. jagatī (44. 4-p. purahçākvarā bhurij; 45. atijāgatagarbhā).]

Found also in Pāipp. xviii. Only twice (vs. 1) quoted in Kāuç., but several times (eight different verses) by Vāit.

Translated: Ludwig, p. 540; Henry, 8, 36; Griffith, ii. 143. — In this hymn, the sun is mentioned by the name róhita only in vss. 25 and 39–41. Verses 39–41 are translated also by Muir, v. 396; Scherman, p. 75 (with vss. 25–26); Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 213 (also vss. 25–26 at p. 226). — The verses 16–24, which are RV. i. 50. 1–9, are translated by the RV. translators, and are commented and in part translated by me in Skt. Reader, p. 362–3.

1. The bright (çukrá) shining lights (ketú) of him go up in the sky — of the men-watching Āditya, him of great courses (-vratá), liberal (mīḍhváṅs).

Ppp. reads in d mahīvr-. Kāuç. 58. 22 prescribes the use apparently of the whole hymn (with xvi. 3 and xvii.) in an act of worship to the rising sun, in a ceremony for long life; also (with the same and other hymns, and xiii. 1. 25) in 18. 25, in the citrākarman: see the note to 1. 25 above. Vāit. 9. 16 uses it in the cāturmāsya ceremony when turning toward the sun in the east.

2. [Him,] shining (svar) with the brightness (arcís) of the foreknowing quarters, well-winged, flying swift in the ocean (arṇavá) — we would praise the sun, the shepherd of existence, who with his rays shines unto all the quarters.

The Pet. Lex. (followed by Henry) emends prajñā́nām to prajñā́nam, with much plausibility; yet it is opposed by x. 7. 34, díço yáç cakré prajñā́nīḥ. Ppp. reads prajñānaṁ svadayanto arc-.; and it combines in d diçā "bhāti. The verse lacks two syllables of being a proper jagatī.

3. In that thou goest swiftly eastward, westward, at will (svadháyā), makest by magic (māyā́) the two days of diverse form — that, O Āditya, [is] great, that thy great fame (çrávas), that thou alone art born about the whole world (bhū́man).

'The two days,' i.e. 'day and night.' The first pāda is triṣṭubh.

4. The inspired, hasting (taráṇi), shining one, whom seven numerous (bahú) yellow steeds (harít) draw, whom out of the liquid (?srutá) Atri conducted up the sky — thee here they see going around upon thy race.

Half of our mss. appear plainly to read stutā́t in c, but the apparent distinction is of no value; sr and st are virtually one in ms. use. Ppp. helps to establish sru-, by reading, for c, d, çrutād divam atri divam anyanāya taṁ tvā paçyema paryantim ājim. GB. i. 2. 17 has c (the published text reads stutād), with vs. 12 a, b, as if a verse. ⌊As for the Atri story, cf. my essay on RV. v. 40 in Festgruss an Roth, p. 187. For the construction of ājím, see Ved. Stud. ii. 261.⌋

5. Let them not damage thee going around upon thy race; happily do thou cross the difficulties quickly; when, O sun, thou goest to both sky and divine earth, measuring out day-and-night.

Or, 'sky' and 'earth' may be joint objects of 'measuring' (so Henry, and apparently Ludwig). Ppp. reads paryantam in a, and sugena durgam in b. We have to make the, in its situation, awkward resolution tu-ā in a in order to fill out the meter; ⌊or -yāantam ?⌋.

6. Well-being, O sun, [be] to thy chariot for its moving, wherewith thou goest at once about both borders (ánta) — which thy yellow steeds, of excellent draught, draw: a hundred horses, or else seven, numerous.

'At once' (sadyás), doubtless 'on one and the same day'; 'borders,' i.e. 'horizons.' Half the mss. read báhiṣṭhās, both in this and in the next verse. Ppp. has in a carato rathāsi, and in b paryāsi;* and for d, instead of repeating 7 d, it gives tam ā roha sukham āsy açvam. ⌊"Numerous" is fem.; and we may think of "horses" as fem.⌋ *⌊For the relation of pariyāsi to paryāsi, cf. that of -āni yasya to -āṅsy asya, above, x. 7. 20, and see Gram. § 233 a.⌋

7. Mount (adhi-sthā), O sun, thine easy-running chariot, rich in rays, pleasant, well-horsed, powerful (?vājín), which thy yellow steeds, of excellent draught, draw: a hundred horses, or else seven, numerous.

All our mss. accent sū́rya in a; our edition emends to sūrya. Ppp. has in b syonosyavahnim. The Anukr. perhaps regards the redundant syllable in b as balanced by the deficiency in a. ⌊Cf. 6 c, d.⌋

8. The sun hath yoked in his chariot, in order to go, his seven great yellow steeds, golden-skinned; the bright one hath been freed from the dimness (?rájas) in the distance; shaking away the darkness, the god hath mounted the sky.

Ppp. reads çūras for sūryas in a, and çakras for çukras in c, and apparently ayuñkta in b. The verse is very ill defined as simple jagatī; the true reading in b would seem to be hiraṇyatvacas.

9. The god hath come up with great show (ketú); he hath wasted away the darkness, hath set up (abhi-çri) the light; that hero, heavenly eagle, son of Aditi, hath looked abroad unto all beings.

Abhi-çri, more literally, 'affix, fasten on' (to the sky). ⌊For the form açrāit, see Gram. § 889 a, and note to vi. 32. 2. For avṛk, Gram. § 832 a.⌋ Ppp. reads in c sthaviras for sa vīras, and has a curious d: ādityāṣ putraṁ nāthagām abhayām atītā.

10. Rising, thou extendest thy rays; thou adornest thyself with all forms; thou illuminest (vi-bhā) with might (?krátu) both oceans, encompassing all worlds, shining.

Ppp. has an altogether different b: prajās sarvā vi paçyasi. ⌊It may be that "adornest" is a slip on W's part. Cf. Henry's note, p. 37–38.⌋

11. They two move on one after the other by magic; two playing young ones go about the ocean; the one looks abroad upon all beings; yellow steeds draw the other with golden [trappings?].

The first three pādas are identical with vii. 81. 1 a–c (repeated at xiv. 1. 23), and are found in other texts: see the note to that verse; the last pāda is peculiar, and, as applying only to the sun, spoils the description of the pair of luminaries, sun and moon, which the verse sets out to make. Henry regards the daily and the nightly sun as intended, and the hāiraṇyas as the stars, by means of which the latter finds his way back to the eastern horizon. It would have been better to read yāto 'rṇavám here, as in vii. 81. 1, since the majority of our saṁhitā-mss. (all save Bs.E.) give it in this place also.

12. Atri maintained thee in the sky, O sun, to make the month; thou goest well-maintained, heating, looking down upon all things that exist.

All our mss. read in b sū́ryā, as if we had here the compound sūryāmāsá; the pada-mss. have sū́ryā : mā́sāya; the correction to sū́rya seems unavoidable. GB., which has the first two pādas (see note to vs. 4), also gives sūryā-; Ppp. also has it; and, for d, svar bhūtā viçākaçat ⌊so Roth: perhaps a slip for vicāk-⌋.

13. Thou rushest alike (?sam-ṛṣ) to both borders, as a calf to two joint mothers; surely (nanú), that bráhman yon gods have long known.

A naïve extension of the usual naïve figure of the calf: as if he had two mothers, to each of which he showed equal attachment. Bráhman, apparently 'sacred mystery' (so Henry). In d, lit. 'know of old from now.'

14. What is set (çritá) along the ocean, that the sun desires to gain (san); great is stretched out his road, which is both eastern and western.

The pada-text has in b sisāsati ⌊misprinted and corrected by SPP.⌋, and the passage is quoted as an example under Prāt. ii. 91; iv. 29, 82. Ppp. reads adhi for anu in a.

15. That one he attains completely (sam-āp) with his swiftnesses; that he desires not to neglect (?apa-cikits); by that [men] do not appropriate the gods' draught of immortality (amṛ́ta).

Apa-cikits, lit. 'desire to think away from,' with abl.; the expression is found only here. The logic of d is not obvious; Henry supplies 'the demons' as subject of áva rundhate; Ludwig renders it as a singular. Ppp. reads jigitsati in b; and, in c etc., bhakṣaṇaṁ devānān naṁ va ru-; bhakṣaṇam is an improvement; the meter of c halts badly without it.

16. This heavenly Jātavedas the lights (ketú) draw (vah) up, for every one to see the sun.

Or sū́ryam may be in apposition with jātávedasam. 'Draw,' i.e. as horses do. This verse, with the eight that follow, constitute RV. i. 50. 1–9, in the same order of verses, and with few variants; they are also all found in one or more other Vedic texts: this one in SV. (i. 31), VS. (7. 41; 8. 41; 33. 31), TS. (i. 2. 8^2; 4. 43^1), and MS. (i. 3. 37) — in all, without a variant. The whole hymn ⌊i.e. vss. 16–24⌋ is repeated further in xx. 47. 13–21. This verse is used three times in Vāit.: at 21. 23; at 33. 5 (with the following five verses); and at 39. 16 (with the following two verses). ⌊The pratīka is cited at MGS. i. 2. 4. The frequency of the citation or occurrence of the verse may be judged by consulting MGS. Index, p. 148.⌋

Or c may possibly mean 'for all to behold the sun.' The remaining verses (17–24) of the RV. hymn ⌊i.e. i. 50. 1–9⌋ are found in SV. only in the Nāigeya appendix to the first book; this one (i. 634) has no variant. Henry renders aktúbhis 'with the night.'

18. The lights (ketú), the rays of him have been seen abroad among the peoples, like shining fires.

Of the other texts, only VS. (viii. 40) follows RV. in reading at the beginning ádṛçram; the others (SV. i. 635; MS. i. 3. 33) agree with our text.

19. Speedy, conspicuous to all, light-making art thou, O sun; thou shinest unto everything, O bright space (rocaná).

All our mss. read at the end rocana, save Bs., which has rocanam, and M., rocanám, and the translation follows them, although the word is a senseless variant of rocanám, which is given by RV., and by all the other texts: SV. (i. 636), VS. (xxxiii. 36), TS. (i. 4. 31^1), TA. (iii. 16. 1), and MS. (iv. 10. 6). Ppp. has rocanā.

20. In front of the clans of the gods, in front of those of men thou risest; in front of every one, for seeing the sky (svàr).

RV. reads at end of b mā́nuṣān, and SV. (i. 637) has the same.

21. With whom [as] eye thou, O purifying Varuṇa, seest him that busies himself among the people (jánān).

SV. (i. 638) reads at the beginning yéna; VS. (xxxiii. 32) agrees with RV. and our text.

22. Thou goest through the sky, the broad welkin (rájas), fashioning (mā) the day with [thy] rays, seeing the generations (jánman), O sun.

RV. reads áhā in b. SV. (i. 639) has the same, and also úd for ví at the beginning, and rájaḥ p-. Henry again renders aktúbhis 'with the night.'

23. Seven yellow steeds, O heavenly sun, draw in the chariot thee the flame-haired, the out-looking.

RV. reads at the end vicakṣaṇa, and SV. (i. 641) and TS. (ii. 4. 14^4) agree with it. MS. (iv. 10. 6) has instead purupriya, and, in the preceding word, çocíṣk-.

24. The sun hath yoked the seven neat (çundhyú) daughters of the chariot; with them, [who are] self-yoked, he goeth.

SV. (i. 640) reads in b naptryàḥ, and TB. (ii. 4. 5^4), according to its commentary, has ⌊naptriyaḥ⌋, although ná príyaḥ is printed instead in the text ⌊of Calcutta, and naptríyaḥ in the Poona text, p. 518⌋. So also in c, ⌊in the Calc. ed.⌋ the printed text has yāsi, but the comm. yāti; ⌊while in the Poona ed. both text and comm. give yāti⌋.

25. The ruddy one hath mounted the sky with penance, [he] rich in penance; he comes to the womb (yóni), he is born again; he hath become over-lord of the gods.

Ppp. reads in a ā 'kramīt. The Anukr. regards the verse as one of four pādas (8 + 6 : 12 + 11); but the first two are plainly one triṣṭubh pāda, with tápasā intruded into it. Rohita appears here for the first time in this second hymn, instead of simply the sun; nor do we meet him elsewhere, save in vss. 39–41.

26. He who belongs to all men (-carṣaṇí) and has faces on all sides, who has hands on all sides and palms on all sides — he brings together with his (two) arms, together with his wings (pl.), generating heaven-and-earth, sole god.

The verse is, with considerable variations, RV. x. 81. 3, found also in VS. (xvii. 19: same text as RV.), TS. (iv. 6. 2^4), TA. (x. 1. 3), and MS. (ii. 10. 2). None of the other texts has yás in b, and only MS. in a; they begin viçvátaçcakṣur (but MS. yó viçvá-cakṣur); in b, RV.VS. begin with viçvátobāhur, TS.TA.MS. -hasta, and all end with viçvátaspāt; in c, for bhárati, RV. (and VS.) has dhámati, TS.TA. námati, MS. ádhamat; in d, RV.VS.MS. give dyā́vābhū́mī. Ppp. agrees with RV. in b–d. The meter, fairly regular in RV., is distorted greatly in our text (13 + 13 : 11 + 12 = 49); the Anukr. gives an acceptable definition of it. The sense also is much defaced in the first line as we have it. Vāit. 29. 14 uses the verse to accompany a certain graha in the building of the fire-altar.

27. The one-footed strode out more than the two-footed; the two-footed falls upon (abhi-i) the three-footed from behind; the two-footed strode out more than the six-footed; they sit together [about] the body of the one-footed.

Sam-ās has no good right to an accusative object; and one of our mss. (D.) reads tanvàm, loc., which would be grammatically an acceptable emendation; as regards the sense, that is too obscure for us to derive any help from it. Pādas b and c are wanting in Ppp., probably by accident. The first half-verse nearly agrees with RV. x. 117. 8 a, b, which (whole) verse corresponds to ⌊the first half of⌋ our 3. 25 below: see the note there. It is only here and in 3. 25 that we find the accentuation dvípāt and trípāt. ⌊The pratīka is quoted by GB. ii. 9, p. 28, l. 19.⌋ The description of the Anukr. implies an unfounded rejection of one of the resolutions abhí eti or tanú-am.

28. When, about to go unwearied, he hath approached (ā-sthā) his yellow steeds, he, shining (ruc), makes for himself two forms; rising rich in lights (ketú-), overpowering the dim spaces (rájas), thou illuminest (vi-bhā), O Āditya, all the advances.

Ppp. has for b divi rūpaṁ ⌊kṛṇuṣe; it further combines viçvā "ditya in d⌋. ⌊Pāda b is identical with 42 b.⌋ ⌊Pischel translates the vs., Ved. Stud. ii. 76.⌋

29. Verily (báṭ), great art thou, O sun; verily, O Āditya, great art thou; great is the greatness of thee the great one; thou, O Āditya, art great.

This verse is RV. viii. 90 (or 101). 11, and is found also in VS. (xxxiii. 39) and SV. (i. 276; ii. 1138), while its pratīka is given by TB. (i. 4. 5^3: very strange, since the whole verse occurs in no Tāittirīya text). RV. and VS. read, for c, d, mahás te sató mahimā́ panasyate 'ddhā́ deva mahā́ṅ asi; ⌊the vs. is repeated in RV. form at xx. 58. 3;⌋ and SV. the same, except paniṣṭama mahnā́ for panasyate 'ddhā́.

30. Thou shinest (ruc) in the sky, thou shinest in the atmosphere, O flying one; on the earth thou shinest, thou shinest within the waters; both oceans thou hast penetrated (vi-āp) with thy sheen (rúci); a god, O god, art thou, a heaven-conquering bull (mahiṣá).

Ppp. reads at the end svarvit. The Anukr. understands the structure of the verse as 12 + 9 + 7 : 12 + 11 = 51; but it is plainly a mixed triṣṭubh-jagatī, rather, with patañga intruded at the end of a, and possibly one rócase in b. All the mss. accent pátañga, because they reckon it, with the Anukr., as first word in a pāda; it should properly be patañga.

31. Hitherward from afar, extended (pra-yam) in mid-route, swift, inspired, flying, he the flying one, perceived (?vícitta) [as] Vishṇu, surpassing (adhi-sthā) with strength — he overpowers with his show (ketú) all that stirs.

Ppp. reads at the beginning arvāk. ⌊'Perceived as Viṣṇu': cf. note to xiii. 4. 46.⌋

32. Wondrous, understanding (cikitvā́ṅs), a bull (mahiṣá), an eagle, making to shine the two firmaments (ródasī), the atmosphere — day-and-night, clothing themselves about with the sun, lengthen out all his heroisms.

The adjectives in a, b are nom. masc. sing., and the shift of construction in the second half-verse is a notable one. Ppp. combines suparṇā "roc-, and reads rodasīm in b. The verse is used in Vāit. 33. 8 in a sacrificial session, with the remaining verses to the end of the hymn. Ppp. puts our vs. 33 before this. ⌊The first pāda is nearly the same as 42 c.⌋ ⌊Henry discusses the vs. in Mém. de la Soc. de linguistique, x. 86.⌋

33. Keen (tigmá), shining out (vi-bhrāj), sharpening himself, granting the helpful (?araṁgamá) advances, a winged one full of light, a vigor-bestowing bull (mahiṣá), he hath approached (ā-sthā) all the directions, arranging (kḷp).

Ppp. reads in a–b tanvaç çiçāno 'raṁgamāsun dhravato rarāṇāḥ, and in d combines viçvā "sthāt. ⌊Pischel translates the vs., Ved. Stud. ii. 75–6.⌋ ⌊See my discussion of accusatives pl. fem. in -āsas and of this passage in Noun-Inflection, p. 363.⌋

34. Wondrous front [and] show (ketú) of the gods, the sun, full of light, going up the directions (pradíç), the day-maker, bright (çukrá), hath overpassed with brightnesses (dyumná) the glooms (támas) [and] all difficulties.

This verse and the next are repeated as xx. 107. 13, 14. The definition of this one by the Anukr. ⌊as 40 syllables is right from its point of view; but the verse⌋ is evidently meant for a triṣṭubh, and can easily be read into a respectable one, according to the low standard of AV. triṣṭubhs, by a few judicious resolutions. The harshness and obscurity of the constructions in a, b are indications of a corrupted text; Henry renders pradíças by 'toward the celestial regions,' Ludwig by 'from the horizon'; the translation above simply adheres to the usual sense of the word. Verses 34–36 are directed in Vāit. 39. 16 to be used alternatively in the praise of the sun; in 21. 23, the pratīka, namely citraṁ devānām (quoted with vs. 16), might apply either to this verse or to the next.

35. The wondrous front of the gods hath arisen, the eye of Mitra, of Varuṇa, of Agni; he hath filled heaven-and-earth, the atmosphere; the sun is the soul of the moving creation (jágat) and of the stationary (tasthivā́ṅs).

The verse is RV. i. 115. 1 (only variant ā́ : aprāḥ in c), and it is found almost everywhere else: thus, in SV. (i. 630: Nāigeya appendix), VS. (vii. 42; xiii. 46), TS. (i. 4. 43^1; ii. 4. 14^4), TB. (ii. 8. 7^3), TA. (i. 7. 6; ii. 13. 1), MS. (i. 3. 37), AA. (iii. 2. 3); all have the same text as RV.; and so, apparently, has Ppp., ⌊combining, however, āprādyā-⌋. ⌊Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 213, interprets the vs.⌋ The quotation in Vāit. 33. 6 evidently applies to the verse as AV. xx. 107. 14. ⌊In d, jágas tas- is a misprint for jágatas tas-: an interesting instance of most modern haplography.⌋

36. Flying on high (uccā́), the red eagle, in the midst of the sky hasting, shining — may we see thee, whom men call the impeller (savitṛ́), the unfailing light which Atri found.

Ppp. has the better reading paçyema in c. ⌊Restore the lost accent-mark under the ṇim of tará̱ṇim.⌋

37. To the eagle running on the back of the sky, to the son of Aditi, I, frightened, approach (upa-yā), desiring refuge; do thou, O sun, lengthen out for us a long life-time; may we take no harm; may we be in thy favor.

The verse is obviously a regular triṣṭubh, with nāthákāmas intruded in b: its description by the Anukr. ⌊gives the verse 48 syllables; but how pañcapadā virāḍgarbhā is to be understood is not clear⌋. ⌊The verse is quoted in Vāit. 18. 7, in the agniṣṭoma.⌋

38. A thousand days' journey are expanded the wings of him, of the yellow swan flying to heaven; he, putting all the gods in his breast, goes viewing together all existences.

We had the verse above as x. 8. 18, and it is repeated again below as 3. 14. Ppp. reads in c sa viçvān devān.

39. The ruddy one became time, the ruddy one in the beginning Prajāpati; the ruddy one [is] face (mouth?) of the sacrifices; the ruddy one brought the bright sky (svàr).

Ppp. reads in a loko 'bhavat (our 40 a), and, for d, rohito jyotir ucyate.

40. The ruddy one became the world; the ruddy one overheated the sky; the ruddy one with his rays goes about over the earth, the ocean.

Or (b) 'went heating across the sky' (so Henry). Ppp. reads in a bhūto 'bhavat, omits b, and has bhūmyaṁ in c ⌊cf. its nāryaṁ for nārīm, xiv. 1. 59, note⌋.

41. All the quarters did the ruddy one, over-lord of the sky, go about upon; the sky, the ocean, also the earth — all that exists doth he defend.

Ppp. has in a (better) saṁ carati; in b it combines rohito adh-; in c it has again bhūmyaṁ; in d, sarvalokān vi.

42. He, mounting, glowing [and] unwearied, the great [spaces], makes for himself, shining (ruc), two forms; wondrous, understanding, ⌊bull,⌋ wind-going (??), when he shines out (vi-bhā) upon as many worlds [as there are].

That is, 'upon all existing worlds.' The second pāda is 28 b above; the third, nearly 32 a. The rendering of vātamāyās (p. vā́tam○āyāḥ) in c is purely to fill up the text. Henry emends to vā́tam ā́pas; Ludwig renders 'possessing wind-magic.' The Anukr. passes without notice the redundant syllable in c. Ppp. has a quite different version of much of the verse: ārohaṅ chakro vṛhatīr yuṁktor amartyāṣ kṛṇuṣe vīryāṇi: divyas suparṇo muhiṣaṁ vātaraṅhāya: sarvāṅl lokāṅ abhi etc. This would suggest vātaraṅhās 'wind-swift' as emendation of vātamāyās.

43. The one he falls upon (abhi-i), the other he casts about — the bull, arranging with day-and-night; we, imploring, call upon the track-finding sun, dwelling in the welkin (rájas).

In the very obscure first half-verse, the two anyat's may be subjects instead (so Ludwig and Henry), asyate being taken as passive — which would seem more natural, save that then the nominative in b is left without construction. Ppp. reads in a–b eti sadyo 'yaṁ vasāvam aho-, and in d nāthamānāḥ. The verse (12 + 12 : 11 + 12 = 47) is a very irregular "jagatī."

44. The earth-filling bull (mahiṣá), track of the implorer, of undamaged sight, hath encompassed the all; beholding (sam-paç) the all, beneficent, reverend, let him hear this which I say.

'Track' (in b), i.e. facilitation or facilitator of progress. Mahiṣas is an evident intrusion, and the verse is strictly a triṣṭubh with redundant syllables. Ppp. reads in a pṛthivipro m. bādhamānasya; for b, adbhutacakṣuṣ pari saṁ babhūva; and, for d, çivāyā nas tanvā çarma yacchāt, which is found nowhere in our text. All our mss. ⌊except D.⌋ agree in accenting babhū̂va, for no discoverable reason. ⌊Five of SPP's authorities (as well as W's D.) read babhūva without accent.⌋

45. The greatness of him exceeds (pári) the earth, the ocean; shining abroad with light, it exceeds (pári) the sky, the atmosphere; beholding the all, beneficent, reverend, let him hear this which I say.

Ppp. again objects to our second half-verse, and gives instead: ahorātrābhyāṁ saha saṁvasānā uṣā nīyus pratarād aviṣṭam. The "jagatī" is again a very rough one ⌊as the Anukr. in part admits⌋. ⌊W. interlines "encompasses" as an alternative to "exceeds."⌋

46. Agni hath been awakened by the kindling of men to meet the dawn coming like a milch-cow; like young (yahvá) [birds?] rising forth to a branch, the lights (bhānú) go forth unto the firmament (nā́ka).

Ppp. reads in d sasṛje. The verse is RV. v. 1. 1, and is found also in other texts: SV. (i. 73; ii. 1096), VS. (xv. 24), TS. (iv. 4. 4^1), and MS. (ii. 13. 7), everywhere without a variant. ⌊SV. (both occurrences) reads sasrate in d; TS. accents achá at the end.⌋ It is quoted in Vāit. 29. 8, apparently in connection with the verses that follow it in RV. (iti trāiṣṭubhīḥ).

⌊Here ends the second anuvāka, with 1 hymn and 46 verses. The quoted Anukr. says ṣaṭ catvāriṅçat.⌋

3. To the sun (with imprecation on the evil-doer).

[(Brahman.—ādhyātmam; rohitādityadevatyam. trāiṣṭubham.) 1. 4-av. 8-p. ākṛti; 2–4. 3-av. 6-p. (2, 3. aṣṭi, 2. bhurij; 4. atiçākvaragarbhā dhṛti); 5–7. 4-av. 7-p. (5, 6. çākvarātiçākvaragarbhā prakṛti; 7. anuṣṭubgarbhā 'tidhṛti); 8. 3-av. 6-p. atyaṣṭi; 9–19. 4-av. (9–12, 15, 17. 7-p. bhurig atidhṛti, 15. nicṛt, 17. kṛti; 13, 14, 16, 18, 19. 8-p., 13, 14. vikṛti, 16, 18, 19. ākṛti, 19. bhurij); 20, 22. 3-av. 6-p. atyaṣṭi; 21, 23–25. 4-av. 8-p. (24. 7-p. kṛti; 21. ākṛti; 23, 25. vikṛti).] *

Of this hymn only one verse is found in Pāipp., namely vs. 10 in iv. Vāit. makes use of no part of it; and Kāuç. ⌊49. 19⌋ only of the first verse. ⌊Caland, p. 173, understands the whole hymn to be intended at 49. 19; and takes 49. 24 and 25 as referring to vss. 6 and 7 of this hymn.⌋ * ⌊The definition of vs. 26 (anuṣṭubh) appears to be omitted.—The individual pādas of this hymn are largely of genuine triṣṭubh measure and cadence, occasionally jagatī; and this is possibly the intention of the "trāiṣṭubham" of the Anukr. (for not a single verse foots up as 44 syllables): then, again, if to the verse proper in each case we add the refrain and reckon up the totals, we get the ākṛtis etc. of the Anukr.⌋

Translated: Ludwig, p. 543; Henry, 14, 45; Deussen, Geschichte, i. 1. 226; Griffith, ii. 150.

1. He who generated these two, heaven-and-earth; who clothes himself in existences, making them a garment (drā́pi); in whom abide the six wide directions, toward which he, the flying one, looks all abroad—against that god, angered, [is] this offense (ā́gas); whoso scathes a Brahman that knows thus, do thou, O ruddy one, make him quake, destroy him; fasten on the fetters of the Brahman-scather.

All the mss. agree in the accent of drā́pi (RV. always drāpí). As is their habit, they give of the refrain only the single word tásya except in vss. 1 and 25; and there they set the avasāna not before tásya, but after devásya: in our edition this perversion of the natural division is corrected. The refrain, if we contract yá evám to yāt 'vám, is a regular triṣṭubh; its addition to a preceding verse makes this hymn one of especially long meters; the first verse, 8 pādas of 11 syllables each, is an exact ākṛti. The verse ⌊or the hymn: see introduction⌋ is (though v. 12. 9 has the same pratīka) doubtless the one quoted in Kāuç. 49. 19, with xiii. 1. 28 and xvi. 6. 1, to accompany the laying on of fetters; and Bloomfield suggests that the whole hymn (or anuvāka) is intended also in 63. 21, one does not see why.

2. From whom the winds in their season go purifying (pū), out of whom the oceans flow forth — against that god etc. etc.

With b compare 1. 42 d. The verse (10 + 11 : 44 = 65) has one more syllable than a regular aṣṭi, as the Anukr. notices. ⌊The longer grammatical equivalent of vā́tās would improve the rhythm.⌋

3. Who causes to die [and] causes to breathe; from whom all existences breathe — against that god etc. etc.

An exact aṣṭi (9 + 11 : 44 = 64).

4. Who gratifies heaven-and-earth with breath; who fills the belly of the ocean with respiration — against that god etc. etc.

The meter is correctly enough described by the Anukr. The omission of either apānena or samudrasya would rectify the meter of b.

5. In whom is set (çritá) Virāj, the most exalted one, Prajāpati, Agni Vāiçvānara with the series (paṅktí); who took to himself the breath of the lofty one, the brilliancy of the loftiest one — against that god etc. etc.

We had nearly the same combination of divine personages above in viii. 5. 10 c, d; and the paṅkti here perhaps corresponds to the 'all the seers' there. The verse, of very irregular meter (12 + 12 : 15 : 44 = 83), is very nearly a prakṛti (84 syll.).

6. Upon whom are set (çritá) the six wide [spaces], the five quarters, the four waters, the three syllables (? akṣára) of the sacrifice; who, angered, looked with his eye between the two firmaments (ródasī) — against that god etc. etc.

All our mss. read at end of b akṣárā (not -rāḥ), doubtless under the influence of the ordinary use of akṣára as neuter. The omission in c of cákṣuṣā would better both sense and meter. The verse as best read (12 + 12 : 14 : 44 = 82) lacks two syllables of a full prakṛti, but could easily be filled up by resolution. ⌊For the transition -t after yásmin, cf. Prāt. ii. 9 note.⌋ ⌊Caland, p. 173, understands this vs. and the following to be intended at Kāuç. 49. 24, 25, for use in the ceremony of the "water-thunderbolts": cf. introd. to x. 5.⌋

7. Who became food-eater, lord of food, and also Brahmaṇaspati (lord of worship); who is and shall be lord of existence — against that god etc. etc.

The translation implies bhaviṣyán instead of -yát in c; either this emendation or that of bhūtás to bhūtám (which Ludwig and Henry assume in their versions) seems unavoidable. Our saṁhitā-mss. are divided between -dó ánnapatir and -dó 'nna- in a. The verse (11 + 8 : 12 : 44 = 75) is very near a regular atidhṛti (76 syll.). ⌊Cf. note to vs. 6 for use by Kāuç.⌋

8. He who measures out the thirteenth month, fabricated (vi-mā) of days-and-nights, having thirty members — against that god etc. etc.

The verse (6 × 11 = 66) lacks two syllables of a full atyaṣṭi (68 syll.).

9. Black the descent, the yellow eagles, clothing themselves in waters, fly up to the sky; they have come hither from the seat of righteousness — against that god etc. etc.

The first three pādas are RV. i. 164. 47 a–c, found also twice above, as vi. 22. 1; ix. 10. 22. The verse (7 × 11 = 77) is accurately described by the Anukr. It, with a good part of those that follow (11–16, 18–21, 23, 25), appears to have nothing to do with the refrain.

10. What of thee, O Kaçyapa, is bright (candrá), full of shining (rocanávant), what that is combined (saṁhitá), splendid (puṣkalá), of wondrous light, in which seven suns are set (árpita) together — against that god etc. etc.

One of our mss. (T.: ⌊and perhaps also M.⌋) ⌊and one of SPP's⌋ accent púṣkalam (like púṣkara) in b. All ⌊of W's and of SPP's⌋ agree in the anomalous and probably incorrect accent saṁhitám. ⌊Cf., however, Gram. § 1085 b. Perhaps the case of saṁskṛtám at xi. 1. 35 is not parallel.⌋ Ppp. has (as noticed above) this verse, reading in a kaçyapo ro-, combining in c sūryā "rpitās sapta, and ⌊without avasāna after sākam⌋ having, as was to be expected, a wholly different apodosis: tasmin rājānam adhi vi çraye 'mam (cf. our ix. 5. 4. d), for which the refrain of this hymn is a senseless substitute. The verse is found also in K. xxxvii. 9. Our Bp. omits, by accident, the division-sign of rocanā○vat in a.

11. The bṛhát dresses itself in him in front; the rathaṁtará accepts [him] behind: [both] clothing themselves always in light unremittingly — against that god etc. etc.

12. The bṛhát was his wing on the one side, rathaṁtará on the other, [both] of like strength, of like motion (?sadhryàñc), when the gods generated the ruddy one — against that god etc. etc.

This verse counts 77 syllables, as required, but is irregular (9 + 13 : 11 : 44).

13. This Agni becomes Varuṇa in the evening; in the morning, rising, he becomes Mitra; he, having become Savitar, goes through the atmosphere; he, having become Indra, burns (tap) through the midst of the sky. — Against that god etc. etc.

Or (a) 'he becomes Varuṇa at evening [and] Agni' (so Henry: cf. Ludwig). The verse is very irregular, but can be made to count a vikṛti (92 syll.).

14. A thousand days' journey are expanded the wings of him, of the yellow swan flying to heaven; he, putting all the gods in his breast, goes viewing together all existences. — Against that god etc. etc.

The verse proper here is a repetition of x. 8. 18 and xiii. 2. 38; it is written in full in all the mss., because they have no other way of indicating the attachment here of the refrain. It is properly an ākṛti (8 × 11 = 88 syll.).

15. This is that god within the waters, the thousand-rooted, many-powered (?) Atri; he who generated all this existence — against that god etc. etc.

Henry makes in b the naturally-suggested emendation to puruçā́khas, 'many-branched'; ⌊cf. Bloomfield, AJP. xii. 436, and, per contra, Deussen, p. 228, note⌋. The verse is most naturally read as (9 + 11 : 11 : 44 = 75) a nicṛd atidhṛti, in accordance with the description of the Anukr.

16. Swift-running yellow [horses] draw the bright one (çukrá), the god shining with splendor in the sky, whose lofty bodies heat the sky; hitherward with well-colored gleams (?paṭará) he shines forth. — Against that god etc. etc.

Our edition ought to give in c tanvàs, since that is the pada-reading, and it is only by accident that nearly all the saṁhitā-mss. (all save R.K.) unite in protracting the à to ā̀. The verse reads most naturally as a bhurig ākṛti (12 + 11 : 11 + 11 : 44 = 89).

17. By whom the yellow steeds draw the Ādityas together; by what sacrifice go many foreknowing; which, sole light, shines forth variously — against that god etc. etc.

Yajñéna 'sacrifice' in b looks as if it needed emendation, and the irregularity of the pāda suggests corruption. Our mss. read at the end ví bhāti and the pada-text has *ví○bhāti; our text makes a change of accent to vibhā́ti. The verse (11 + 14 : 11 : 44 = 80) counts up a precise kṛti.

*⌊A similar pada-reading, impossible with the accentless verb-form, we met at vi. 74. 2 (see the note thereto) and at vi. 114. 2 (see note). And here, as at vi. 74. 2, a suspicion arises that an error has come in from confusion with a similar form near by, here with the ending of vs. 16 proper, where ví bhāti is called for. All SPP's authorities have ví bhāti, except his P², which has vi○bhā́ti. This reading he also adopts. — The rationale of the blunder at xiv. 2. 59 (see note) appears to be similar. Cf. also the accent of sarvé at xiii. 4. 21, and note.⌋

18. Seven harness a one-wheeled chariot; one horse, having seven names, draws [it]; of three naves [is] the wheel, unwasting, unassailed, whereon stand all these existences. — Against that god etc. etc.

We had the verse (which is RV. i. 164. 2) above as ix. 9. 2. The mss. all give it in full here (as in the case of vs. 14 above).

19. Harnessed eight-fold draws the formidable draft-horse (váhni), father of gods, generator of prayers (matí); measuring with the mind the line of righteousness, Mātariçvan goes cleansing (pū) to all the quarters. — Against that god etc. etc.

Or perhaps 'he goes as Mātariçvan,' identifying the action of sun and of wind. Mimānas in c should be emended to mímānas, which is read only by D. The Anukr. notices this time the redundant syllable in a.

20. A united (samyáñc) line along all the directions, within the gāyatrī, the womb (embryo?) of the immortal. — Against that god etc. etc.

'Line' here is accus., as taking up and carrying on the idea of 19 c. The verse lacks two syllables of being a full atyaṣṭi (68 syll.).

21. Three settings, dawnings also three; three welkins, skies verily three: we know, O Agni, the birth-place of thee threefold; threefold the births of the gods we know. — Against that god etc. etc.

The verse is regular if tredhā́ in c (not in d) is made, as often elsewhere, trisyllabic.

22. He who in birth (jā́yamāna) opened out the earth, [who] set the ocean in the atmosphere — against that god etc. etc.

The meter is the same as that of vs. 20.

23. Thou, O Agni, impelled by powers (krátu), by lights (ketú), didst shine up, a kindled song (?arká) in the sky; unto what did the Maruts, having the spotted one for mother, sing, when the gods generated the ruddy one? — Against that god etc. etc.

Pischel (Ved. Stud. i. 26) takes arká as 'sun'; the connection with abhy ārcan in c is strongly opposed to this. The last pāda is the same with 12 c above. The verse (12 + 12 : 12 + 11 : 44) counts properly 91 syllables, one short of a full vikṛti.

24. He who is self-giving, strength-giving, of whom all, of whom [even] the gods wait upon the direction, who is master of these bipeds, who of quadrupeds — against that god etc. etc.

The verse proper is identical with the first three pādas of iv. 2. 1 (found also in other texts: see the notes to that hymn). Bp. here reads (doubtless by accident) asya in c. Two more syllables are needed to make a full kṛti (80 syll.).

25. The one-footed strode out more than the two-footed; the two-footed falls upon the three-footed from behind; the four-footed acted within the call of the two-footed ones, beholding the series (paṅtí), drawing near (upa-sthā). — Against that god etc. etc.

The first two pādas are identical with 2. 27 a, b, and the whole verse corresponds to RV. x. 117. 8. RV. reads in a bhū́yo dvipádo, in b dvipā́t tripā́dam, in c eti (for cakre) dvipā́dām, in d paṅktī́r up-. The accentuation dvípāt and trípāt (only in these verses) was noticed under 2. 27. Here we lack two syllables of a full vikṛti.

26. The white son of the black [mother], the young of night, was born; he ascends upon the sky; the ruddy one ascended the ascents.

⌊Here ends the third anuvāka, with 1 hymn and 26 verses. The quoted Anukr. says ṣaḍviñçat (ṣaḍviñça?).⌋

4. Extolling the sun.

[(Brahman. — *ādhyātmam ; rohitādityadevatyam. trāiṣṭubham.) ṣaṭ paryāyāḥ. mantrokta devatyāḥ.]

⌊Partly prose, and vss. 14–15, 22–26, and 46–56 are so designated in W's Index, p. 6.⌋ This hymn is not found in Pāipp., nor noticed either in Kāuç. or in Vāit. *⌊Here, indeed (but cf. introd. to hymn 3), the general definition for the whole kāṇḍa as "trāiṣṭubham" does not seem to apply.⌋

Translated: Henry, 17, 51; Griffith, ii. 154.

[Paryāya I. — trayodaça. 1–11. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh ; 12. virāḍ gāyatrī ; 13. āsury uṣṇih.]

1. He goes [as] impeller (Savitar) to the heaven (svàr), looking down upon the back of the sky.

2. To the cloud-mass (nábhas) brought by rays he goes [as] great Indra, covered.

3. He [is] the Creator (dhātṛ́), he the disposer, he Vāyu, the upraised (ut-çri) cloud-mass.

A syllable is lacking, unless we make harsh resolution, in a.

4. He [is] Aryaman, he Varuṇa, he Rudra, he the great god.

5. He [is] Agni, he also the Sun, he indeed great Yama.

Parts of this verse are quoted as examples under Prāt. ii. 21, 24; iii. 35, 36; iv. 116.

6. On him wait (upa-sthā) young ones (vatsá), ten, united, having one head.

Henry acutely suggests emendation in b to -no 'yútā dáça 'ten myriads' — i.e. of rays, all heading in the sun itself. It seems probable that the original text had ékaçīrṣās : cf. dáçaçīrṣas, iv. 6. 1; the verse as it stands is redundant.

7. From behind they stretch on forward; when he rises, he shines forth.

Vibhā́sati would seem a better reading at the end.

8. His is this troop of Maruts; he goes sling-made.

That is (?), 'as if hung in slings' ⌊OB. 'an Schnüre gehängt'⌋. Henry makes a venturesome and unacceptable emendation, and regards the adjective as referring to the 'troop' — which is not impossible.

9. To the cloud-mass brought by rays he goes [as] great Indra, covered.

This is a repetition of vs. 2; all the mss. give it in full.

10. His are these nine vessels (kóça), the props set nine-fold.

The pada-text reads viṣṭambhā́ḥ, undivided.

11. He looks abroad for living creatures (prajā́), both what breathes and what does not.

Cf. vs. 19, below: 'for,' apparently 'for the advantage of.'

12. Into him is entered (ni-gam) this power; he himself is one, single (ekavṛt), one only.

The verse lacks four syllables of the gāyatrī number, instead of two, as the Anukr. counts.

13. These gods in him become single.

The Anukr. counts fourteen syllables in the verse; one does not see where it finds more than thirteen.

[Paryāya II.—aṣṭāu. 14. bhurik sāmnī triṣṭubh; 15. āsurī pañkti; 16, 19. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; 17, 18. āsurī gāyatrī.]

14. Both fame and glory and water (?ámbhas) and cloud-mass and Brahman-splendor and food and food-eating.

The Pet. Lex. regards nábhaç ca as intruded here, and ámbhas as having the sense of 'might.'

15. He who knows this single god—

16. Not second, not third, also not fourth is he called.

17. Not fifth, not sixth, also not seventh is he called.

18. Not eighth, not ninth, also not tenth is he called.

19. He looks abroad for everything, both what breathes and what does not.

20. Into him is entered this power; he himself is one, single, one only.

21. All the gods in him become single.

The last three verses are nearly identical with 11–13 above. Of the last two the Anukr. does not define the meter, perhaps by an omission in the ms. (or else because they were defined just above). All our mss. save one (D.) ⌊and all SPP's authorities, except P^2⌋ accent sarvé in 21, as if because of eté in 13. ⌊Both editions emend to sárve.⌋

[Paryāya III.—sapta. 22. bhurik prājāpatyā triṣṭubh; 23. ārcī gāyatrī; 25. 1-p. āsurī gāyatrī; 26. ārcy anuṣṭubh; 27, 28. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh.]

22. Both worship (bráhman) and penance and fame and glory and water and cloud-mass and Brahman-splendor and food and food-eating—

This is vs. 14 over again, with two more items prefixed.

23. And what is and what shall be and faith and sheen and heaven (svargá) and svadhá.

The mss. vary between bhavyàm (Bp.), bhávyam (Bs.p.m.D.), and bhavyám (Bs.s.m., and all the rest). ⌊SPP's authorities show a similar disagreement. He reads bhávyam; and the same reading⌋ in our text is evidently called for.

24. He who knows this single god—

This verse is identical with vs. 15 above, and is accordingly not separately described by the Anukr.

25. He verily [is] death, he immortality (amṛ́ta), he the monster (abhvà), he the demon.

The verse is probably quoted under Prāt. iii. 65 (see the note there). In order to make out the fifteen syllables of the Anukr., we have to read só amṛ́taṁ só abhvàm.

26. He [is] Rudra, winner of good, in the giving of good; in the expression of homage, [he is] the utterance váṣaṭ, put together after.

The connection here is very doubtful. Henry understands it as above; Muir (iv. 338) quite differently. The verse is very peculiarly treated by the Anukr.; first it is quoted in its proper place thus: sa rudra ity ārṣī (so the Berlin ms., but the London ms. has āsurī) gāyatrī; and then, after the definition of vss. 27, 28, the London ms. says again sa rudro vasuvanir ārcy anuṣṭup. The descriptions ārṣī gāyatrī and ārcy anuṣṭubh (each implying 24 syllables) both apply equally well, if we restore -kāró ánu.

27. All these familiar demons (yātú) wait upon his direction (praçís).

28. In his control are all yon asterisms, together with the moon.

[Paryāya IV.—saptadaça. 29, 33, 39, 40, 45. āsurī gāyatrī; 30, 32, 35, 36, 42. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; 31. virāḍ gāyatrī; 34, 37, 38. sāmny uṣṇih; 41. sāmnī bṛhatī; 43. ārṣī gāyatrī; 44. sāmny anuṣṭubh.]

29. He verily was born of the day; of him the day was born.

The Anukr. unaccountably ratifies the elision áhno 'j-, instead of restoring aj- and recognizing the pāda for what it is, eight syllables.

30. He verily was born of the night; of him the night was born.

31. He verily was born of the atmosphere; of him the atmosphere was born.

The verse lacks four syllables, instead of two, of the twenty-four that make a gāyatrī.

32. He verily was born of Vāyu (wind); of him Vāyu was born.

33. He verily was born of the sky; out of him the sky was born.

Here again the Anukr. requires us to read divò 'j-.

34. He verily was born of the quarters; of him the quarters were born.

Here we are to make both elisions, in a and b.

35. He verily was born of the earth; of him the earth was born.

Nearly all our mss. (all save Bp.D.R.) accent bhūmés and bhūmís.

36. He verily was born of fire; of him fire was born.

37. He verily was born of the waters; of him the waters were born.

The metrical description is the same as that of vs. 34, and with the same lack of good reason (the mss. read sa vā adbhya ṛgbhyaḥ sāmnyuṣṇiganuṣṭubhāu, which is senseless, and should doubtless be emended to -uṣṇihāu).

38. He verily was born of the verses (ṛ́c); of him the verses were born.

As to the meter, see the note to the preceding verse.

39. He verily was born of the sacrifice; of him the sacrifice was born.

The Anukr., as above, forces the elision yajñò 'j-.

40. He is the sacrifice; his is the sacrifice; he [is] made the head of the sacrifice.

41. He thunders; he lightens; he indeed hurls the stone.

That is, the thunderbolt. The second pāda is one of the examples under Prāt. iii. 36.

42. Either for the evil [man] or for the excellent; for man or for Asura.

'For,' i.e. 'at,' ⌊taking the verse as a continuation of 41⌋.

43. Either when thou makest the herbs, or when thou rainest excellently, or when thou hast increased him of the people (?janyá).

This appears to be the only example known of the accent janyá instead of jánya, and how little authoritative it is may be inferred from the fact that all our mss. leave avīvṛdhas unaccented after it. Our text makes the necessary emendation to áv-. ⌊All SPP's authorities, however, agree in reading not only janyám but also avīvṛdhas. The latter he also emends to áv-.⌋

44. Such, O bountiful one, is thy greatness; and thine, too (úpa), are a hundred bodies.

There is no difficulty in counting the verse into 16 syllables, as required by the Anukr. ⌊It reads naturally as 9 + 8.⌋

45. Thine, too, are two billions, [many] billions (?); or else thou art a hundred million.

The translation implies the readings bádve bádvāni, which, on account of the accent, seem probably meant by the mss., which vary between bádhv-, báddh-, báddhv-; K. reads baddhve vádvāni, D. báddhe baddhā́ni. ⌊SPP's authorities also exhibit very wide disagreements, which reflect a corresponding uncertainty of the tradition.⌋ The word is just such a one as the mss. might be expected to boggle and blunder over, both they and we being left without help from the sense. Henry, who accepts the same emendation, understands bádve as locative, which is perhaps better, and at any rate favored by the fact that the pada-text does not read bádve íti.

46. More is Indra than non-dying (??); more art thou, O Indra, than the deaths.

'Non-dying' is the conjecture of the Pet. Lexx. for namurá, which occurs nowhere else; it is adopted here, simply for lack of anything better, although in itself of a high degree of implausibility. ⌊Henry also adopts it; but see his note, p. 54.⌋ It is surprising to find Indra brought in here at the end for address, instead of the sun; there is nothing to show that the two remaining paryāyas are not for him. ⌊Note, however, the praise of the sun under the names of Indra and Viṣṇu, so prominent in book xvii., below: see page 805. Perhaps we have here a similar identification.⌋

47. More than the niggard, lord of strength (çácī) art thou, O Indra; as called mighty, prevailing, do we worship (upa-ās) thee.

Prāt. ii. 71 expressly forbids the combination çácyās p-, which we should have expected here. The verse (9 + 8 : 8 = 25) is strangely defined by the Anukr.

48. Homage be to thee, O conspicuous one (paçyata); see ⌊páçya⌋ me, O conspicuous one.

Paçyata is an anomalous and forced substitute for darçata, made in this passage only, for assonance with paçya. The Anukr. ratifies the combination te astu.

49. With food-eating, with glory, with brilliancy (tḗjas), with Brahman-splendor;

50. As called water (?ámbhas), force (áma), greatness, power, do we worship thee.

The Anukr. ratifies the combination ámbho ámo. By a usage that is rare, all the mss. omit in this verse ⌊what follows⌋ after iti, although the repetition is not of the end of the next preceding verse, but of vs. 47. Then, of course, the following verses are written in the same curtailed way until vs. 54, which is filled out to the end.

51. As called water (ámbhas), red, silvery (rajatá), welkin (rájas), power, do we worship thee.

Again ⌊as at vs. 31⌋ we have a verse called virāḍ gāyatrī which lacks four syllables of being 24.

[Paryāya VI. —pañca. 52, 53. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; 54. 2-p. ārṣī gāyatrī.]

52. As called wide, broad, happy (subhū́), earths (?bhúvas), do we worship thee.

Bhúvas is here rendered literally, in the only sense which the word has elsewhere in AV. If it is a first appearance of the vyāhṛti common later, its meaning is wholly obscure in this connection. ⌊Aufrecht, KZ. xxxiv. 458, makes some observations about the relations of the noun-forms and adjective-forms in vss. 52–53.⌋

53. As called breadth, width, expanse, world, do we worship thee.

54. As called one of arising good, of increasing (??) good, of gathering good, of coming good, do we worship thee.

The translation implies the heroic substitution of vṛdhádvasu for the wholly senseless idádvasu. The Pet. Lexx., to be sure, conjecture for the latter the meaning 'rich in this and that' (which Henry follows); but, besides the fact that idát = idám is not less heroic than idát = vṛdhát, the signification given does not belong rightly to the compound, nor has it any application here. Our rendering has at least concinnity — unless, indeed, in a text of this character, that be an argument against its acceptance. All the compounds are evidently possessive.

55. Homage be to thee, O conspicuous one; see me, O conspicuous one.

56. With food-eating, with glory, with brilliancy, with Brahman-splendor.

These two verses are identical with vss. 48, 49, above ⌊and are therefore not defined by the Anukr.⌋.

⌊The quotations from the Old Anukr., given piecemeal for this paryāya-sūkta at the end of each paryāya, may here be given together: I. trayodaça; II. aṣṭāu ca; III. tataḥ paraḥ sapta; IV. saptadaça; V. ṣaṭ ca bodhyāḥ; VI. ṣaṣṭhaḥ pañcaka ucyate.— They are given by SPP. in his "Critical Notice," vol. i., p. 21, with the introductory words, caturthasyā 'vasānāni vakṣyamāṇāni tāni çṛṇu.⌋

⌊In paryāya V., vss. 47, 50, and 51 have the refrain; and in VI., vss. 52, 53, and 54 have it: these verses are styled gaṇāvasānarcaḥ, and the rest avasānarcaḥ (as was already noted above, p. 472). But since none of the former is divided in two by an avasāna-mark, the distinction does not affect the sums of the "ṛcaḥ of both kinds," which are (as just stated) 3 + 3 for V. and 3 + 2 for VI.⌋

⌊Here ends the fourth anuvāka, consisting of 1 paryāya-sūkta with 6 paryāyas and 56 verses.⌋

⌊Some mss. reckon up the hymns as 20 (that is 14 of the decad-divisions of our hymns 1-3, plus 6 paryāyas of our hymn 4) and the verses as 188.⌋

⌊Here ends the twenty-eighth prapāṭhaka.⌋

Book XIV.

⌊Nuptial Hymns.⌋

⌊Nuptial ceremonies. — This fourteenth book is the second of the six books (xiii.–xviii.) that form the third grand division of the Atharvan collection, and shows very clearly that unity of subject which is the distinguishing characteristic of the books of that division. The book has been translated by Weber, Indische Studien, vol. v. (1862), pages 178–217; and the parts peculiar to our text by Ludwig in his Der Rigveda, vol. iii. (Die Mantralitteratur), pages 470–476. The bhāṣya is again lacking.⌋

⌊The subject of the book has been often treated: thus, by that great scholar, Colebrooke, in 1801, in vol. vii. of the Asiatic Researches (the paper is reprinted in Cowell's edition of H. T. Colebrooke's Essays, vol. i., pages 217–238); by E. Haas, in the volume of Weber's Studien, just cited, pages 267–412, Die Heirathsgebräuche der alten Inder, nach den Gṛihyasūtra; and latterly by Dr. M. Winternitz, in the Denkschriften of the Vienna Academy for 1892, vol. xl., Das altindische Hochzeitsrituell nach dem Āpastambīya-gṛihyasūtra etc., with a detailed comparison of the nuptial ceremonies prevailing among the other Indo-European peoples. Then, some five years later (in 1897), in the Anecdota Oxoniensia, Dr. Winternitz published The Mantra-pāṭha or the Prayer Book of the Āpastambins, which contains very many of the mantras cited in the editor's Hochzeitsrituell; and for this reason the citations of those mantras are given below in duplicate, in order that they may be easily found in either work. — Here may be mentioned also the elaborate comments given in my Sanskrit Reader, pages 398–401, upon chapters 5, 7, and 8 of Āçvalāyana's Gṛhyasūtra, book i., which treat of the wedding customs and the wedding-service.⌋

⌊Division into anuvākas. — This book is divided into two anuvākas, the first with 64 verses, and the second with 75. This division is confirmed by the Old Anukr. or Pañcapaṭalikā (as quoted at the end of each anuvāka), which says ādyaḥ sāuryaç catuḥṣaṣṭiḥ and pañcasaptatir uttaraḥ. Here ādyaḥ and uttaraḥ doubtless refer to anuvākaḥ understood. It is also confirmed by AV. xix. 23. 24.⌋

⌊The decad-division is shown in the mss. as usual: thus hymn 1 is divided into 6 "decad"-sūktas (5 tens and 1 "decad" of 14 vss.), and hymn 2 is divided into 8 "decad"-sūktas (7 tens and 1 "decad" of 5 vss.). The sum is 14 "decad"-sūktas.⌋

⌊Division into hymns. — This seems to be a matter more or less questionable. By the Berlin edition, and also by that of SPP., the book is in fact divided into two hymns, each of which coincides with an anuvāka, as is the case with books xii. and xiii. The Old Anukr. seems to offer no evidence either for or against the division into hymns.⌋

⌊The mss. seem to support the division of the book into two hymns: thus, at the end of anuvāka 1, several mss. say anuvāke arthasūkta 1; ṛcā (!) 64; [supply presumably daçatayaḥ] 6. And, at the end of the second, they say anuvāke arthasūkta 1; ṛcā 75. Moreover, as noted on page 768, some mss. sum up the book as of two hymns.⌋

⌊The Major Anukr., on the other hand, seems rather to indicate that the book should not be divided into two hymns: 1. by its mingling the verses of the whole book together (see the next paragraph, which is by Mr. Whitney) in its metrical and other definitions; and 2. by its expression çatatamyā [ṛcā] 'hundredth verse,' which implies a continuous counting from the beginning of the book beyond the limits of the first anuvāka (or hymn?), which contains only 64 verses. Per contra, this method of designating a verse by any ordinal higher than the first few ordinals is very unusual, and (so far as I have noted) unexampled, save by the expression trayoviñçatikayā in the next clause and by the ordinals of Kāuç. 49. 24, 25 (see note to x. 5. 6).⌋

The descriptions of meter etc. are ⌊by the Major Anukr.⌋ given together for the whole book; they are here separated for the two recognized divisions (anuvākas, treated as hymns) in accordance with the method elsewhere followed. The order of verses is so much disregarded in the metrical etc. descriptions as to make one wonder whether the arrangement contemplated by the Anukr. was the same with that which we have ⌊cf. p. 740, top⌋; yet minor deviations from the order are not very rare elsewhere. Other special points are mentioned in the notes to the verses.

⌊The Major Anukr. begins its treatment of the book as follows: satyene 'ti (xiv. 1. 1) sāikonacatvāriñçachataṁ dvayānuvākakāṇḍam. Sāvitrī Sūryā. ātmadāivatam. ānuṣṭubham. prathamābhiḥ pañcabhiḥ (xiv. 1. 1–5) somam astāut; parābhiḥ (xiv. 1. 6–?) svavivāham; çatatamyā [?] (xiv. 2. 36) devān; trayoviñçatikayā (xiv. 1. 23) somārkāu; parayā (xiv. 1. 24) candramasam.⌋

⌊That is to say: 'The double-anuvāka-book (the expression dvaya is a little strange: the phrase would fit also books xv. and xvi.) that begins with satyena has [verses] a-hundred-and-forty-save-one (64 + 75 = 139). [The seer is] Sūryā,[1] daughter of Savitar (cf. AV. vi. 82. 2; xiv. 2. 30; Bergaigne, Rel. Véd. ii. 486 f.). The deity is the same. The meter, anuṣṭubh. With the first five verses she praised (or mentioned, laudavit: see note to i. 7. 1) Soma; with the next verses (does this mean the verses from 6 to the end of the book? or to the end of the Sūryā-hymn proper, vss. 6–16?), her own wedding; with the hundredth verse (100 = 64 [vss. of h. 1] + 36 [vss. of h. 2]: hence xiv. 2. 36), the gods[2]; with the twenty-third verse (xiv. 1. 23), moon and sun; with the next (xiv. 1. 24), the moon.'⌋

[1] ⌊The RV. Anukr. also ascribes the corresponding RV. hymn (x. 85) to Sūryā Sāvitrī.⌋

[2] ⌊This statement does not fit xiv. 2. 36. On the other hand, Dr. Ryder points out that it does fit xiv. 2. 46 and that the RV. Anukr. makes devāḥ the deity of RV. x. 85. 17 (which = AV. xiv. 2. 46): and he accordingly offers the suggestion that çatatamyā may be a text-error for daça-çatatamyā.⌋

⌊The Major Anukr. continues: parā [?] (xiv. 1. 25–?) nṛṇāṁ vivāhamantrāçiṣaḥ. parā dehy (xiv. 1. 25) açlīlā tanūr (xiv. 1. 27) iti dve vadhūvāsaḥsaṁsparçamocanyāu. ye vadhva (xiv. 2. 10) iti yakṣmanāçanī. parā (xiv. 2. 11) dampatyoḥ paripanthināçanī.⌋

⌊The statements of the RV. Anukr. as to "deity" correspond quite closely with those just given, but with some differences: thus it says -nindā for -mocanyāu; etc. In particular, the description nṛṇāṁ vivāhamantrā āçiṣaç ca is applied by the RV. Anukr. to RV. x. 85. 20–28. All these 9 RV. verses have more or less close correspondents in AV. xiv.: they are, respectively, AV. xiv. 1. 61; 2. 33 (cf. RV. vss. 21 and 22); 1. 34; 1. 19, 18, 20, 21, 26. All this, it seems, fails to square with the parāḥ of the text of our Anukr., and reinforces Mr. Whitney's suspicion (above, p. 739) that the arrangement of the verses contemplated by that text may have been different from that which appears in the Berlin edition. — In connection with this suspicion should be considered also the fact that the Anukr. adds at the end the pratīkas iii. 30. 1, ii. 36. 1, and xx. 126. 1: see below, p. 768.⌋

⌊In the Major Anukr., moreover, a curious addition is inserted after the definition of xiv. 1. 60, as follows: (the text of its beginning is uncertain: ity? or parāviny?) edhiṣīmahīti vyāghrādiṣv avagantavyaḥ. Cf. the introduction to xi. 1 and especially the note to xv. 5. 7.⌋

1. Marriage ceremonies.

[Sāvitrī Sūryā. — ātmadāivatam (1–5. somam astāut; 6–⌊?⌋. svavivāham; 23. somārkāu; 24. candramasam; — 25⌊?⌋–[?]. nṛṇāṁ vivāhamantrāçiṣaḥ; 25, 27. vadhūvāsaḥsaṁsparçamocanyāu). ⌊As to the foregoing, see above, p. 739.⌋ ānuṣṭubham: 14. virāṭ prastārapañkti; 15. āstārapañkti; 19, 20, 23, 24, 31–33, 37, 39, 40, 45, 47, 49, 50, 53, 56, 57, [58, 59, 61]. triṣṭubh (23, 31, 45. bṛhatīgarbhā); 21, 46, 54, 64. jagatī (54, 64. bhurik triṣṭubh); 29, 55. purastādbṛhatī; 34. prastārapañkti; 38. purobṛhatī 3-p. paroṣṇih; [48. pathyāpañkti;] 60. parānuṣṭubh.]

The hymn (except vss. 4, 62, which are wanting altogether, and 41, 42, which occur in other books) is found also in Pāipp. xviii., with petty differences of order, noted under the verses. A large part of the anuvāka or hymn corresponds to the wedding hymn (x. 85) in the Rig-Veda. The Vāit. does not treat the marriage ceremony, and only four or five of the verses of the book are quoted by it; but a large part of them are used in the sections (75–79) of the Kāuç. which deal with the subject.

Translated: in so far as it corresponds to RV. verses, by the RV. translators; further, the parts that are peculiar to our text, by Ludwig, p. 470; and, as AV. hymn, all of it, by Weber, Ind. Stud. v. 195–204 (see 178 ff.); Griffith, ii. 159. — A large part of the wedding-hymn is given in my Sanskrit Reader, pages 89–90: the notes thereon (at pages 389–390) may be consulted, and also the notes at pages 398–401.

1. By truth is the earth established (ut-stabh); by the sun is the sky established; by righteousness the Ādityas stand; Soma is set (çritá) upon the sky.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 1, without variant. The pada-text also reads úttabhitā, by Prāt. iv. 62, the s being omitted by ii. 18. Kāuç. directs vss. 1 and 23 to be used in preparing the sacrificial fire, at the beginning of the chapter on the marriage-rites (75. 6: according to the comm., vss. 1–16 are meant, and 23–24); and again, near the end of the chapter (79. 16), the whole book is directed to be so used. ⌊Ppp. has satvena for satyena at the beginning.⌋ ⌊Cf. MP. i. 6. 1, and Wint., p. 66.⌋

2. By Soma are the Ādityas strong; by Soma is the earth great; likewise in the lap of these asterisms is Soma placed (ā-dhā).

Is RV. x. 85. 2, without variant. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 9. 2; Wint., p. 74; MGS. i. 14. 8 and p. 157.⌋

3. One thinks himself to have drunk Soma when they crush up an herb; what Soma the priests (brahmán) know, of that no earthly man partakes.

RV. (x. 85. 3) reads at the end kā́ç caná for pā́rthivas. In b, Bs.P.M.W.T. read -piṣanti, D. -pīṣanti; Ppp. has -piçanti. The pratīka is quoted in GB. i. 2. 9 ⌊printed 8⌋.

4. When, O Soma, they drink thee ⌊up⌋, then thou fillest thyself up again; Vāyu is Soma's defender; the month is norm (ā́kṛti) of the years (sámā).

RV. (x. 85. 5) reads deva for soma in a. The verse (as noted above) is wanting in Ppp.

5. Guarded by covering-arrangements, defended by watchmen (??bā́rhata), O Soma, thou standest hearing the pressing-stones; no earthly one partakes of thee.

Is RV. x. 85. 4, without variant. All this talk about the moon as identical with Soma at the beginning of the Sūryā-hymn seems very meaningless unless Sūryā is really the moon, who every month "goes to" her spouse the sun.

6. Intention (cítti) was the pillow, sight was the ointment, heaven [and] earth were the coffer (kóça), when Sūryā went to her husband.

Is RV. x. 85. 7, without variant.

7. The rāíbhī was the parting [song] (??anudéyī), the nārāçaṅsī́ was the welcoming one (?nyócanī); Sūryā's garment verily was excellent; she goes adorned with song (gā́thā).

Is RV. x. 85. 6, which reads at the end páriṣkṛtam (p. pári॰kṛtam) for páriṣkṛtā (which our p. and s. both have). The translation given ventures new conjectures for anudéyī (lit. 'to be given after') and nyócanī (lit. 'making wonted or at home'); the Pet. Lexx. say 'dowry' ⌊so BR. iii. 569, OB. i. 52: but cf. BR. i. 205 and v. 987⌋ and 'ornament'; Ludwig 'vom Hause mitgegeben' and '[ins neue Haus] einführend'; Weber, 'train' and 'hand-maid.'

8. The laudations (stóma) were the cross-pieces (??pratidhí); meter was the kurī́ra, the opaçá; of Sūryā the Açvins were the wooers, Agni was the forerunner.

Is RV. x. 85. 8, without variant. For kurī́ra and opaçá, women's head-dresses or parts of such, compare vi. 138. In this connection the commentators' explanation of pratidhí "cross-pieces on the chariot-pole" is extremely unlikely; it must rather be some article of a woman's dress. Ppp. reads and combines paridhayaṣ k-.

9. Soma was the bride-seeker; both Açvins were wooers, when Savitar gave to her husband Sūryā, praising (çaṅs) with her mind.

Is RV. x. 85. 9, without variant, save that our pada-mss. falsely leave adadāt unaccented. 'Praising,' apparently 'assenting gladly.' Ppp. reads at end 'dadhāt.

10. Mind was her cart; heaven also was [its] canopy; the two draft-oxen were white (çukrá), when Sūryā went to her husband.

RV. (x. 85. 10) has at end gṛhám instead of pátim.

11. Haltered with verse (ṛ́c) and chant (sā́man), thy two oxen went peaceful (?sāmaná); ears were thy (two) wheels; in the sky the wandering track.

Abhihita seems to be the correlative to abhidhānī́. Our 'ears' (p. çrótre íti) is a bad variant to RV. (x. 85. 11) çrótram, 'hearing.' RV. also has in b itas for āitām. We have to gain in c a syllable by harsh resolution in order to make a full pāda. Ppp. reads in a upahitāu.

12. Clean were the (two) wheels of thee as thou wentest; out-breathing (vyāná) was the inserted axle; a cart made of mind did Sūryā ascend when going forth to her husband.

Is RV. x. 85. 12, without variant. The pada-reading manasmayam in c is by Prāt. iv. 24. ⌊Here Roth's Collation says "çacī wie Vulgata"!⌋

13. The bridal (vahatú) of Sūryā, which Savitar sent off (ava-sṛj), has gone forth; in the Maghās are slain the kine; in the Phalgunīs is the wedding.

RV. (x. 85. 13) reads in c aghā́su * ⌊Ppp. has the same⌋, and hanyante without the antithetical accent which all our mss. give, and which our text ought to read, and, for d, árjunyoḥ páry uhyate. The Maghā stars are what we call the Sickle, in the neck of Leo; the Phalgunī stars are the rectangle β, θ, δ, 93 Leonis; arjunī = phalgunī; the moon is in the latter either one or two days after it is in the former.† From such utterly indefinite data the attempt to extract a date is wasted labor. 'Is the wedding': vy ùhyate is the verb corresponding to vivāha 'wedding,' lit. 'driving away'; Ppp. reads instead vi havyate. The second half-verse is quoted in Kāuç. 75. 5, in the general definition of the time for wedding. ⌊With reference to this much-discussed verse, see: Weber, in Abh. der Berliner Ak. for 1861 (Nakṣatra-essay), p. 364, and in Sb. for 1894, p. 804; Jacobi, Festgruss an Roth, p. 69; Wint., p. 32.⌋

*⌊Weber discusses the readings aghā́su and maghā́su, and deems the RV. reading to be in this case the secondary one: Sb. 1894, p. 807.⌋ †⌊Concerning these asterisms (no's 10, and 11, 12) see Whitney, JAOS. vi. 332–4, or Oriental and Linguistic Studies, ii. 352–3. It is not impertinent to note that the regents of the Phalgunīs are Bhaga and Aryaman, and that those of the Maghās are the Manes. For the latter, cf. TB. iii. 1. 4^{8}: só 'tra juhoti: pitṛ́bhyaḥ svā́hā, maghā́bhyaḥ svā́hā, 'naghā́bhyaḥ svā́hā, gadā́bhyaḥ svā́hā, 'rundhatī́bhyaḥ svā́he, 'ti; but better TS. iv. 4. 10.⌋

14. When, O Açvins, ye went asking, with your three-wheeled [chariot], to Sūryā's bridal, where was one wheel of yours? where stood ye for pointing out?

The verse corresponds, without variant, to RV. x. 85. 14 a, b and 15 c, d. The sense of the questions is wholly obscure.

15. When ye went, O lords of beauty, unto the wooing of Sūryā, all the gods assented to that [deed] of yours; Pūshan as son chose a father.

This verse, again, corresponds to parts of two in the RV., namely x. 85. 15 a, b and 14 c, d; the only variant is that RV. reads pitárāu for -ram in d, and Ppp. pitarā 'vṛ-, which doubtless means the same. Metrically the verse is as much virāj as vs. 14.

16. The two wheels of thee, O Sūryā, the priests (brahmán) know seasonably; further, the one wheel that is in secret — that, verily, the enlightened (addhātí) know.

Is RV. x. 85. 16. All our mss. accent in a sū́rye and in d ⌊all save D.⌋ vidúḥ; our edition corrects both words to accordance with RV. Close correspondence with RV. x. 85 ceases with vs. 16, at the end of the Sūryā-hymn proper. ⌊SPP. reads sū́rye with all his authorities, and vidúḥ with nearly all. He adds: "the correction to viduḥ is not inevitable." But I do not see how the accented form is to be rendered.⌋

17. We make offering to Aryaman of good connections, husband-finder; like a gourd from its bond, from here I release, not from yonder.

This verse is found as RV. vii. 59. 12, a late and ungenuine appendage to that hymn, and having no pada-text; its reading is very different, namely: tryàmbakaṁ yajāmahe sugándhim puṣṭivárdhanam : urvārukám iva bándhanān mṛtyór mukṣīya mā́ 'mṛ́tāt; and with this agree TS. (i. 8. 6^2) and MS. (i. 10. 4), except that they accent sugandhím in b; VS. (iii. 60) has tryàmbakam in a; for b, sugandhím pativédanam; for d, itó mukṣīya mā́ 'mútaḥ. Ppp. has at end muñca mā 'mutaḥ. Vāit. 9. 19 quotes the RV. verse in the cāturmāsya ceremony, giving the text in full; Kāuç. 75. 22 makes our verse accompany an oblation offered when the wooer comes in. The Anukr. takes no notice of the redundant syllable in c (read -kám 'va). ⌊For 17, 18, cf. MP. i. 5. 7, and Wint., p. 56.⌋

18. I release [her] from here, not from yonder; I make her well-bound yonder, that she, O gracious Indra, may be rich in sons, well-portioned.

Is RV. x. 85. 25, without variant ⌊save that our text does not give muñcāmi the antithetical accent⌋. Prāt. ii. 65 teaches the combination -tas karam. Ppp. begins pre 'to muñcata mā 'mutaḥ. The mantrapāṭha ⌊MP. i. 4. 5⌋ of the Āpastamba Gṛhya-Sūtra (see Winternitz, Altind. Hochzeitsrituell etc., p. 54) has a varying version, reading in a muñcā́ti mā́ ⌊Oxford text ná⌋, and in b karat.

19. I release thee from Varuṇa's fetter, with which the very propitious Savitar bound thee; in the lair (yóni) of righteousness, in the world of the well-done, be it pleasant for thee accompanied by the wooer (-sambhalá).

The first three pādas are the same with RV. x. 85. 24 a–c, the only RV. variant being suçévaḥ at end of b; for d, RV. has áriṣṭāṁ tvā sahá pátyā dadhāmi. TS. (i. 1. 10^2; iii. 5. 6^1) has a nearly corresponding verse: imáṁ ví ṣyāmi váruṇasya pā́çaṁ yám ábadhnīta savitā́ sukétaḥ : dhātúç ca yónāu sukṛtásya loké syonám me sahá pátyā karomi. Our first half-verse is repeated below as 58 a, b; and the pratīka quoted in Vāit. 4. 11 doubtless belongs to the latter, and not to this verse as assigned by the editor. On the other hand, the pratīka quoted in Kāuç. 75. 23, used in connection with loosing the scarf (veṣṭa) tied about the bride, doubtless belongs here. The Āpastamba-text (Winternitz, p. 63) gives two slightly differing versions of the verse ⌊MP. i. 5. 16⌋.

Ppp. puts the verse next after our vs. 16; ⌊but further it makes our 19 c, d change place with our 58 c, d, reading, however, 'stu sahapatnī vadhū for our astu sahásambhalāyāi⌋.

20. Let Bhaga lead thee hence, grasping thy hand; let the Açvins carry thee forth by a chariot; go to the houses, that thou mayest be housewife; thou, having control, shalt speak unto the council.

RV. (x. 85. 26) begins with pūṣā́ instead of bhágas. In Kāuç. (76. 10) the verse accompanies the leading of the bride out of her house.

21. Let what is dear succeed (sam-ṛdh) here for thy progeny; watch thou over this house in order to housewife-ship; mingle thy self (tanū́) with this husband; then shalt thou in advanced age speak to the council.

RV. (x. 85. 27) reads in a prajáyā (as does also Ppp.), and in c–d sṛjasvā́ 'dhā jívrī vidátham ā́ vadāthaḥ. Our d is the same with viii. 1. 6 d above, and our mss. here also read jírvis (except Bs.I., jívis), which ought to have been adopted in our text. The Āpastamba text (Winternitz, p. 74 ⌊MP. i. 9. 4⌋) has jīvrī. The verse, with several others, is quoted in Kāuç. 77. 20 in connection with the bride's entering her new abode. The verse lacks two syllables of being a full jagatī. ⌊Vs. discussed by Bloomfield, JAOS. xix.² 14; cf. Baunack, KZ. xxxv. 495, 499.⌋

22. Be ye (two) just here; be not separated; attain your whole lifetime, sporting with sons [and] grandsons, rejoicing, well-homed.

RV. (x. 85. 42) reads své gṛhé instead of svastakāú, and Ppp. has the same. Ppp. also has dīrgham for viçvam in b. ⌊Cf. MP. 1. 8. 8 and note.⌋

23. These two move on one after the other by magic; two sporting young ones go about the ocean; the one looks abroad upon all beings; thou, the other, disposing the seasons art born new.

24. Ever new art thou, being born; sign of the days, thou goest to the apex of the dawns; thou disposest to the gods their share as thou comest; thou extendest, O moon, a long life-time.

These two verses are repeated here from vii. 81. 1, 2; ⌊see the notes to those verses: also the Anukr. extracts at p. 739, ¶ 4, which refer vs. 23 to sun and moon and vs. 24 to the moon⌋. Most of verse 23 we had also as xiii. 2. 11. In order to make sure that the two right ones are reproduced, all our mss. read here pūrvāparám návonavaḥ (instead of, as usual, pūrvāparám íti dvé). They are RV. x. 85. 18, 19, and are found also in other texts, as to which and the various readings see the notes to vii. 81. 1, 2. Ppp. has in 23 d (with RV.) jāyate punaḥ, and in 24 (also with RV.) bhavati, eti, and dadhāti (but apparently tirase). In Kāuç. 75. 6, vs. 23 (according to the comm., both 23 and 24) is used with vs. 1; in 79. 28, vs. 64 is allowed instead of vs. 24, in case the latter is not known.

25. Give thou away the çāmulyà; share out goods to the priests (brahmán); it, becoming a walking (padvánt) witchcraft, enters the husband [as] a wife.

RV. (x. 85. 29) differs only by reading bhūtví in c; our pada-text has bhūtvā́ : ā́ : j-. According to Kāuç. 79. 20, the verse accompanies the giving away of the bride's undergarment, which is regarded as extremely ill-omened if not so disposed of and expiated by gifts to the Brahmans. ⌊Cf. the Anukr. extracts, p. 739, end.⌋ Çāmulyà is defined in the Pet. Lexx. as "a woolen shirt," as identical with çāmūla, which is so defined by the comm. to LÇS. ix. 4. 7. The Āpastamba text (Winternitz, p. 100 ⌊MP. i. 17. 7⌋) reads instead çābalyà.

26. It becomes blue-red; [as] witchcraft, infection, it is driven away (?); her relations (jñātí) thrive; her husband is bound in bonds.

Is RV. x. 85. 28, without variant. Vy àjyate is translated as coming from root aj instead of añj, 'is smeared.' Pāda a perhaps refers to the bloody discoloration of the garment; d to its ill effects if not duly expiated. The Āp.-text (Wint., p. 67 ⌊MP. i. 6. 8⌋) has for a nīlalohité bhavataḥ, as if the garments were two. RV. and AV. pada-texts have āsaktíḥ undivided.

27. Unlovely becomes [his] body, glistening in that evil way, when the husband wraps his own member with the bride's garment.

RV. (x. 85. 30) reads at the beginning açrīrā́, and at the end -dhītsate; Ppp. also has açrīrā; ⌊and tanus for tanū́s⌋. Most of our mss. (all save P.M.W.) give vā́sasas in c, and this is accordingly more probably to be regarded as the AV. reading. ⌊So SPP. with all his authorities.⌋ ⌊The Berlin ed. has vā́sasā, to accord with the RV.⌋ Áñga might mean 'body' (so the translators). ⌊For vss. 27, 28, 29, cf. respectively MP. i. 17. 8, 10, 9, and see Wint., p. 100.⌋

28. Carving on, carving open, also cutting over apart; see the forms of Sūryā; them also the priest (brahmán) cleans (çumbh).

RV. (x. 85. 35) reads at the end tú çundhati ⌊cf. BR. vii. 261, top⌋. Weber ⌊p. 190⌋ sees in the verse a comparison of the blood on the bride's garment with that from the sacrificial victim when dismembered, the priest having power to cleanse both stains away.

29. Harsh is that, sharp, barbed, poisoned; that is not to be eaten; what priest (brahmán) knows Sūryā, he indeed deserves the bride's [garment].

RV. (x. 85. 34) inserts another etát after kátukam, and reads vidyā́t for véda in c. The omission of kátukam (with, in RV., etát) would rectify the meter of a; as it stands, it is an extremely poor "bṛhatī" pāda. Áttave 'to be eaten' is very strange here. Sūryā in c is generally understood to mean 'the Sūryā-hymn.'

The following four verses are found in no other text.

30. That priest verily takes this garment, pleasant, well-omened, who goes over the expiation, by whom the wife takes no harm.

The pada-text reads prā́yaçcittim, undivided; if we had -ttam, yéna would apply to it, instead of to brahmā́. Ppp. reads, for a, b: sa vāi taṁ syono harati brahma vāsas sumañgalan.

31. Do ye (two) bring together a successful (sámṛddha) portion, speaking right in right-speakings; O Brahmaṇaspati, make the husband shine (ruc) for her; let the wooer (sambhalá) speak this speech agreeably (cā́ru).

According to Kāuç. 75. 8, 9, this verse is addressed to the wooer and his companion, when they are sent out to win the bride; the second half-verse to the priest (who is one of them?). 'Make shine,' doubtless 'set in a favorable light.' The verse ⌊scanned by the Anukr. as 11 + 9 : 12 + 12 = 44⌋ may best be read as 11 + 11 : 12 + 12; ⌊but d has a bad cadence⌋. Ppp. reads mṛtyodyena at end of b, and sumbhalo in d.

32. May ye be just here; may ye not go away; may ye, O kine, increase this man with progeny; going in beauty, ruddy, with soma-splendor — may all the gods turn (kṛ) your minds hither.

In Kāuç. 79. 17 this verse (according to the commentators, this and the next) seems to be directed to accompany the paying (in kine) the price demanded for the bride; but surely that cannot have been its original sense. The first pāda is identical with iii. 8. 4 a; c has a redundant syllable. The pada-text writes çúbham : yatīḥ, but the expression is, so far as accent is concerned, treated as if a compound: compare 2. 52 below. No reason is discoverable for the accent of krán in d.

33. May ye, O kine, enter this man together with progeny; this man minisheth (mī) not the share of the gods; for this man shall Pūshan, and all the Maruts, for this man shall Dhātar, Savitar quicken (sū) you.

Ppp. reads viçadhvam at end of a. This verse indicates distinctly that the preceding one is meant as a wish for prosperity in respect to kine.

34. Free from thorns, straight, let the roads be by which [our] comrades go a-wooing for us; together with Bhaga, together with Aryaman — let Dhātar unite [us] with splendor.

The first half-verse is RV. x. 85. 23 a, b, which, however, reads ⌊with MP.⌋ pánthās for ⌊our metrically bad⌋ -thānas; the second half goes on: sám aryamā́ sám bhágo no ninīyāt etc. ⌊cf. MP. i. 1. 2⌋; our text is a foolish and inconsistent substitute. Kāuç. 77. 3 gives the verse, with 2. 11, as to be used when the bridal train starts off home; in 75. 12 it ⌊according to Daça Kar., only the first half-verse⌋ is made to accompany the sending out of a guard for the bride. ⌊Cf. Wint., p. 40.⌋

35. Both what splendor is placed in dice, and what in strong drink — what splendor, O Açvins, is in kine, with that splendor favor (av) ye this woman.

All our mss. accent açvínā in c; our edition makes the necessary correction to açvinā. ⌊SPP. adopts and defends the reading açvínā.⌋ Ppp. puts the verse after our vs. 36. The Anukr. does not heed that the first pāda lacks a syllable. According to Kāuç. 75. 27, this verse, with 43 below, is used in connection with pouring of water on the bride; and again, in 139. 15, this and the next, with several others from different books, accompany a libation ⌊in the fire⌋ in the ceremony of initiation into Vedic study; both also (35, 36) are reckoned as belonging to the varcasya gaṇa (see note to Kāuç. 13. 1). ⌊Cf. ix. 1. 18; vi. 69. 1.⌋

36. With what [splendor] the backsides of the courtezan (mahānagnī), O Açvins, or with what the strong drink, with what the dice were flooded (abhi-sic), with that splendor favor ye this woman.

That is, apparently, give her all the attractions which these various seductive things are known to possess. 'Courtezan,' lit. 'great naked woman,' emending to -nagnyā́s: ⌊but all authorities, both SPP's and W's, have -naghnyā́s⌋. The verse has a distant likeness to one in PGS. ii. 6. 12. The ṣ of aṣicyanta is by Prāt. ii. 92, where this example is quoted in the commentary. The redundant syllable in the first pāda passes unheeded by the Anukr. For the use of the verse in Kāuç. see the note to the preceding verse. Ppp. puts the verse before our 35 as noted above, and the ms. reads for a: yan mā nagnā jaghnam.

37. He who shines (dī) without fuel within the waters, whom the devout (vípra) praise at the sacrifices (adhvará) — O child of the waters, mayest thou give waters rich in honey, with which Indra increased, full of heroism.

The verse is RV. x. 30. 4, which accents dī́dayat, and reads at the end vīryā̀ya. Ppp. combines in a yo 'nidhmo. Kāuç. 75. 14 makes the verse accompany the piercing (pra-vyadh) of a stick of wood (loga) in the water.

38. Now do I remove (apa-ūh) the glistening seizer (grābhá), body-spoiling; what sheen is excellent, that I draw up (ud-ac).

Ppp. reads in the first half-verse tanūdūṣim athi nudāmi. For its second half it has yaç çivo bhadro rocanas tena tvām api nudāmi, making a fair half-anuṣṭubh. According to Kāuç. 75. 15, 16, the thing (the pierced piece of wood) is removed with the first two pādas; and with the third water is drawn up (anvīpam 'in the direction of the current') and is then presented with vs. 39. The verse (9 + 8 : 11 = 28) is described by the Anukr. with mechanical correctness.

39. Let the Brahmans take for her [water] for bathing; let them draw up (?) waters that slay not a hero; let her go about the fire of Aryaman, O Pūshan; father-in-law and brother-in-law are looking on (prati-īkṣ).

The translation implies the obvious emendation of ajantu to acantu in b. ⌊Cf. the MP. reading acantu, and also xi. 1. 2, where vā́cam answers to the RV. reading vā́jam.⌋ There is also something wrong about d, where a plural verb is made to agree with two singular subjects. The Āpast. mantra-text (Wint., p. 43 ⌊MP. i. 1. 7–8⌋) has in both pādas (as well as in other respects) better readings: ā́ 'syāi brāhmaṇā́ḥ snápanaṁ harantu: ávīraghnīr úd acantv ā́paḥ: aryamṇó agním pári yantu kṣiprám prátī "kṣantāṁ çvaçrúvo devárāç ca.* Ppp. reads in a–b ā 'smāi harantu snapanaṁ brahmaṇā 'vīr-; and in c, 'gniṁ pary eti kṣipraṁ. ⌊The kṣipram of Ppp. and MP. suggests that⌋ our pūṣan in c may be a corruption for oṣám; ⌊cf. also vii. 73. 6 a⌋. The use of the verse by Kāuç. 75. 17 was noticed in the preceding note; in 76. 20, the second half-verse accompanies the leading of the bride thrice about the fire (in Āpast. the laying of a ring of darbha-grass upon her head). The Anukr. does not heed the lack of a syllable in b. *⌊Oxford text āpaḥ: misprint?⌋

40. Weal be to thee gold, and weal be waters; weal be the post (methí), weal the perforation (tárdman) of the yoke; weal be for thee the waters having a hundred cleansers (-pavítra); for weal, too, mingle thyself with thy husband.

Ppp. is much corrupted in this verse, but can be seen to read metis for methis in b; in c it combines tā "paḥ, and in d it omits u. In Kāuç. 76. 12, the verse is muttered (according to the paddhati, it and the following verse) while the bride is bound to the right yoke-pole and the left yoke-hole, and a piece of gold is fastened to her forehead. Purification by the yoke-hole (apparently growing out of the occurrence of the next verse in RV.) plays a part in various versions of the marriage-rites; ⌊cf. note to vs. 41⌋. Āpast. (Wint., p. 44 ⌊MP. i. 1. 10⌋) has this same verse with unimportant variations (medhī in b, etc). ⌊Cf. Wint., p. 46.⌋ The verse (11 + 12 : 11 + 11 = 45) is slightly irregular ⌊but has triṣṭubh-cadences throughout⌋.

41. In the hole of the chariot, in the hole of the cart, in the hole of the yoke, O thou of a hundred activities, having thrice purified Apālā, O Indra, thou didst make her sun-skinned.

The verse is RV. viii. 80 (91). 7, which has for sole variant pūtvī́ in c. Prāt. ii. 64 prescribes the combination triṣ p-, but part of our mss. (O.R.K.) read triḥ. The Āpast. version (Wint., p. 43 ⌊MP. i. 1. 9⌋) is quite corrupt. ⌊Cf. MGS. i. 8. 11 and p. 149.⌋ In Ppp. the verse is not found among the marriage verses, but in book iv., ⌊and without variant⌋. ⌊For a careful treatment of the Apālā story, see H. Oertel, in JAOS. xviii.[1] 26.⌋ ⌊The MP. version of this verse furnishes Böhtlingk occasion for some interesting general critical remarks, Berichte der sächsischen Gesellschaft, Feb. 5, 1898, p. 4.⌋

42. Hoping for well-willing, offspring, good-fortune, wealth, becoming obedient (ánuvrata) to thy husband, gird thyself in order to immortality.

This verse also is found in Ppp. away from the rest, in book xx., and with much difference of text: thus, b–d, praco bahur atho balam : indrāṇy anuvratā san nahye amṛtāya kam. In Kāuç. 76. 7, the verse is used, with 2. 70, when the bride is girded with a bond, a yoke-rope (yoktra). The Āpast. version (Wint., p. 45 ⌊MP. i. 2. 7⌋) has tanū́m for rayīm in b, agnér for pátyur in c, and, for d, sáṁ nahye sukṛtā́ya kám. Vāit. 2. 6, again, makes it accompany the girding of the sacrificer's wife at the sacrifice. ⌊In the Berlin ed., correct kam to kám.⌋

43. As the ⌊mighty (?vṛ́ṣā)⌋ river (síndhu) won (?sū) the supremacy of the streams (nadī́), so be thou supreme (samrā́jñī), having gone away to thy husband's home.

Perhaps síndhu should be rendered 'Indus' (so Zimmer, p. 317; Weber, p. 199). Suṣuve, lit. 'impelled for one's self,' is employed here in an unusual sense; the word is quoted as example under Prāt. ii. 91; iv. 82. Ppp. reads sūṣuve vṛkāt. By Kāuç. 75. 27, the verse accompanies the emergence of the bride from the bath (with vs. 35, above).

44. Be thou supreme among fathers-in-law, supreme also among brothers-in-law; be thou supreme over sister-in-law, supreme also over mother-in-law.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 46, which, however, reads for a, s. çvácure bhava; for b, s. çvaçrvā́m bhava; for c, nánāndari s. bhava; for d, s. ádhi devṛ́ṣu; and MB. (i. 2. 20) agrees throughout with RV. (çvaçryām in b must be a blunder). ⌊MP. i. 6. 6 follows RV., but with çvaçruvā́m in b: cf. Wint., p. 66.⌋

45. They (f.) who spun, wove, and who stretched [the web], what divine ones (f.) gave the ends about, let them wrap thee in order to old age; [as] one long-lived put about thee this garment.

Ppp. combines in a yā 'kṛntan. The verse is found also in PGS. (i. 4. 13), HGS. (i. 4. 2), MB. (i. 1. 5). All end a with yā atanvata; in b, all insert ca after yās; and PGS. reads tantūn abhito tatantha*, and MB. devyo antān abhito tatantha; for c, they have tās tvā devīr (MB. devyo) jarasā (PGS. -se) saṁvyayantv (PGS. -yasva); in d, only HGS. has āyuṣmān. ⌊Cf. MP. ii. 2. 5, and Wint., p. 47, and MGS. i. 10. 8 and p. 154.⌋ The verse has an extra syllable in a which the Anukr. does not notice. In Kāuç. 76. 4, this and vs. 53 accompany the putting of a hitherto unused garment upon the bride. ⌊The same two vss. are referred to by the name paridhāpanīye at 79. 13: so the schol.⌋ *⌊This sandhi is of course not to be laid at the door of the accurate Stenzler: it is doubtless the true reading of PGS., and occurs (not only in MB., but also) in Bhavadeva's Paddhati, as Stenzler observes in his Transl., p. 12.⌋

⌊The corruption of abhito 'dadanta (so AV.) to abhito tatantha (PGS. MB. Bhavadeva) is of peculiar text-critical interest, not merely because it is a senseless and unintelligent perversion, but because it is revealed as a corruption by the ignorant failure of the persons responsible for it to change their sandhi in such a way (abhitas tatantha) as to fit their blunder. — This interest is heightened by the fact that we can see the probable occasion of the perversion, to wit, the occurrence in the preceding pāda of the words for 'spun,' 'wove,' 'stretched web' (root tan). These technical terms of cloth-making lend a semblance of appropriateness to the introduction of tantūn tan 'stretch the warp' in pāda b. — Roth had already booked tatantha among the cases of exchange between sonants and surds at ZDMG. xlviii. 108.⌋

46. They bewail the living one (m.); they lead away the sacrifice (adhvará); the men sent their thoughts after ⌊root dhī . . . ánu⌋ a long reach (prásiti); what is lovely (vāmá) for the Fathers who came together here; joy to the husbands for embracing the wife.

This is a literal version of this extremely obscure verse. RV. (x. 40. 10) reads in a ví mayante adhvaré; in b, the equivalent dīdhiyus ⌊so also Ppp.⌋; in c, the equivalent sameriré; in d, jánayas (for our janáye, which might better have been emended in the edition to jánaye); ⌊Ppp. reads and combines janayaṣ⌋. The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 42 ⌊MP. i. 1. 6⌋) reads at the beginning jīvām. The verse is used, with 2. 59, in Kāuç. 79. 30, simply to accompany a libation, at the very close of the marriage rites. In two Sūtras (AGS. ⌊i. 8. 4⌋ and ÇGS. ⌊i. 15. 2⌋) it is directed to be used when the bride, on the journey to her new home, wails or cries; this is plainly only on account of the word 'bewail' (rudanti) at the beginning. ⌊Cf. Lanman's Skt. Reader, p. 387; Winternitz, p. 42; and Bloomfield, who devotes 9 pages to the stanza in AJP. xxi. 411–9.⌋

47. I maintain for thee, in order to progeny, a pleasant, firm (dhruvá) stone in the lap of the divine earth; stand thou on that, one to be exulted after, of excellent glory; let Savitar make for thee a long life-time.

Ppp. puts syonam after dhruvam in a, reads pṛthivyām in b, and tam ā rohā 'numadyā suvīrā for c, and tvā for te in d ⌊i.e., it has tvāyus for ta āyus⌋. In Kāuç. 76. 15, the first half-verse accompanies the setting of a stone in a lump of dung, and in 76. 16 the second accompanies the stepping of the bride upon it: this at the bride's home; and the same is repeated (Kāuç. 77. 17, 19) in the new home of the pair after their arrival there. Pāda a has 12 syllables, unnoticed by the Anukr.

48. Wherewith Agni grasped the right hand of this earth, therewith grasp I thy hand; do not stagger in company with me, with both progeny and riches.

The last pāda ⌊prajayā etc.⌋ is wanting in Ppp., ⌊which puts the vs. after 50⌋. The verse accompanies in Kāuç. 76. 19 the seizing of the bride's hand to lead her about the fire. The Anukr. seems to overlook the vs.; though, if the last pāda were omitted, it would fall under the general definition of the hymn, as an anuṣṭubh. ⌊As to vss. 48–51, cf. Wint., p. 48 f. For the pāṇigrahaṇa, he cites Rāmāyaṇa, i. 75 (Gorresio: or i. 73 Schlegel).⌋

49. Let god Savitar grasp thy hand; let king Soma make thee to have good offspring; let Agni, Jātavedas, make the spouse well-portioned, long-lived, for her husband.

Ppp. has this verse next after our vs. 47, by removing ⌊as noted⌋ 48 to after 50. The Anukr. takes no notice of the deficiency of two syllables in c.

50. I grasp thy hand in order to good-fortune, that with me as husband thou mayest be long-lived; Bhaga, Aryaman, Savitar, Purandhi ⌊púraṁdhi⌋ — the gods have given thee to me in order to housewifeship.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 36, which varies only by reading at the beginning gṛbhṇā́mi. MB. (i. 2. 16) has precisely the RV. form of the verse; HGS. (i. 20. 1) and Āpast. (Wint., p. 49 ⌊MP. i. 3. 3⌋) read in a suprajāstvāya, and HGS. has also gṛhṇāmi and (at end of b) asat. ⌊Cf. MGS. i. 10. 15 a, and p. 150.⌋ ⌊As to puraṁdhi, cf. WZKM. iii. 268; and Pischel, Ved. Stud. i. 202–216.⌋

51. Bhaga hath grasped thy hand; Savitar hath grasped thy hand; thou art [my] spouse by ordinance (dhárman), I thy house-lord.

Ppp. reads dhātā for bhagas in a, inserts te before hastam in b, and adds after b two pādas: bhagas te h. a. and aryamā te h. a., ⌊then finishing with our c, d⌋. One of the subsidiary treatises (see note to Kāuç. 76. 10) substitutes the verse for vs. 20 above (see note there).

52. Be this woman mine, bringing prosperity (póṣya); Brihaspati hath given thee to me; in company with me ⌊as husband⌋ do thou live, rich in offspring, a hundred autumns.

Bp. and Bs.p.m. give in c (as does Ppp.) prajā́vatī, and I.K. prajā́vati; prajā́vatī is evidently the preferable reading; ⌊and is implied in the translation⌋. ⌊Of SPP's authorities, 4 have prajā́vatī against 6 with prajāvati (which latter he adopts): but not less than 7 have (like W's I.K.) the impossible prajā́vati, which supports both readings or neither!⌋ The verse is found also in PGS. i. 8. 19, and in a khila to RV. x. 85 (Aufrecht², p. 682); both have prajāvatī; in a, both have dhruvā́i 'dhi poṣye (RV. -ṣyā) mayi. ⌊See also MP. i. 8. 9: that also has prajā́vatī.⌋

53. Tvashṭar disposed (vi-dhā) the garment for beauty, by direction of Brihaspati, of the poets; therewith let Savitar and Bhaga envelop this woman, like Sūryā, with progeny.

In Kāuç. 76. 4, this verse is used with vs. 45, above ⌊which see⌋, with dressing the bride in a new garment ⌊cf. Wint., p. 47⌋; and the same is repeated in Kāuç. 79. 13 at another point in the ceremonies. The full number of syllables is to be obtained in b only by a harsh resolution. Ppp. has in c nāryaṁ ⌊cf. note to vs. 59⌋, and at the end the decidedly better reading prajāyāi.

54. Let Indra-and-Agni, heaven-and-earth, Mātariçvan, Mitra-and-Varuṇa, Bhaga, both Açvins, Brihaspati, the Maruts, the bráhman, Soma, increase this woman with progeny.

Ppp. has again nāryaṁ in d. Only a is a real jagatī pāda, even by number of syllables (and doubtless we are to read -pṛthvī́); the second definition of it in the Anukr. notices this.

55. Brihaspati first prepared (kḷp) the hairs on the head of Sūryā; with this, O Açvins, do we thoroughly adorn (çubh) this woman for her husband.

It looks as if prathamás were an intrusion in a. ⌊In c, Ppp. has for a third time nāryaṁ.⌋ In Kāuç. 79. 14 the verse is made to accompany the parting of the bride's hair with a blade of darbha-grass; according to the paddhati, this verse and the next are used together for the purpose.

56. This [is] that form in which the young woman (yóṣā) dressed herself; I desire to know with [my] mind the wife (jāyā́) moving about; I will go after her with nine-fold (?návagva) comrades: who, knowing, unloosened (vi-cṛt) these fetters?

This obscure verse gets no light from Ppp., the other texts, or the sūtras. The pada-text reads in c ánu : artiṣye; doubtless it is only a contraction for ánu vartiṣye.

57. I loosen (vi-sā) in me the form of her; he verily shall know, seeing the nest of mind; I eat not stolenly; I was freed (ud-muc) by mind, myself untying (çrath) the fetters of Varuṇa.

Ppp. reads at the end pāçam. This verse and doubtless the next (its pratīka, which is pra tvā muñcāmi, would also designate vs. 19 above) are used, with vii. 78. 1, by Vāit. 4. 11, to accompany the ungirding of the sacrificer's wife. Both are used also by Kāuç. 76. 28 with the ungirding of the bride.

58. I release thee from Varuṇa's fetter, with which the very propitious Savitar bound thee; wide space (loká), an easy road here, do I make for thee, O bride (vadhū́), with thy husband.

The first half-verse is identical with vs. 19 a, b, and corresponds with RV. x. 85. 24 a, b (which reads at end suçévaḥ). Ppp. reads for a–b imāṁ vi ṣyāmi varuṇasya pāçaṁ tena tvā etc.; ⌊cf. the TS. version of our 19 a⌋. ⌊As noted under vs. 19, Ppp. makes our 58 c, d change place with our 19 c, d, reading, however, sūgam itra for our sugám átra and sahapatnī vadhūḥ for our sahápatnyāi vadhu.⌋ Vss. 58, 59, 61 appear to be overlooked by the Anukr., probably by a loss of something out of the text: this (11 + 11 : 10 + 12 = 44) is an irregular triṣṭubh; ⌊the longer form pánthānam would relieve the difficulty: cf. vs. 34, where, as between the longer and shorter equivalent forms, our text is most clearly at fault⌋.

59. Raise ye [your weapons]; may ye smite away the demon; set this woman in what is well done; inspired Dhātar found for her a husband; let king Bhaga go in front, foreknowing.

⌊Ppp. combines a–b thus: hanāthe imāṁ; and that is followed by⌋ nāryaṁ ⌊for nārīm, as in 53, 54, 55*⌋ in b. Kāuç. 76. 32 uses vss. 59, 60, 62 at the setting out of the bride for her new home. This verse also is an irregular triṣṭubh (11 + 10 : 12 + 11 = 44). *⌊Cf. the Ppp. variant bhūmyaṁ for bhū́mim, xiii. 2. 40, 41.⌋

60. Bhaga fashioned the four feet; Bhaga fashioned the four frame-pieces (? úṣyala); Tvashṭar adorned (piç) the straps (? várdhra) along in the middle; let her be to us of excellent omen.

Kāuç. uses the verse not only as stated in the preceding note, but also (76. 25), more properly, with 2. 31, when the bride mounts the couch (talpa). Ppp. reads in a padas; in b, catvāry aṣpadāni; in c, madhyato varadhrāṁ. ⌊For úṣyala, cf. note to vi. 139. 3.⌋ ⌊For the addition to the Anukr. at this point, see above, p. 740, ¶ 2, and especially the note to xv. 5. 7.⌋

61. The well-flowered (sukiṅçuká), all-formed bridal-car (vahatú), golden-colored, well-rolling, well-wheeled, do thou mount, O Sūryā, to the world of the immortal; make thou a bridal-car pleasant to husbands.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 20, which reads çalmalī́m in a for vahatúm, and in d pátye for pátibhyas, and kṛṇuṣva for kṛṇu tvám. MB. (i. 3. 11) also has çalmalim, patye, and kṛṇuṣva, but further in b suvarṇavarṇaṁ sukṛtam, and in c nābhim for lokam. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 6. 4; MGS. i. 13. 6 and p. 157.⌋ Kāuç. 77. 1 combines it with 2. 30, as used when the bride is made to mount the vehicle that takes her to her new home. Ppp. has in c sukṛtasya loke. The verse is a good triṣṭubh.

62. Her, not brother-slaying, O Varuṇa; not cattle-slaying, O Brihaspati; not husband-slaying, possessing sons, O Indra — bring [her] for us, O Savitar.

The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 41 ⌊MP. i. 1. 3⌋) has a corresponding but quite different verse: reading ápatighnīm in b, and, for c, d, índrā́ 'putraghnīṁ lakṣmyàṁ tā́m asyāi savitaḥ suva. The Anukr. does not heed the deficiency of a syllable in a. For the use of the verse in Kāuç. (76. 32), see the note to vs. 59. It is wanting (as above noticed) in Ppp.

63. Injure ye not the maiden (kumārī́), ye (two) pillars, on the god-made road; the door of the divine house we make pleasant, a road for the bride.

Or, 'we make a pleasant road' etc. In Kāuç. 77. 20, the verses 2. 26; 1. 21, 63, 64, in this order, are used to accompany the bride's stepping forward into the house. ⌊Cf. Wint., p. 72, top.⌋

64. Let the bráhman be yoked after, the bráhman before, the bráhman at the end, in the middle, the bráhman everywhere; going forward to an impenetrable stronghold of the gods, do thou (f.), propitious, pleasant, bear rule in thy husband's world.

Besides the use of the verse in Kāuç. 77. 20, as noticed just above, it is quoted, with 2. 8, in 77. 2, when the bride sets out, with a Brahman in front. In 79. 28, it is allowed to be substituted for vs. 23; and in that case (? 79. 32) the ceremony is called brāhmya instead of sāurya.

2. Marriage ceremonies (continued).

[Sāvitrī Sūryā. — ātmadāivatam (10. yakṣmanāçanī; 11. dampatyoḥ paripanthināçanī; 36 ⌊?⌋. devān astāut). ⌊As to the foregoing statements, see above, page 739, ¶'s 8, 4, 5.⌋ ānuṣṭubham: 5, 6, 12, 31, 37, 39, 40. jagatī (37, 39. bhurik triṣṭubh); 9. 3-av. 6-p. virāḍ atyaṣṭi; 13, 14, 17–19, [34, 36, 38,] 41, 42, 49, 61, 70, 74, 75. triṣṭubh; 15, 51. bhurij; 20. purastādbṛhatī; 13 ⌊!⌋, 24, 25, 32, 33 ⌊!⌋. purobṛhatī; [26. 3-p. virāṇ nāma gāyatrī;] 33. virāḍ āstārapañkti; 35. purobṛhatī triṣṭubh; 43. triṣṭubgarbhā pañkti; 44. prastārapañkti; [47. pathyābṛhatī;] 48. satahpañkti ⌊see under the verse⌋; [50. upariṣṭādbṛhatī nicṛt;] 52. virāṭ paroṣṇih; 59, 60, 62. pathyāpañkti; [68. pura-uṣṇih;] 69. 3-av. 6-p. atiçakvarī; 71. bṛhatī.]

The Anukramaṇī, as we have it, omits the description of several of the verses (26, 34, 36, 38, 47, 50, 68); ⌊and, on the other hand, it defines verses 13 and 33 each twice, each once right and once wrong;⌋ and it mixes the order of others ⌊compare Whitney's remarks, above, page 739, ¶ 3, and mine, page 740, top⌋.

The verses (except 50, 58) of this anuvāka or hymn are found also in Pāipp. xviii. (for slight differences of order, see under the verses). ⌊About a dozen verses of this anuvāka or hymn also occur in the RV. wedding-hymn, x. 85.⌋ Only one verse (47) is used by Vāit., but nearly all by Kāuç.

Translated: parts, of course, by the RV. translators; and the parts peculiar to our text by Ludwig, p. 472; and, as AV. hymn, by Weber (as above), Ind. Stud. v. 204–217. For vss. 59–62, see Bloomfield, AJP. xi. 336–341, or JAOS. xv., p. xliv, = PAOS. for Oct. 1890.

1. For thee in the beginning they carried about Sūryā, together with the bridal-car; mayest thou, O Agni, give to us husbands the wife, together with progeny.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 38, RV. reading púnaḥ for sá naḥ in c. All our mss. accent in d ágne, but it has been emended to agne in our edition. Ppp. agrees with RV. in having in c punaṣ pat-. ⌊Cf. PGS. i. 7. 3; MP. i. 5. 3; MGS. i. 11. 12 b, and p. 150.⌋ Kāuç. 78. 10 quotes this verse with 45 below, both preceded by vi. 78. 1, and followed by a long prose-passage, when the pair approach the priest to receive a sort of baptism.

2. Agni hath given back the spouse, together with life-time, with splendor; of long life-time, may he who is the husband of her live a hundred autumns.

Is RV. x. 85. 39, without variant. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 5. 4; MGS. i. 11. 12 c, and p. 152.⌋ The combination yáḥ pátiḥ in c is assured by Prāt. ii. 70.

3. Soma's wife first; the Gandharva thy next husband; Agni thy third husband; thy fourth, one of human birth.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 40, which, however, has for a, b sómaḥ prathamó vivide gandharvó vivida úttaraḥ. It is found also in PGS. (i. 4. 16) and HGS. (i. 20. 2); the former agrees entirely with RV.; the latter deviates from it only in d, where it gives turīyo 'ham man-: Ppp. combines in b aparaṣ p-. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 3. 1.⌋

4. Soma gave to the Gandharva; the Gandharva gave to Agni; both wealth and sons hath Agni given to me, likewise this woman.

Is RV. x. 85. 41, without variant. Found also in MB. (i. 1. 7) and HGS. (i. 20. 2): in the latter, with very different readings: somo 'dadād gandharvāya gandharvo 'gnaye 'dadāt: paçūn̄ç ca mahyam putrān̄ç cā 'gnir dadāty atho tvām. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 3. 2; MGS. i. 10. 10 a, and p. 157; also Wint., p. 48.⌋

5. Your favor hath come, O ye (two) of abundant good things (?vājínīvasu); [our] desires have rested in [your] hearts, O Açvins; ye have been twin keepers, O lords of beauty; may we, being dear, attain favorers (aryamán) of our homes (?dúrya).

The verse is RV. x. 40. 12, RV., however, reading ayan̄sata at end of b. ⌊MP. i. 7. 11 follows the RV. text, but with kāmān̄ for kāmās: cf. Wint., p. 70.⌋ More points than one in the translation are doubtful.

6. Do thou (f.), rejoicing with propitious mind, assign wealth having all heroes, to be extolled; an easy crossing (tīrthá), well provided with drink, O lords (du.) of beauty; do ye smite away the pillar standing in the road, [namely] disfavor.

This verse is altered from RV. x. 40. 13 in a strange and senseless manner. RV. reads for a, b tā́ mandasānā́ mánuṣo duroṇá ā́ dhattáṁ rayíṁ sahávīraṁ vacasyáve, thus making the verse concern the Açvins throughout; who is our 'thou' (sā́) does not appear. In c the sense is destroyed by altering the RV. verb kṛtám (as if it were misunderstood for a participle) to sugám; and in d patheṣṭhā́m (p. pathe∘sthā́m) is turned to páthiṣṭhām (p. páthi∘sthām) and accented as if it were a superlative; ⌊cf. the confusion at vi. 28. 1⌋. The verse is used also in the Āpast. sūtra (Wint., p. 68 ⌊MP. i. 6. 12⌋), with daçavīram in b as its only variant from RV. Ppp. appears to read with our text. The verse lacks two syllables of being a real jagatī. In Kāuç. 77. 8 the verse is directed to be used on arriving at a ford or river-crossing on the bridal journey.

7. What herbs [there are], what streams, what fields, what forests — let these, O bride, defend from the demon thee, possessing progeny, for thy husband.

The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 70 ⌊MP. i. 7. 9⌋) has the same verse, but with different readings: for b, yā́ni dhánvāni yé vánāḥ ⌊Oxford text vánā⌋; in c, té for tā́s; for d, prá tvé muñcantv áṅhasaḥ. Kāuç. 77. 11 uses it on the bridal journey 'under the circumstances mentioned in the verse.'

8. We have mounted this road, easy, bringing welfare, on which a hero takes no harm, [but] finds others' goods.

The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 67 ⌊MP. i. 6. 11⌋) has the same verse, but with sugám pánthānam ā́ 'rukṣam áriṣṭaṁ svas- in a, b. Kāuç. uses it in 77. 2, with 1. 64: see the note to 1. 64. ⌊For yásmin in c Ppp. has the sense-equivalent yatra: cf. its oṣam for our kṣiprám at xii. 1. 35; etc.⌋

9. Pray hear ye now of me, O men, by what blessing (āçís) the two spouses attain what is agreeable (vāmá): what Gandharvas [there are] and heavenly Apsarases, who stand upon these forest trees (vānaspatyá), let them be pleasant unto this bride; let them not injure the bridal-car as it is driven.

The last four pādas form a verse also in the Āpast. text (Wint., p. 70 ⌊MP. i. 7. 8⌋), where for our d is read eṣú vṛkṣéṣu vānaspatyéṣv ā́sate, further çivā́s (for syonā́s) and vadhvāi in e, and ūhyámānām in f. In TS. iii. 2. 8^{4} is found the phrase yám āçīrā dámpatī vāmám açnutáḥ, and āçīrdāyā́ dámpatī vāmám açnutām. The verse is to be used, according to Kāuç. 77. 9, when the bridal train passes great trees. The Anukr. ⌊appears to scan as 9 + 12 : 11 + 12 : 11 + 11 = 66; but pāda a is essentially defective⌋. All our mss. ⌊and SPP's authorities⌋ read in e te, which our edition emends to té; ⌊but SPP. reads te, construing a–d together, and e–f separately: 'unto thee, the bride here'; which seems hard⌋. Ppp. combines in c gandharvā 'ps-.

10. What yákṣmas go to the bride's brilliant (candrá) car among the people, let the worshipful gods conduct those back whence they came.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 31; RV. reads in b jánād ánu. The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 67 ⌊MP. i. 6. 9⌋) has the same verse. ⌊The Anukr. calls the vs. yakṣmanāçanī.⌋

11. Let not the waylayers who pursue (ā-sad) [them] find the two spouses; let them go over what is difficult by an easy [road]; let the niggards run away.

Is RV. x. 85. 32, whose only variant is sugébhis in c. We had a as xii. 1. 32 d, and d as vi. 129. 1–3 d. MB. (i. 3. 12) and Āpast. (Wint., p. 67 ⌊MP. i. 6. 10⌋) have the RV. reading. The verse is used (Kāuç. 77. 3), with 1. 34, when the bridal train starts. ⌊The Anukr. calls the vs. dampatyoḥ paripanthināçanī.⌋

12. I cause the bridal-car to be viewed by the houses with worship (bráhman), with a friendly, not terrible eye; what of all forms is fastened on about, let Savitar make that pleasant for the husbands.

Ppp. reads at the end kṛṇotu tat. According to Kāuç. 77. 14, the verse is uttered when the train comes in sight of the house. Āpast. vi. 6 (Wint., p. 70 ⌊MP. i. 7. 10⌋) has the same verse, with the variants māitreṇa in b, asyā́m for ásti in c, and (like Ppp.) kṛṇotu tát at the end. The comm. to Āpast. understands c of the ornaments worn by the bride, as indicated by the reading asyā́m. The verse (13 + 11 : 11 + 12 = 47) is but a poor jagatī.

13. Propitious hath this woman come to the home; Dhātar appointed this world (sphere) to her; her let Aryaman, Bhaga, both Açvins, Prajāpati, increase with progeny.

The Anukr. takes no notice of the irregularities of the meter (9 + 11 : 10 + 11 = 41). ⌊It defines the verse twice, first as triṣṭubh, then as purobṛhatī (cf. vi. 126. 3). Pādas b and d are good triṣṭubh pādas; and a and c will pass if we resolve naārī iyam and taām.⌋

14. [As] a soulful cultivated field hath this woman come; in her here, O men, scatter ye seed; she shall give birth to progeny for you from her belly (vakṣáṇās), bearing the exuded (dugdhá) sperm of the male (ṛṣabhá).

A couple of our mss. (⌊E.⌋D.) read asyā́m in c. The first pāda is capable of being compressed into 11 syllables, but with violence. Ppp. has for b yasyān naro vapanta bījam asyāḥ, and in c janayāt.

⌊The likening of the woman to the field is very familiar later: cf. Manu ix. 33 f. Cf. also the ματρὸς ἄρουραν of Aeschylus (Septem, 753); Sophocles' ἀρώσιμοι γὰρ χἀτέρων εἰσὶν γύαι (Ant., 569); Eurip. Phoen. 18; etc. My colleague, Professor George F. Moore, calls my attention to Koran ii. 22, "Your women are your plow-land," in Arabic, ḥarth. — Griffith's (not very close) version suggests a different interpretation: hė takes dugdhám as 'milk' of the maternal breast. Perhaps after all we should (with W.) join it with rétas, and in the sense of 'milked'; but with this difference, that it refers to the rétas which is "milked" as a result of the action implied in páso ní galgalīti dhā́rakā at VS. xxiii. 22. Mahīdhara says vīryam̐ kṣarati (cf. kṣīram). — This interpretation is fortified by the use of dhayati at RV. i. 179. 4, 'Lópāmudrā vṛ́ṣaṇam̐ (nadám̐) dhayati çvasántam.⌋

15. Stand firm; virā́j art thou; as it were, Vishṇu here, O Sarasvatī; O Sinīvālī, let her have progeny; may she be in the favor of Bhaga.

Kāuç. 76. 33 uses the verse to accompany the act of making the bride stand firm after rising from the couch. The Anukr. forbids us to abbreviate to 'va in b. In Ppp. a considerable part of the verse is lost. The second half-verse appears again below as 21 c, d.

16. Let your wave smite up the pegs; O waters, release the yoke-ropes (yóktra); let not the two inviolable [kine], not evil-doing, free from guilt, come upon what is unpropitious (?áçuna).

The verse is RV. iii. 33. 13, which, however, reads çū́nam for áçunam in d, and vyènasā for -sāu in d; and Ppp. agrees with RV. ⌊W's "[kine]" seems to overlook the gender of aghnyā́u: see Griffith's note, p. 174.⌋ Kāuç. 77. 15 makes the verse accompany the sprinkling of the car and unyoking of the oxen at the end of the bridal journey.

17. With an eye not terrible, not husband-slaying, pleasant, helpful (çagmá), very propitious, of easy control (suyáma) for the houses, hero-bearing, loving brothers-in-law (?), with favoring mind — may we thrive together with thee.

The concluding word is here rendered as the text gives it, but there is little question that it ought to be emended (with Ppp.) to -mānāḥ, as qualifying 'we.' This verse and the next are a sort of duplication and variation of RV. x. 85. 44; our a here is nearly the same with the first pāda of that verse, which, however, reads edhi for our syonā. Ppp. makes our 17 c, d and 18 c, d change places, reading for the former vīrasūr devakāmā syonām̐ tvedhiṣīmahi sumanasyamānāḥ. Our mss. are divided in c between devṛ́kāmā and devák-, the majority (not Bp.Bs.p.m.E.O.D.) having, with RV. and Ppp., the latter, which is therefore more probably the true reading. Ppp. has in a (like RV.) edhi but with syonā after it ⌊a "blend-reading" such as the Vulgate shows at vs. 18?⌋; and, in b, sūyamā gṛheṣu. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 1. 4; MGS. i. 10. 6, and

p. 146.⌋ The verse accompanies in Kāuç. 77. 22 the leading of the bride thrice about the fire. PGS. i. 4. 16 and HGS. i. 20. 2 have it in its RV. form, with slight variants in HGS. Our verse (11 + 11 : 7 + 13 = 42) is metrically much too irregular to be set down as simply a triṣṭubh.

18. Not brother-in-law-slaying, not husband-slaying be thou here, propitious to the cattle, of easy control, very splendid, having progeny, hero-bearing, loving brothers-in-law(?), pleasant, do thou worship (sapary) this householder's fire.

Our mss. differ, as in the preceding verse, between devṛ́kāmā and devák- in c. The first three pādas agree nearly with RV. x. 85. 44 a–c, but the latter begins a with ághora-cakṣus (like our 17 a) ⌊and omits ihá⌋, reads sumánās instead of suyámā in b, and in c omits prajā́vatī and gives devákāmā; its fourth pāda is the commonplace phrase çáṁ no bhava dvipáde çáṁ cátuṣpade. Ppp. reads for a, b: adevaraghni patiraghny edhi syonaṣ paçubhyas sumanas suvīraḥ; and, for c, d (given, as noted above, as second half of the preceding verse): prajāvatī vīrasūr devṛkāme 'mam agn- etc.; it thus gets rid of the syonā whose apparent intrusion spoils the triṣṭubh-character of our c, d. ⌊The ms. reckons syonā́ to d (by placing the mark of pāda-division before it); but the integrity of imám etc. as a pāda (without syonā́) is palpable. Likely our text represents a blend of two readings: vīrasū́ur devákāmā sionā́ (RV.), and prajā́vatī vīrasū́r devṛ́kāmā (Ppp.): cf. under vs. 17. — Perhaps the corruption at xviii. 1. 39 below is in part due to a confused blending of two readings.⌋

19. Stand up from here; desiring what hast thou (f.) come hither? I [am] thine overcomer, O Iḍā, out of [my] own house; thou that hast come hither, O perdition, seeking the empty — stand up, O niggard; fly forth; rest not here.

This exorcism accompanies, according to Kāuç. 77. 16, a complete sprinkling of her new home by the bride. All our mss. ⌊and all SPP's authorities⌋ have at end of c ājagándha; our edition ⌊not SPP's⌋ makes the, as it seems, necessary emendation to -ntha, which Ppp. also appears to have. ⌊See Roth, ZDMG. xlviii. 108.⌋ Ppp. further reads in a -ṭhā 'daṣ kim, combines ā 'gā 'haṁ, and begins c with açūnyeṣī. In b the translation assumes the pada-reading iḍe — not īḍe, as previous translators prefer to understand; it is hard to tell which word is more out of place. The verse is once more a very poor sort of triṣṭubh. ⌊It may be counted as 44 syllables. Pādas a, b, c scan easily as 11 + 12 : 11; but the good triṣṭubh cadence of d casts suspicion on the integrity of its prior part.⌋

20. When this bride hath worshiped the householder's, the former (pū́rva) fire, then, O woman, do thou pay homage to Sarasvatī and to the Fathers.

Ppp. (which not rarely substitutes āi for ī) seems to agree with all our mss. in reading asaparyāit ⌊see the note to vi. 32. 2⌋. Prāt. ii. 65 prescribes the combination námas k- in d. The first pāda (10 syll.) is both irregular and defective. By Kāuç. 77. 23, the verse, with vs. 46 below, is to accompany the homage paid by the bride to the deities mentioned.

21. Take this protection, defense, to spread under this woman; O Sinīvālī, let her have progeny; may she be in the favor of Bhaga.

The second half-verse is the same with 15 c, d above. The rendering implies ⌊after nā́ryāi in b⌋ an emendation to upastíre (infinitive), which is the reading of Ppp. The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 71 ⌊MP. i. 8. 1⌋) also has it; further, in a it has idám ā́ bhara, and, in d, iyám inserted before bhágasya. In Kāuç. 78. 1, the verse is directed to be uttered while he (the bridegroom?) brings the hide of a red ox.

22. What rushes (bálbaja) ye cast down, and [what] hide ye spread under, that let the girl (kanyā̀) of good progeny mount, who finds a husband.

Balbaja is the Eleusine indica, a coarse rush-like grass. In Ppp., the parts of vss. 22 and 23, and of 24 and 25, are more or less exchanged. In Kāuç. 78, the second pāda is first quoted (in 2), after our vs. 21; then follows (in 3) a, then (in 4) the first part of vs. 23, then (in 5) our c, then (in 6) the second half of vs. 23, all accompanying the corresponding acts of preparing a seat for the bride, that she may take a Brahman-boy into her lap, to encourage the obtainment of male progeny. It may be that Ppp. follows with its changed order the succession of the acts as given in Kāuç.

23. Spread under the rushes upon the red hide; sitting down upon it, of good progeny, let her worship this fire.

Bp.E. ⌊and SPP's C.⌋ read at the end saparyata. For the use in Kāuç., see the preceding note. The second half-verse is used again in 79. 5, when the bride sits down on the nuptial bed.

24. Mount the hide; sit by the fire; this god slays all the demons; here give birth to progeny for this husband; may this son of thine be of good primogeniture.

The last pāda is used by Kāuç. 78. 8 as the boy is seated in the bride's lap, though unsuited to the purpose unless forced out of its natural meaning. ⌊Cf. Wint., p. 75.⌋ There must be some error in the Anukr. text relating to this verse and vs. 25 (which are triṣṭubh) and vs. 32 (see below).

25. Let there come forth (vi-sthā) from the lap of this mother animals (paçú) of various forms, being born; as one of excellent omen, sit thou by this fire; with thy husband (sámpatnī), be thou serviceable to the gods here.

In Kāuç. 78. 9 this verse accompanies the removal of the boy again from the bride's lap. The verse is a pure triṣṭubh. ⌊W. pencils the note "cf. K. xxxix. 10."⌋

26. Of excellent omen, extender (pratáraṇa) of the houses, very propitious to thy husband, wealful to thy father-in-law, pleasant to thy mother-in-law, do thou enter these houses.

The comm. to Prāt. iii. 60 notes the accent of çvaçrvā́t. The verse seems to be overlooked altogether in the Anukr. as we have it; it should be called a 3-p. virāṇ nāma gāyatrī (11 + 11 : 11 = 33). It is used in Kāuç. 77. 20 as the bride enters her new abode.

27. Be thou pleasant to fathers-in-law, pleasant to husband, to houses, pleasant to all this clan; pleasant unto their prosperity (puṣṭá) be thou.

Ppp. puts this verse at the end of the book.

28. Of excellent omen is this bride; come together, see her; having given unto her good-fortune, go asunder and away with ill-fortunes.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 33, which, however, has a different ending: asyāi dattvā́yā 'thā́ 'staṁ ví páre 'tana; and this is read also by PGS. (i. 8. 9) and MB. (i. 2. 14). ⌊Cf. MP. i. 9. 5; Wint., p. 74; MGS. i. 12. 1, and p. 157.⌋ According to Kāuç. 77. 10, it is to be addressed to women who come to look at the bride on her journey. Ppp. reads in d dāurbhāgyena par-. Our edition should read dattvā́.

29. What evil-hearted young women, and likewise what old ones, [are] here — do ye all ⌊sám⌋ now give splendor to her; then go asunder and away home.

The last pāda is nearly identical with RV. x. 85. 33 d: see the preceding note. All our mss. ⌊and SPP's⌋ read in b jaratīs, as if vocative; our edition ⌊not SPP's⌋ emends to jár-, as seems unavoidable.

30. The gold-cushioned (?-prastaraṇa) vehicle, bearing all forms, did Sūryā, Savitar's daughter, mount, in order to great good-fortune.

⌊Nearly⌋ all our mss. ⌊and four of SPP's⌋ accent rukmáprást- (p. rukmá°prást-) in a; our edition emends to rukmápra-. ⌊SPP., with 13 of his authorities, reads rukmaprá-.⌋ The verse is used with 1. 61 (Kāuç. 77. 1), when the bride mounts the car. ⌊Note bíbhratam joined with vahyám, neuter! is the case like those of cakrám āçúm, rátnam bṛhántam, gotráṁ hariçríyam of RV.? cf. my Noun-inflection, p. 600, s.v. Genders.⌋

31. Mount the couch with favoring mind; here give birth to progeny for this husband; like Indrāṇī, waking with good awakening, mayest thou watch to meet dawns tipped with light.

Ppp. reads in c suptā for subúdhā, of which the stem and sense are questionable (it occurs elsewhere only in vs. 75, below); at the end it has cākaraḥ (for jāgaraḥ). ⌊Cf. Wint., p. 92.⌋ The excess of syllables in d is a very poor reason for calling the verse (11 + 11 : 11 + 13 = 46) a jagatī. In Kāuç. 76. 25 the verse is used, with 1. 60, when the bride mounts the couch; and again, 79. 4, when she ascends the nuptial bed (vs. 23 immediately follows: see above).

32. The gods in the beginning lay with (ni-pad) their spouses; they embraced (sam-spṛç) bodies with bodies; like Sūryā, O woman, all-formed, with greatness, having progeny, unite (sam-bhū) here with thy husband.

Ppp. combines at the beginning devā 'gre. The verse (11 + 11 : 12 + 11 = 45) is almost a good triṣṭubh, in spite of the Anukr. ⌊It would be a perfect triṣṭubh in cadence and otherwise if we had the right to excise nāri, the intrusive character of which is very likely.⌋ It is used in Kāuç. 79. 6 when the bride enters the nuptial bed; and also, in 75. 11, vss. 32–36 are strangely made to accompany the strewing of grasses by the wooers who have gone out to arrange for the bridal.

33. Stand up from here, O Viçvāvasu; with homage do we praise thee; seek thou a sister (jāmí) sitting among the Fathers, inserted (?nyàktām); that is thy portion by right of birth; know thou that.

This verse corresponds to RV. x. 85. 22 a, b and 21 c, d; but RV. reads at the beginning úd īrṣvā́ 'to viç-; and in c anyā́m for jāmím, and vyàktām for nyàktām, which seems a mere ignorant substitution for it. Our mss. are divided between nyàktam and -tām; I.E.p.m.O.s.m.R.T.D.K. give -tām, which ending is doubtless to be accepted as the true reading. Ppp. reads with RV. at the beginning, but goes on independently: ud īrṣvā 'taṣ patī hy eṣāṁ viçvāvasuṁ namasā gīrbhir īḍe. The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 89 ⌊MP. i. 10. 1–2⌋) reads vittām for vyaktām. Compare Hillebrandt also in ZDMG. xl. 711; he renders vyàktām simply by 'bride,' one does not see why. ⌊Cf. also Ved. Mythol. i. 435.⌋ ⌊For the metrical definitions of the Anukr., see above.⌋

34. The Apsarases revel a joint reveling, between the oblation-holder and the sun; they are thy birthplace; go away to them; homage I pay thee with the Gandharva-season.

The first half-verse is identical with vii. 109. 3 a, b. The verse, a fairly good triṣṭubh, appears, with vss. 36 and 38, to be passed over by the ⌊London⌋ Anukr. ⌊The Berlin ms. gives the three pratīkas, followed, without iti, by agastatakṣe (!).⌋ Ppp. begins the verse with yā 'psarasas s- (for yā́ aps-), and in b puts antara (for -rā) before havirdhānam.

35. Homage to the Gandharva's mind (?), and homage to his terrible (bhā́ma) eye we pay; O Viçvāvasu, homage [be] to thee with worship (bráhman); go away unto thy wives, the Apsarases.

The translation implies the naturally suggested emendation in a of námase to mánase, which Ppp. supports, reading manaso. Ppp. has further bhāsāya for bhāmāya in b; and, for c, viçvāvaso namo brahmaṇā te kṛṇomi, and, in d, combines jāyā 'ps-. The addition of 'stu at the end of our c would rectify the meter of the pāda and make the definition of the Anukr. exact.

36. With wealth may we be well-willing; we have made the Gandharva go (vṛt) up from here; that god hath gone to the highest station (sadhástha); we have gone where they lengthen out [their] life-time.

The prefix ā́ in b seems out of place. The last pāda appears twice in RV. (i. 113. 16 d; viii. 48. 11 d). The definition of the verse (as noted under vs. 34) appears to be omitted in the Anukr. For the application made in Kāuç. of this and the preceding verses, see under vs. 32; it does not seem at all suitable. Ppp. has in d for yatra the variant vayam ⌊implying, perhaps, that the Kashmir Vāidikas understood pratiránta (p. pra॰tiránte) as pratirántas⌋. ⌊With regard to an Anukr. statement that seems to concern this verse, see above, p. 739, ¶'s 4, 5, 7.⌋ ⌊Cf. xviii. 2. 29 n.⌋

37. Unite (sam-sṛj), O ye (two) parents (pitṛ́), the (two) things that are seasonable; ye shall be mother and father of seed; as a male (márya) a female (yóṣā), do thou mount her; make ye (two) progeny; here enjoy (puṣ) wealth.

⌊For "mount her," W. suggests in pencil "make her mount"; but I suspect that the full expression would be ádhi rohaya çépa enām.⌋ In a, ṛ́tviye is regarded by the pada-text as dual, and is translated accordingly; it probably means the respective contributions of the two to the embryo. Ppp. reads instead (-rā) vṛddhaye, a welcome emendation. Further, in b, it puts pitā before mātā and has ja for ca and ends b with bhavātha; ⌊and it makes our 37 d and 39 c change place, but with puṣyatu no for our puṣyatam⌋. ⌊Pronounce máryeva in c: the verse then scans easily as 11 + 11 : 11 + 12, if we accept the resolution ṛ́tuiye in a.⌋ According to Kāuç. 79. 8, it is used in the act of coition. ⌊Concerning the matter as an essential element of the ritual, see Winternitz, p. 92.⌋ Ppp. arranges this and the following six verses in the order 37, 40, 38, 39, 42, 41, 43.

38. Send, O Pūshan, her, most propitious, in whom men scatter seed (bī́ja); who, eager, shall part our thighs; in whom we, eager, may insert the member.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 37, which, however, reads at end of c (with Ppp.) -çrayāte ⌊'who, eager, shall part her thighs for us'⌋, and of d -hárāma çépam. All our mss. accent pū́ṣan in a; Bp. begins c with yā́ḥ : naḥ. The same verse is found in HGS. i. 20. 2, with nas after tām in a, visrayātāi in c, and -harema çepam in d. PGS. (i. 4. 16) has a corresponding, but quite different, text: sā naḥ pūṣā çivatamām e"raya sā na ūrū uçatī vi hara : yasyām uçantaḥ praharāma çepaṁ yasyām u kāmā bahavo niviṣṭyāi. The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 90 ⌊MP. i. 11. 6⌋) has the RV. version, except -çráyātāi at end of c. ⌊Barring the bad cesura in a, the verse is a good triṣṭubh; but the definition (as noted under vs. 34) is omitted by the Anukr.⌋

39. Mount thou the thigh; apply the hand; embrace thy wife with well-willing mind; make ye (two) progeny here, enjoying; let Savitar make for you a long life-time.

The first half-verse is found also in the Āpast. text (Wint., p. 90 ⌊MP. i. 11. 7⌋), with the variant (after ūrúm) úpa barhasva bāhúm. ⌊Ppp., as just noted, makes our 37 d change place with our 39 c, reading, however, rodamānāu for mod-; and in its d it has tu for vām, combining tv āyus sav-.⌋ The verse is ill defined as a jagatī or bhurik triṣṭubh; it is properly a svarāṭ triṣṭubh.

40. Let Prajāpati generate progeny for you (two); let Aryaman unite (sam-añj) [you] with days-and-nights; not ill-omened, enter thou this world of thy husband; be weal to our bipeds, weal to [our] quadrupeds.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 43, which, however, begins a with ā́ naḥ pr-, b with ājarasā́ya, and c with ádurmañgalīḥ p-. Ppp. also reads the latter (-līṣ p-); and, in d, astu for bhava. RV. further omits imám in c. ⌊MB. at i. 2. 18 follows RV.⌋ The Āpast. text (Wint., p. 90 ⌊MP. i. 11. 5⌋) has precisely the RV. version. MS. (ii. 13. 23) has pāda a only. The verse is almost a good jagatī, only a little damaged by the intrusion of imam in c; ⌊and a perfect jagatī, if (with RV. MB. MP.) we omit imam⌋.

41. This bridal garment and bride's dress, given by the gods together with Manu, whoso gives to a knowing (cikitvā́ṅs) priest (brahmán), he verily slays the demons of the couch (?).

The translation implies at the end the emendation (suggested also by Weber, p. 211) of tálpāni to tálpyāni, as required by both sense and meter, and supported by the Ppp. reading tṛpyāni. For b, Ppp. gives vādhūyaṁ baddho (vadhvo?) vāso 'syāḥ, which, though metrically awkward, is not redundant in expression. In Kāuç. 79. 21, the verse accompanies the priest's acceptance of the bridal garment, given him with i. 25. The verse is a good triṣṭubh, if emended as proposed in d. ⌊Cf. vii. 37. 1 n.⌋

42. What priest's portion they (dual) give to me the bride-seeker (vadhūyú), the bridal garment and bride's dress, do ye, O Brihaspati and Indra, assenting, together give it to the priest (brahmán).

The anomalous accent dattám at the end is read by all our ⌊and SPP's⌋ authorities. Ppp. varies considerably: yan no 'diti brahmabhāgaṁ vadhūyor vāso vadhvaç ca vastram; and dhattām at the end.

43. Awaking out of a pleasant lair (yóni), mightily enjoying yourselves, merry, having good kine, good sons, good houses, may ye, living, pass the outshining dawns.

Ppp. reads in c, d subhāu suputrāu sukṛtāu carātāu jīvā uṣ-; our P.M.W. have carātho. To accent tárāthas, counting it to d instead of c, would be an improvement. The verse (which scans 11 + 11 : 8 + 11 or 11 + 8 = 41) is very ill described by the Anukr. According to Kāuç. 79. 12, it accompanies the rising from the nuptial bed.

44. Clothing myself anew, fragrant, well-dressed, I have risen alive unto the outshining dawns; as a bird from the egg, I have been released out of all sin.

Ppp. combines a–b suvāso 'dā-. According to Kāuç. 79. 27, the verse is used when the priest comes back after washing the bridal garment.

45. Beautiful [are] heaven-and-earth, pleasant near by, of great courses; seven divine waters have flowed; let them free us from distress.

This verse is a repetition of vii. 112. 1. Ppp. reads in b yantusumne, and, for c, āpas sapta sravantīs (tā etc.). The redundant syllable in c is not noticed by the Anukr. here, although it was so at the other occurrence. The verse is used by Kāuç. 78. 10 with vs. 1 (see the note to that verse), and again in 78. 13 it accompanies the pouring of water into the folded hands of the pair; and yet again, in 79. 25, the pouring of water on the bridal garment; this use is evidently the one which gives the verse its place here.

46. Unto Sūryā, unto the gods, unto Mitra and Varuṇa, unto them who are forethoughtful of that which exists, have I paid this homage.

The verse is RV. x. 85. 17, with a differently ordered d, idáṁ tébhyo 'karaṁ námaḥ, by which is avoided the redundancy of a syllable — which the Anukr. passes unheeded. ⌊Ppp. avoids it in yet another way by reading tebhyo 'ham akaraṁ namaḥ.⌋ Kāuç. uses it twice in 77; once in 5, on the wedding-journey; and again in 23, on arrival at the new home. ⌊As to the "deity," of the verse, see above, p. 739, ¶'s 4, 5, 7.⌋

47. He who, without a clamp (?abhiçríṣ), before the piercing of the neck-ropes (?jatrú), combines (sam-dhā) a combination — he the bountiful, the one of much good — removes again what is spoiled (víhruta).

⌊Or 'joins a joining' and 'mends again what is damaged,' as W. suggests in pencil.⌋ This obscure verse is RV. viii. 1. 12, and is found also in several other texts, as SV. (i. 244), MS. (iv. 9. 12), TA. (iv. 20. 1), PB. (ix. 10. 1), KÇS. xxv. 5. 30. The RV. text differs from ours only by having in d íṣkartā for níṣk-; KÇS. alone agrees with RV. in this; SV. is throughout as AV.; PB. begins yakṣate cid, and has vihṛtam in d; TA.

begins yád ṛté, has jartṝ́bhyas in b, purovásus in c, ⌊and vihṛtam in d in the Calcutta ed.: the Poona ed., p. 327, prints it vihrutam, with a virāma after the h !⌋. MS. has a very corrupt text for a, b (jári cétid etc.), and saṁdhis and puruv- in c; and the Āpast. text (Wint., p. 69 ⌊MP. i. 7. 1⌋) agrees throughout with TA. Ppp. writes āṛdaḥ for ātṛdaḥ. The needed description of the verse as a pathyābṛhatī is omitted by our Anukr. Vāit. 12. 7 has the verse used as expiation when anything is broken during the sacrifice; Kāuç. 77. 7, when anything on the bridal car needs mending; and also, 57. 7, when a student's staff is broken.

48. Away from us let the darkness shine (vas), that is deep blue, brown (piçáñga), also red; she who is consuming, spotted, her I fasten (ā-saj) on this pillar.

The latter half-verse is corrupt in Ppp. beyond intelligibility. ⌊The definition sataḥpañkti (cf. my note to vi. 20. 3 and Ind. Stud. viii. 45) presumably means 9 + 11 : 9 + 11. If we could dispense with the yā́ in c, the verse would be excellent so far as rhythm and cadence go (8 + 11 : 8 + 11).⌋ It is used in Kāuç. 79. 22 in connection with taking away the bridal garment to cleanse it. The 'she' is perhaps the female demon supposed to belong to the defiled article.

49. How many witchcrafts in the outer garment (?upavā́sana), how many fetters of king Varuṇa, what failures, what non-successes — them I cause to sit upon this pillar.

Ppp. has paççācāne in a for upavāsane; and, for d, asmin tā stāno muñcāmi sarvām. Our P.M.W. read in d tā́ṁ sth-; the rest, tā́ḥ sth-. In Kāuç. 79. 23 the verse is used immediately after the preceding. The lack of a syllable in a is disregarded by the Anukr.

50. What is my dearest self (tanū́), that of me is afraid of the garment; of it do thou, O forest-lord, make first (ágre) for thyself an inner wrap (nīví); let us not suffer harm.

This verse is used in Kāuç. 79. 24 next after the two preceding, the person who has the garment in charge wrapping a tree with it. The Anukr. contains no definition of the meter (8 + 8 : 8 + 11 = 35). The verse, as noted above, is wanting in Ppp.

51. What ends [there are], how many edges (sic), what webs, and what lines; what garment woven by the spouses — may that touch us pleasantly.

More lit., '[as] a pleasant one.' With this verse, according to Kāuç. 79. 26, the new possessor of the garment puts it on, then coming back with vs. 44. The Anukr. notices this time the redundant syllable in b (we are doubtless to contract to yāú 'tavo). Ppp. reads, for c, d, vāso yat patnībhṛtaṁ tanvā syonam upa spṛçaḥ.

52. Eager, these young girls, going to a husband from the father's world, have let go the consecration: hail!

All our mss. ⌊and SPP's authorities⌋ leave yatīḥ in b unaccented, as in 1. 32 c, as if pátiṁ yatīḥ were a sort of compound word, ⌊although the pada-text treats them as separate words!⌋. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 4. 4, and Wint., p. 54, vs. 4, p. 55 n. 1.⌋ The Anukr. counts in svā́hā at the end as a metrical part of the verse. According to Kāuç. 75. 24, this verse is uttered as the bride lays fuel on the fire; then ⌊75. 25⌋, with seven verses, (apparently, this and the six that follow ⌊so schol.⌋), the prepared water is heated, and with vs. 65 below, the bride is bathed.

53. Her, let go by Brihaspati, all the gods maintained; what splendor is entered into the kine, with that do we unite this woman.

⌊Cf. Böhtlingk, ZDMG. liv. 614.⌋ Besides the use of vss. 53–58 made by Kāuç. 75. 25, as noticed in the preceding note, they are again applied in 76. 31, when at the end of the wedding ceremony the bride is sprinkled with fragrant powders. The connection of ávasr̥ṣṭām with ávā 'sr̥kṣata in vs. 52 c, suggests dīkṣām as the word to be supplied in the first lines of these verses; and so Ludwig translates.

54. Her, let go etc. etc.; what brilliancy (téjas) is entered etc. etc.

55. Her, let go etc. etc.; what fortune (bhága) is entered etc. etc.

56. Her, let go etc. etc.; what glory is entered etc. etc.

57. Her, let go etc. etc.; what milk (páyas) is entered etc. etc.

58. Her, let go etc. etc.; what sap is entered etc. etc.

Of these six verses, differing from one another only in one word, Ppp. omits one (58), and puts 55 after 56.

59. If these hairy people have danced together in thy house, doing evil with wailing — from that sin let Agni and Savitar release thee.

This and the three following verses are discussed by Bloomfield in AJP. xi. 336 ff. ⌊or JAOS. xv., p. xliv. = PAOS. for Oct. 1890⌋. They evidently have no connection originally with marriage ceremonies, but rather with wailings for the dead, which are regarded as ill-omened and requiring expiation.* ⌊Cf. the following verses.⌋ Kāuç. quotes only this one (79. 30), and for no definite purpose, combining it with 1. 46 (see note to the latter). Ppp. reads in a yad amī for yadī 'me, and in c kr̥ṇvatīs. The false accent kr̥ṇvantás (which our edition has not corrected) is read by all our mss. save one (D.).

⌊The case is nearly the same with the authorities of SPP., who says, "This reading [kr̥ṇvantó] appears ancient, traditional, and general." A note in my copy of AV. suggests that the blunder may have crept in from vs. 61; and I find my surmise confirmed not only by SPP. (who, however, attributes the wrong accent and kampa to vs. 60; see his note), but also by the fact of similar occurrences elsewhere: cf., for example, the curious avagraha of sám°jñapayāmi at vi. 74. 2 (and my note); the impossible ví°bhāti at xiii. 3. 17, and note; etc.⌋

*⌊Cf. Francis James Child, The English and Scottish Popular Ballads, part x., p. 498, under the heading "Tears destroy the peace of the dead," and the citation from MBh. xi. 1. 42–43 given on p. 294 of the same part: "For they [the tears], like sparks, 'tis said, do burn those men [for whom they're shed]."⌋ ⌊See Lüders, ZDMG. lviii. 507.⌋

60. If this daughter of thine has wailed with loosened hair (vikeçá) in thy house, doing evil with wailing — from that sin etc. etc.

Ppp. has a very different text: yad āsāu ⌊! yadā 'sāu ?⌋ duhitā tava vikreṣv arujat: bahu rodhena kr̥ṇvaty agham.

61. If (yád) sisters (jāmí), if young women, have danced together in thy house, doing evil with wailing — from that sin etc. etc.

Because of the redundant syllable ⌊the second yád, intrusion?⌋ in a, the Anukr. absurdly separates this verse from the others here, and calls it a triṣṭubh.

62. If in thy progeny, in thy cattle, or in thy houses is settled (ni-sthā) any evil done by the evil-doers — from that sin etc. etc.

63. This woman, scattering shrivelled grains (pū́lya) appeals: be my husband long-lived; may he live a hundred autumns.

Ppp. reads in b pūlpāni ⌊instead of our pū́lyāni. For the distinction between lpa and lya (note to vi. 127. 1), nāgarī mss. are of course not to be trusted. All but one of SPP's read pū́lpāni and his two then living çrotriyas recited pū́lpāni. But in view of the Prākrit pulla etc. he reads pū́lyāni.⌋ Instead of our d, Ppp. reads edhantāṁ pitaro mama. The same verse is found in several Sūtras: PGS. (i. 6. 2), HGS. (i. 20. 4), MB. (i. 2. 2), and the Āpast. text (Wint., p. 56 ⌊MP. i. 5. 2⌋); but with sundry various readings in b and d: for pūlyāni, the Āpast. text has gúlpāni ⌊Oxford ed. kúlpāni⌋, and PGS. lājān, while HGS. and MB. give for the whole pāda gnāu lājān āvapantī; in d the Āpast. text reads jīvātu, and the other three (nearly agreeing with Ppp.) for the whole pāda edhantāṁ jñātayo mama; MB., moreover, inserts between c and d çataṁ varṣāṇi jīvatu. ⌊PGS. has in c āyuṣmān for dīrghā́yus.⌋ ⌊Cf. MGS. i. 11. 12 d, and p. 148.⌋ According to Kāuç. 76. 17, the verse is repeated while the bride stands firm upon the stone and scatters the grains. ⌊For āvapantikā́, cf. ii. 3. 1; iv. 37. 10; v. 13. 9 and notes.⌋

64. Here, O Indra, do thou push together these two spouses like two cakravākás; let them, with [their] progeny, well-homed, live out all their life-time.

Ppp. has in c the better reading prajāvantāu sv-, and, in d, dīrgham for viçvam. Some of our mss. (Bp.E.T.K.) ⌊and three of SPP's⌋ read at the end -nutam. The Kāuç. (79. 9), on account of the verb sam-nud, has the verse used to accompany the act of coition.

65. What is done on the chair (āsandī́), on the cushion (upadhā́na), or what on the covering (upavā́sana); what witchcraft they have made at the wedding (vivāhá) — that do we deposit in the bath.

Ppp. reads in a āsandhyā up-. By Kāuç. 75. 26, the verse is used at the bride's bath, next after vss. 52–58, and before 1. 35, 43. ⌊Griffith would seem to take yád as virtually equivalent to yā́ṁ kṛtyā́m.⌋

⌊The āsandī́ appears to be now a throne (cf. AB. viii. 5, 6, 12), and now something between a lounging chair and a bed, 'a long reclining chair' such as Anglo-Indians use today with more comfort than elegance. That it was usable also as a bier carried by four bearers appears from Dīgha Nikāya, ii. 23, and Buddhaghosa's scholion. Compare also the description below, AV. xv. 3. 3 ff. — In Hāla's Saptaçataka, āsandiā is glossed by khaṭvā (no. 112, ed. 1870) or paryañkikā (no. 700, ed. 1881).⌋

66. What ill deed, what pollution at the wedding, and what on the bridal car — that difficulty do we wipe off on the dress (kambalá) of the wooer.

Ppp. reads in c sambharasya. Kāuç. 76. 1 makes the verse accompany the rubbing of the bride dry after the bath with a garment, which is then carried to the woods and fastened to a tree.

67. Having settled the defilement on the wooer, the difficulty on the dress, we have become worshipful, cleansed (çudh); may he extend our life-times.

Ppp. also has this time sambhale in a; in d, it combines nā "yūṅṣi and reads tāriṣam. ⌊Here, as at iv. 10. 6 and ii. 4. 6: see notes,⌋ part of our mss. (Bs.E.O.D.) read tārṣat. With the verse compare xii. 2. 20 above. The Anukr. passes without notice the extra syllable in a.

68. The artificial hundred-toothed comb (?) that is here shall scratch away the defilement of the hair of her, away that of her head.

The majority of our mss. (all but Bs.s.m.P.R.) read káṇṭakas 'thorn' in a. Ppp. has kañkadas. The Kāuç. text, 76. 5, with the subsidiary texts (see note to that rule), gives kañkata, with our edition. There is little to choose between the two readings. Ppp. reads in b apā 'syāt k-. The verse, which is a purauṣṇih, is not defined by the Anukr. Kāuç. 76. 5 makes it accompany the combing of the bride's hair after she has been bathed and (with 1. 45, 53) clothed in a new garment.

69. Away from every limb of her do we deposit the yákṣma; let that not attain (pra-āp) the earth nor the gods; let it not attain the heaven, the wide atmosphere; let that defilement not attain the waters, O Agni; let it not attain Yama and all the Fathers.

Ppp. reads in a, b yo 'yam asyām upa yakṣmaṁ ni dhatta naḥ. Kāuç. 76. 14 uses the verse to accompany the purifying of the bride. The metrical structure (8 + 8 : 11 + 11 : 11 + 11 = 60) is described as well as the Anukr. knows how.

70. I gird thee with the milk of the earth; I gird thee with the milk of the herbs; I gird thee with progeny, with riches; do thou, being girded, win (ā-san) this strength (?vā́ja).

TS. (iii. 5. 6^{1}) has a corresponding verse, of which this seems an artificial variation: sáṁ tvā nahyāmi páyasā ghṛténa s. t. n. apá óṣadhībhiḥ: s. t. n. prajáyā 'hám adyá sā́ dīkṣitā́ sanavo vā́jam asmé. ⌊Cf. MGS. i. 11. 6 (with adbhís for apás), and p. 156.⌋ Kāuç. 76. 7 uses the verse (with 1. 42) at the girding of the bride.

71. He am I, she thou; chant am I, verse thou; heaven I, earth thou; let us (two) come together here; let us generate progeny.

The verse (8 + 8 + 8 : 7 + 8 = 39) is strangely called a bṛhatī by the Anukr. It is found, with more or less variation, in a host of other texts: AB. (viii. 27. 4), TB. (iii. 7. 19), K. (xxxv. 18), ÇB. (xiv. 9. 4^{19}), AGS. (i. 7. 6), PGS. (i. 6. 3), HGS. (i. 20. 2), Āp. (ix. 2. 3). In the first pāda, TB. (with which HGS. and Āp. agree throughout) has the unintelligent reading ámūhám; AB. has sa for sā, which seems also a mere blunder. After this, AB.ÇB.AGS.PGS. add the same, inverted: sā́ (AB. sa again) tvám asy ámo 'hám (ÇB. PGS. ahám). As regards our third pāda, there is no variant in reading, but AB.TB.AGS.HGS.Āp. put it before our second. In our second pāda, the same texts omit the asmi; the whole pāda is wanting in Ppp. For our d, AB. has tāv eha saṁ vahāvahāi, and ends there; TB. etc. give as ending to the verse tā́v é 'hi sám bhavāva sahá réto dadhāvahāi puṁsé putrā́ya véttavāi; ÇB. nearly the same, but with saṁrabhā́vahāi, dadhā́vahāi, and víttaye; AGS. instead tāv e 'hi vi vahāvahāi prajām pra janayāvahāi; PGS. spins out the longest ending: tāv e 'hi vi vahāvahāi saha reto dadhāvahāi prajām pra janayāvahāi putrān vindāvahāi bahūn te santu jaradaṣṭayaḥ. ⌊Cf. MP. i. 3. 14, and Wint., p. 52; also MGS. i. 10. 15 d, and p. 146, and i. 10. 15 e, and p. 150, s.v. tā; also GB. ii. 3. 20; JUB. i. 54.⌋ Kāuç. 79. 10 uses the verse, with i. 34. 1, after the consummation of the union.

72. The unmarried of us seek a wife, the liberal seek a son; may we (two), with uninjured life-breath, be companions (sac), in order to what is great, to winning of strength (?vā́ja-).

'Of us' in a is dual (nāu) in the text, but requires, doubtless, emendation to nas or to nú. The corresponding half-verse in RV. (vii. 96. 4 a, b) has nú; it reads janīyánto nv ágravaḥ putrīyántaḥ s-. That our denominatives have a right to their short i is further vouched for by their quotation as examples for it under Prāt. iii. 18. Whether one should emend in d to bṛhatyāi, or translate as is done above, may be made a question; it seems most likely to be a mixed construction, meaning virtually 'in order to the gaining of great vāja.' Vā́jasātaye is never joined with an adjective in RV. Ppp. reads with our text throughout.

73. What bride-beholding Fathers have come to this bridal-car, let them bestow on this bride, with her husband, protection accompanied with progeny.

The pada-text has the bad reading ā́ : agaman, instead of ā○ágaman. Part of our mss. (Bp.P.M.W.O.) read in c sámpatyāi, but doubtless only by the scribes' oversight. According to Kāuç. 77. 12, the verse is to be used when the bridal train passes by a burial-place.

74. She who hath come hither before, girdling herself (?), having given to this woman here progeny and property — her let them carry along the road of what is not gone; this one, a virā́j, having good progeny, hath conquered.

This obscure verse is not made clear by Kāuç. 77. 4; though the latter perhaps means it to be used if another bridal procession goes athwart the track at a cross-roads. The pada-text in a divides without any reason raçanā○yámānā. Perhaps, too, we ought to resolve pū́rvā́gan into pū́rvā : ā○ágan, instead of pū́rvā : ágan, as the p. does. The third pāda is perhaps a mere ill-wish with contempt: 'she may go to grass.' Ppp. reads in b dhattām, in c abhi for anu, and combines in d suprajā 'ty-. ⌊For consistency, the Berlin text should have dattvā́.⌋

75. Continue thou awake, waking with good awakening, unto length of life of a hundred autumns; go to the houses that thou mayest be house-mistress; let Savitar make for thee a long life-time.

Ppp. reads for c gṛhān pre 'hi sumanasyamānā, and combines in d tā "yus sav-. We had ⌊part of a, above, in 31 c⌋; c above as 1. 20 c; and d as 1. 47 d ⌊nearly =⌋ 2. 39 d. According to Kāuç. 77. 13, the verse is to be used if the bride falls asleep on the road.

The Anukr. is not content with this length of hymn, but adds three more pieces from other parts of the Veda to fill up the "wedding of Sūryā": sahṛdayam (iii. 30. 1) ity atharvā sāumyam ⌊sāṁmanasyam?⌋ ānuṣṭubham ā no agna (ii. 36. 1) iti pativedanaḥ sāumyaṁ trāiṣṭubhaṁ vi hī (xx. 126. 1) 'ti tryadhikāi "ndro ⌊tryadhikam āindro?⌋ vṛṣākapir indrāṇī 'ndraç ca (mss. -drasya) samūdire pāñktam ity eṣa sāuryavivāha iti.

⌊Here ends the second anuvāka, with 1 hymn (but see pages 738–9) and 75 verses. The quoted Anukr. says pañcasaptatir uttaraḥ (see p. 738).⌋

⌊Here ends the twenty-ninth prapāṭhaka.⌋

Book XV.

⌊The Vrātya.⌋

⌊This fifteenth book is the third book of the third grand division (books xiii.–xviii.) of the Atharvan collection; and (like books xiii. and xiv.) it clearly shows that unity of subject which is the distinguishing characteristic of the books of the division. Books xv. and xvi. are unlike all the others in that they consist exclusively of paryāya-sūktas, the former of 18, and the latter of 9. The book has, I believe, the distinction of being the first book of the Atharva-veda ever translated into an Occidental language: not only a translation of it, but also the original text, was published by Theodor Aufrecht, in the very first part of the first volume of the Indische Studien, pages 121–140, in August, 1849 (title-page, 1850: but see ZDMG. iii., pages 484, 482), some five or six years before the first part of the Berlin edition, the provisional preface of which is dated February, 1855. The bhāṣya is again lacking.⌋

⌊The word vrātya is defined by BR. as 'belonging to a roving band (vrâta), vagrant; member of a fellowship that stood without the Brahmanical pale.' It is further applied to the son of an uninitiated man (Bāudhāyana, i. [8.] 16^{16}: cf. Manu, x. 20), or also to one who has let the proper time for the sacrament of initiation slip by (Manu, ii. 39). And the MBh., at v. 35.46 = 1227, classes the vrātya with the offscourings of society, such as incendiaries, poisoners, pimps, adulterers, abortionists, drunkards, and so on.— In the St. Petersburg Lexicon, vi. 1503, BR. express the opinion that the praise of the vrātya in this book is an idealization of the pious vagrant or wandering religious mendicant. In this connection, Weber's History of Indian Lit., p. 112, may be consulted; also Bloomfield's more recent paragraph in his contribution to Bühler-Kielhorn's Grundriss, entitled The Atharvaveda, p. 94.⌋

⌊The Anukr., in its statements as to the "deity" of the book, says adhyātmakam (see p. 773); and the Cūlikā Upanishad (see Deussen's Upanishads, pages 637, 640) reckons the vrātya as one among the many forms in which Bráhman is celebrated in the AV., mentioning in the same verse with vrātya (celebrated in AV. xv.) also the brahmacārin and the skambha and the palita (celebrated respectively at AV. xi. 5 and x. 7, 8 and ix. 9), etc.—And this view accords well with the penultimate verse of the fifth prapāṭhaka of the Chāndogya Upanishad (v. 24. 4), where it is said of the sacrificial remnant that, if it be offered even to an outcaste, it is as good as if offered to the omnipresent All-soul, provided only it be done with the right knowledge. And a similar idea is perhaps meant to be expressed by our text here, AV. xv. 13. 8, 9.⌋

⌊In spite of its puerility and surface-obscurity, the book is not unworthy of a searching investigation. That investigation should be one of much wider scope than I can now make; but I presume that the principal passages of the literature which would here come into consideration are those that treat of the vrātya-stomas (ceremonies by which vrātyas gain admission to the Brahmanical order), namely the seventeenth adhyāya of the PB. (parts 1–4) and the eighth prapāṭhaka of LÇS. (part 6). — Excerpts from these passages were given by Weber (1849), Ind. Stud. i. 33, 52; and, more recently, the main points were reported by Hillebrandt, Ritual-litteratur, p. 139. And the whole matter has been made the subject of an article by Rājārām Rāmkrishṇa Bhāgavat, in the Journal of the Bombay Branch of the RAS., vol. xix., pages 357–364. He regards the vrātyas as non-Aryans. It is noteworthy that a number of the articles of the outfit of a vrātya as rehearsed by these two texts are found also in our AV. text: so, for example, the turban, the goad, the vipatha.⌋

⌊The divisions of the book. — To begin with, the division into two anuvākas or 'lessons,' the first of 7 and the second of 11 paryāyas, is clearly avouched by the Old Anukr. (see next ¶ but one); and it is also proved by AV. xix. 23. 25, where the vrā́tya-book is mentioned as a dual, the text reading vrātyā́bhyāṁ [accent!: sc. anuvākā́bhyām ?] svā́hā, 'to the anuvākas about the vrā́tya hail!' — The decad-division is wanting.⌋

⌊In the foregoing books, the Berlin edition has grouped together for the purposes of numeration the combinable paryāyas (see pages 471–2) so as to form the groups which it numbers as viii. 10 (with 6 paryāyas); ix. 6 (with 6); [ix. 7 has but 1;] xi. 3 (with 3); xii. 5 (with 7); and xiii. 4 (with 6). For theoretical consistency, the same procedure should have been followed in this book and the next: but the practical difference would have amounted to little (we should have had to cite, for example, xv. 1. 18^1 instead of xv. 18. 1, or xvi. 1. 9^1 instead of xvi. 9. 1); moreover, the procedure of the Berlin edition is questionable and has not been followed by the Bombay edition. For an account of the discrepancies thus arising, see pages 610–611; and for SPP's detailed defense of his procedure, see the Critical Notice in his first volume, pages 21–22, where he prints the pertinent text of the Old Anukr. in full and that of the Major Anukr. in large part. — A comparison of the two texts shows that the later work has quoted the precise words of its predecessor throughout.⌋

⌊The quotations from the Old Anukr. are given piecemeal at the end of the anuvāka or paryāya or group of paryāyas to which they severally refer. They may here be given in metrical form. Of the first line, the prior half refers to the first anuvāka as a whole, and the latter half to the second. Lines 2–4 refer to the paryāyas of the first anuvāka; and lines 5–10 refer to those of the second. The numbers in parentheses refer to the paryāyas as counted from the beginning of the anuvāka; and those in brackets refer to the paryāyas as counted from the beginning of the book.

⌊A conspectus of the divisions in tabular form follows. In each of the two tables, the first line gives the number of the anuvāka, and that of the paryāya as counted from the beginning of the anuvāka; the second line gives the number of the paryāya as counted from the beginning of the book; the third gives the number of such divisions (gaṇas: p. 472) of a paryāya as show minor subdivisions; and these subdivisions are shown in the fourth line of the first table and in the fourth and fifth lines of the second table (the subdivisions of the fourteenth paryāya being called vacanāni: p. 472). In each table, the last line gives the number of divisions of a paryāya which are not further subdivided. — Observe that the statements of the two tables are all contained in the text of the Old Anukr., excepting those concerning the number of gaṇas (the third line in each table), which statements are taken from the summations noted by some mss. at the end of the gaṇa-paryāyas, and excepting the "sums" in the last column, and excepting the distribution of the avasānarcas of paryāyas 13 and 11 into 2 categories (as explained in the fourth paragraph of the next page).

Note that the "fourteen" and "eleven" assigned respectively to paryāyas ii. 6 (or 13) and ii. 4 (or 11) represent non-coördinate divisions, as explained below, p. 772. — Some mss. sum up the avasānarcas of the first anuvāka as 112. This agrees with the Old Anukr. (and the table). At the end of the second, we find the summation: gaṇas, 20; gaṇa-avasānarcas, 16; vacana-avasānarcas, 24; paryāya-avasānarcas, 71; in all, 16 + 24 + 71 = 111. ⌊Differences between the two editions in the divisions of the paryāyas. There are no differences between them in the paryāyas proper (as distinguished from the gaṇa-paryāyas), i.e. in those eleven paryāyas which have no subdivided divisions, to wit, paryāyas 1, 3, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18. But for 15 and 16 and 17, this statement needs to be modified by rehearsal of the fact that SPP. prefixes to the yò 'sya of each of the avasānarcas of the Berlin ed. from 15. 3 to 17. 7, and also to the 3 remaining avasānarcas of 17, the words tásya vrā́tyasya with an avasāna-mark, but nevertheless makes his numbering as does the Berlin ed.⌋

⌊The differences accordingly are confined to the remaining seven paryāyas (those which have subdivided divisions), that is, to the gaṇa-paryāyas 2, 4, 5, 6, 11, 13, 14. — In paryāya 14, each of the 12 numbered divisions of the Berlin ed. is really a gaṇa and is subdivided (alike in both editions, by a mark just after kṛtvā́) into 2 vacanas: but the vacanas are numbered as 24 only by SPP. — A similar statement applies to paryāya 4, save that here the subdivision is each time into 3: thus the 6 divisions of the Berlin ed. become 18 with SPP. — We should expect the case of paryāya 6 to be just like that of 4: namely that the 9 gaṇas of the Berlin ed. would become (9 × 3 =) 27 gaṇa-avasānarcas in the Bombay ed.; but in fact the mss. divide one gaṇa (the eighth: see note thereon) into only 2 subdivisions; so that the sum is only 26. Note here especially that the anomalous division is supported by the Old Anukr. and that the two editions do not differ in the marking of the subdivisions, but only in the numbering.⌋

⌊With paryāyas 5 and 2, the case is as explained on pages 628–629: in a sequence of refrains or anuṣan̄gas, the refrain is given in full and counted as a separate avasāna only for its first and last occurrence in that sequence. — In paryāya 5 (see note), there are 7 gaṇas, each with 3 subdivisions (the first ending with akurvan and the second with īçānaḥ): therefore we have 2 gaṇas (the first and last), each with 3 subdivisions, making 6; and the remaining 5, each with 2 (a and b–c), making 10; and so, in all, 16. — In paryāya 2 (for minor differences, see notes), we have the first and last, each with 8 subdivisions, making 16; and the remaining 2, each with 6 (a, b, c, d, e, and f–h), making 12; and so, in all, 28.⌋

⌊Finally, in the case of paryāyas 13 and 11, we have divisions which are not coördinate. In 13, each of the first 5 divisions as numbered in the Berlin ed. is really a gaṇa with 2 subdivisions (the prior one ending with vásati); and each of the remaining 4 is undivided: SPP. therefore numbers them as (5 × 2 =) 10 gaṇa-avasānarcas and 4 paryāya-avasānarcas, thus making "14 avasānarcas of both kinds," as required by the Old Anukr. — In the case of paryāya 11, the Old Anukr. requires the division into 11 avasānarcas, and this is the division of both editions. The requirement of the non-coördinate subdivisions, namely into 5 + (3 × 2 =) 6 = 11, is made only by the summations of the mss., and only by some of them, not all. This division, if made at all, is doubtless to be made by taking the first 5 as paryāya-avasānarcas and the last 6 as gaṇa-avasānarcas (3 gaṇas of 2 each).⌋

⌊Of this book we find in Pāipp. (in xviii.) only the first paryāya and a phrase from the second.* Moreover, neither Kāuç. nor Vāit. make any citations from the book; but it may be noted that xv. 5. 1 is reckoned to the rāudra gaṇa by the schol. to Kāuç. 50. 13. In respect of contents and style, the book is quite like the Brāhmaṇas, and it is all in prose. Occasional sequences of words are rhythmical (so the first phrase of 17. 8 and the relative clauses of 15 and 16 and 17); but these are doubtless mere casual lapses into meter (cf. p. 869).⌋

⌊Whitney's ms. appears to indicate that he intended to give to each paryāya-sūkta a heading (in Clarendon type, as before); and I have thought it well, for the sake of convenience and typographical clearness, to carry out his apparent intent. — Moreover, to facilitate reference to the Bombay edition, I have added, in ell-brackets (⌊ ⌋), the numbers of SPP's minor divisions, wherever the latter differ from those of the Berlin edition.⌋

⌊The excerpts from the Major Anukr. which concern the kāṇḍa as a whole may first be given.⌋

1. Paryāya the first.

[aṣṭāu. 1. sāmnī pañkti; 2. 2-p. sāmnī bṛhatī; 3. 1-p. yajurbrāhmy anuṣṭubh; 4. 1-p. virāḍ gāyatrī; 5. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 6. 3-p. prājāpatyā bṛhatī; 7. āsurī pañkti; 8. 3-p. anuṣṭubh.]

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 130; Griffith, ii. 185.

1. A Vrātya there was, just going about; he stirred up Prajāpati.

Ppp. reads: vrātyo vā ida agra āsīt. The verse lacks one syllable of a full sāmnī pañkti (20 syll.).

2. He, Prajāpati, saw in himself gold (suvárṇa); he generated that.

For suvarṇam ātmann, Ppp. reads: ātmanas suparṇam.

3. That became one; that became star-marked (lalā́ma); that became great; that became chief; that became bráhman; that became fervor; that became truth; therewith he had progeny.

Ppp. has the same text with slight differences of order. The verse counts the required 48 syllables if we restore the elided a in tápo abhavat.

4. He increased; he became great; he became the great god (mahādevá).

In this verse both elided initial a's have to be restored, making 19 syllables.

5. He compassed the lordship of the gods; he became the Lord (īçāna).

We need to read pári āit and -no abhavat to make 16 syllables. ⌊Of this verse, Ppp. has only the last three words.⌋

6. He became the sole Vrātya; he took to himself a bow; that was Indra's bow.

Ppp. inserts devānām before ekavr-, and reads tad indradhanur abhavat. To read abhavat, again, fills out the 20 syllables.

7. Blue its belly, red [its] back.

That is, apparently, of the bow (the rainbow); though 'its' (asya) might equally well be 'his.'

8. With the blue he envelops (pra-vṛ) a hostile cousin, with the red he pierces one hating him [— he who knows thus]: so say the theologians (brahmavādín).

If we read -ti íti, the syllables are 32; but to call the passage an anuṣṭubh is absurd. It can hardly be questioned that the addition in brackets is called for by the sense.

2. Paryāya the second.

[dvyūnā triṅçat. a of 1–4, 1 f, 4 f. sāmny anuṣṭubh ; b of 1,3,4. sāmnī triṣṭubh ; 1 c. 2-p. ārṣī paṅkti ; d of 1,3,4. 2-p. brāhmī gāyatrī ; e of 1–4. 2-p. ārcī jagatī ; 2 f. sāmnī paṅkti ; 3 f. āsurī gāyatrī ; g of 1–4. padapaṅkti ; h of 1–4. 3-p. prājāpatyā triṣṭubh ; 2 b. 1-p. uṣṇih ; 2 c. 2-p. ārṣī bhurik triṣṭubh ; 2 d. ārṣī parānuṣṭubh ; 3 c. 2-p. virāḍ ārṣī paṅkti ; 4 c. nicṛd ārṣī paṅkti.]

The Anukr. professes to count 28 divisions in this paryāya ; but its metrical definitions are of 32 divisions, 8 in each ; in the translation they are marked by introduced letters. ⌊The reckoning is explained above, at page 772, ¶ 3.⌋

Translated : Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 130 ; Griffith, ii. 186.

1. a. ⌊1.⌋ He arose ; he moved out (vi-cal) toward the eastern quarter ; b. ⌊2.⌋ after him moved out both the bṛhát and the rathaṁtará and the Ādityas and all the gods ; c. ⌊3.⌋ against both the bṛhát and the rathaṁtará and the Ādityas and all the gods doth he offend (ā-vraçc) who reviIeth a thus-knowing Vrātya ; d. ⌊4.⌋ of both the bṛhát and the rathaṁtará and of the Ādityas and of all the gods doth he become the dear abode (dhā́man) [who knoweth thus]. Of him in the eastern quarter e. ⌊5.⌋ faith is the harlot, Mitrá the māgadhá (bard?), discernment the garment, day the turban, night the hair, yellow the two pravartás, kalmalí the jewel (maṇí), f. ⌊6.⌋ both what is and what is to be the two footmen (pariṣkandá), mind the rough vehicle (vipathá), g. ⌊7.⌋ Mātariçvan and Pavamāna (the 'cleansing' wind) the two drawers (-vāhá) of the rough vehicle, the wind the charioteer, the whirlwind the goad, h. ⌊8.⌋ both fame and glory the two forerunners : to him cometh fame, cometh glory, who knoweth thus.

The natural division of the matter of this and the following verses is in the latter half strangely violated by the tradition. Division d should most certainly have at its end yá eváṁ véda, as is shown by the requirements of the sense and by the occurrence of these words in the same connection in 6. 1–9, 8. 3, and 9. 3 ; but the phrase is wanting in all the mss. ; we have introduced it in our text, and the translation gives it (in brackets). Then the mss. most senselessly reckon to d the words which really introduce e–h, or the second half of the verse ; i.e., they set no avasāna before tásya, but have one after diçí ; and the Anukr. follows the same method ; it is corrected in our text ⌊although the division by letters in the translation follows the mss.⌋ ; the analogy of the verses of hymns 4 and 5 is a sufficient justification for so doing. In the second half, the only natural division is after puraḥsarāú ; very strangely, however, the mss. and Anukr. set no avasāna here, but one, altogether out of place, after pratodás, and two that are uncalled for after maṇís and vipathám respectively ; of these two we have retained only that after maṇís (as it denoted a certain change of subject), while we have shifted forward to its proper place the one after pratodás. The metrical definitions of the Anukr. are evidently applicable, with the usual degree of exactness, to the divisions as made by the mss.

The translation follows the mss. in reading in e mitró (but all save Bs.s.m.D.R. accent mítro) māgadhó. ⌊Correct the Berlin ed. from mántro to mitró.⌋ The Pet.

Lex. conjectures pravarta to signify a rounded ornament. ⌊As for turban, goad, etc., see p. 770, ¶ 2.⌋ .⌊Ppp. has sa prācīṁ diçam anuvyacalat; the remainder of the book is wanting.⌋

2. a. ⌊9.⌋ He arose; he moved out toward the southern quarter; b. ⌊10.⌋ after him moved out both the yajñāyajñíya and the vāmadevyá and the sacrifice and the sacrificer and the cattle; c. ⌊11.⌋ against both the yajñāyajñíya and the vāmadevyá and the sacrifice and the sacrificer and the cattle doth he offend who revileth a thus-knowing Vrātya; d. ⌊12.⌋ of both the yajñāyajñíya and the vāmadevyá and the sacrifice and the sacrificer and the cattle doth he become the dear abode [who knoweth thus]. Of him in the southern quarter e. ⌊13.⌋ dawn is the harlot, the mántra the māgadhá, discernment the garment, day the turban, night the hair, yellow the two pravartás, kalmalí the jewel, f. ⌊14.⌋ both new moon and full moon the two footmen, mind the etc. etc.

All the mss. have in e mántro; ⌊so also SPP.: correct the Berlin ed.⌋; in our text it and the mitró of 1 e have been made to change places, for the sake of better adaptation to the surroundings. Why 2 d (44 syllables) should be called by the Anukr. an ārṣī parānuṣṭubh is obscure; perhaps triṣṭubh is to be added (or implied from the next preceding definition). ⌊For paçavas, perhaps 'victims' would suit the connection better than 'cattle,' here and below.⌋

3. a. ⌊15.⌋ He arose; he moved out toward the western quarter; b. ⌊16.⌋ after him moved out both the vāirūpá and the vāirājá and the waters and king Varuṇa; c. ⌊17.⌋ against both the vāirūpá and the vāirājá and the waters and king Varuṇa doth he offend who revileth a thus-knowing Vrātya; d. ⌊18.⌋ of both the vāirūpá and the vāirājá and the waters and king Varuṇa doth he become the dear abode [who knoweth thus]. Of him in the western quarter e. ⌊19.⌋ cheer is the harlot, laughter the māgadhá, discernment the garment, day the turban, night the hair, yellow the two pravartás, kalmalí the jewel, f. ⌊20.⌋ both day and night the two footmen, mind the etc. etc.

All our earlier mss. accent irā́ in e, and our edition followed them, but some of the later ones (O.D.R.s.m.K.) have correctly írā, and the text should be emended accordingly. ⌊SPP., p. 322, maintains that the mss. showing írā are influenced by the RV. accentuation of the word, and holds that irā́ is the true AV. reading.⌋ Some mss. (Bs.R.s.m.D.) accent hasás.

4. a. ⌊21.⌋ He arose; he moved out toward the northern quarter; b. ⌊22.⌋ after him moved out both the çyāitá and the nāudhasá and the seven seers and king Soma; c. ⌊23.⌋ against both the çyāitá and the nāudhasá and the seven seers and king Soma doth he offend who revileth a thus-knowing Vrātya; d. ⌊24.⌋ of both the çyāitá and the nāudhasá and the seven seers and king Soma doth he become the dear abode [who knoweth thus]. Of him in the northern quarter e. ⌊25.⌋ lightning is the harlot, thunder the māgadhá, discernment the garment, day the turban, night the hair, yellow the two pravartás, kalmalí the jewel, f. ⌊26.⌋ both what is heard and what is heard abroad the two footmen, mind the ⌊rough vehicle, g. 27. Mātariçvan and Pavamāna the two drawers of the rough vehicle, the wind the charioteer, the whirlwind the goad, h. 28. both fame and glory the two forerunners: to him cometh fame, cometh glory, who knoweth thus.⌋

The majority of our mss. read çāitá in b, c, d; çyāitá is given by I.O.D.R.K. In b, I.O.K. have saptarṣ-; in c, d they agree with the rest in saptarṣ-. ⌊The çyāita and nāudhasa are mentioned together at KBU. i. 5.⌋

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 131; Griffith, ii. 188.—In part also by Zimmer, p. 155.

1. He stood a year erect; the gods said to him: Vrātya, why now standest thou?

One ms. (O.) accents ūrdhvó 't-. The Anukr. apparently reads -vó at- and scans as 10 + 6 + 8 = 24.

2. He said: Let them bring together a settle ⌊āsandí⌋ for me.

The Anukr. implies só ab- and -tu íti.

3. For that Vrātya they brought together a settle.

The Anukr. implies -yāya ās-. With the description that follows compare that of a similar structure in KBU. i. 5, and JB. ii. 24, ⌊AB. viii. 12, and my note to xiv. 2. 65⌋.

4. Of it, both summer and spring were two feet, both autumn and the rains [were] two.

5. Both bṛhát and rathaṁtará were the two length-wise [pieces], both yajñāyajñíya and vāmadevyá the two cross[-pieces].

Nearly all our mss. (not Bp., which has -cye íti) give anūcyè; ⌊and SPP. so reads without note of variant⌋. At the end, the majority have tiraçcé or else -çcè (E.O.K. have -çcè: but Bp. has -çce íti); and this accent ⌊the svarita⌋ points distinctly toward tiraçcyè, which is doubtless the true reading; it is given by R.T., and I. has -çcyé, with wrong accent; our text is to be emended accordingly to tiraçcyè (cf. adharācyà, anūcyà, apīcyà, udīcyà, pratīcyà, prācyà). ⌊SPP. reads tiraçcyè with no less than six of his authorities; and these are supported, pro tanto, by nine others that read -çcè.⌋

6. The verses (ṛ́c) the forward cords (tántu), the sacrificial formulas (yájus) the cross ones.

The descriptions in KBU. and JB. have ātāna instead of tantu.

7. The Veda the cushion (āstáraṇa), the bráhman the pillow (upabárhaṇa).

8. The chant (sā́man) the seat, the udgīthá the support (?).

The translation implies that udgīthò 'paçrayáḥ at the end (p. -tháḥ : apa∘çrayáḥ) is a corruption for -thá upaçrayáḥ, this being favored by udgītha upaçrīḥ ⌊so the Poona ed., p. "114–13," top⌋ in KBU.; the Pet. Lexx. conjecture 'cushion' (Polster) for apaçrayá, but one does not see how the word should get any such sense; Aufrecht conjectures 'coverlet,' as does M. Müller ⌊SBE. i. 278⌋ for upaçrī: but the latter should be something that leans against or is leaned against.

9. That settle the Vrātya ascended.

10. Of him the god-folk were the footmen, resolves (saṁkalpá) the messengers (prahāyyà), all beings the waiters (upasád).

The mss. vary considerably in their readings of prahāyyàs; Bp.O. ⌊and five of SPP's authorities⌋ have -āryy-, R.p.m. -āry-, R.s.m. -āy-, E. -āyyà v-, P.M.W. -āyyàn. ⌊SPP. reads prahāyyàḥ with twelve of his authorities.⌋

11. All beings become his waiters who knoweth thus.

R. is the only ms. that has the last two words.

4. Paryāya the fourth.

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 131; Griffith, ii. 188.—For a table of the seasons and months, see the Introduction to my translation of the Karpūra-mañjarī (ed. Konow), p. 214.

1. ⌊1.⌋ For him, from the eastern quarter, ⌊2.⌋ they made the two spring months guardians, and bṛhát and rathaṁtará attendants. ⌊3.⌋ The two spring months guard from the eastern quarter, and bṛhát and rathaṁtará attend (anu-sthā), him who knoweth thus.

The subdivisions of verses ⌊see page 772, ¶ 2 above⌋ acknowledged by the Anukr. in this hymn are those marked by the mss. and edition; 1 a has one syllable less than belongs to it by the definition (and so also 1 b, but there is no name* for a division containing 23 syllables). In b is to be read in all the verses ákurvan, with the mss. The Pet. Lexx. render anuṣṭhātṛ́ by 'accomplisher,' which does not suit well with anu-sthā in c. *⌊That is, no express name: gāyatrī nicṛt is a description by reference to another metrical unity.⌋

2. ⌊4.⌋ For him, from the southern quarter, ⌊5.⌋ they made the two summer months guardians, and yajñāyajñíya and vāmadevyá attendants. ⌊6.⌋ The two summer months guard from the southern quarter, and yajñāyajñíya and vāmadevyá attend, him who knoweth thus.

3. ⌊7.⌋ For him, from the western quarter, ⌊8.⌋ they made the two rainy months guardians, and vāirūpá and vāirājá attendants. ⌊9.⌋ The two rainy months guard from the western quarter, and vāirūpá and vāirājá attend, him who knoweth thus.

The Anukr. implies in a pratīci-ās. For c, the definition bhāumārcī ⌊so the Berlin ms. and SPP's excerpts in his Critical Notice, p. 224⌋ is elsewhere unknown, and appears to be equivalent to simple ārcī.

4. ⌊10.⌋ For him, from the northern quarter, ⌊11.⌋ they made the two autumn months guardians, and çyāitá and nāudhasá attendants. ⌊12.⌋ The two autumn months guard from the northern quarter, and çyāitá and nāudhasá attend, him who knoweth thus.

Here again (as in 2. 4), the mss. vary between çyāitá and çāitá in b and c, but Bp. this time has çyāi-.

5. ⌊13.⌋ For him, from the fixed quarter, ⌊14.⌋ they made the two winter months guardians, and earth and fire attendants. ⌊15.⌋ The two winter months guard from the fixed quarter, and earth and fire attend, him who knoweth thus.

6. ⌊16.⌋ For him, from the upward quarter, ⌊17.⌋ they made the two cool months guardians, and heaven and Āditya attendants. ⌊18.⌋ The two cool months guard from the upward quarter, and heaven and Āditya attend, him who knoweth thus.

5. Paryāya the fifth.

In this hymn, again, the division made by the mss. and the Anukr. is very strange and obviously opposed to the sense. Sixteen subdivisions ⌊the reckoning is explained above at p. 772, ¶ 3⌋ are made by reckoning the last 16 syllables ⌊following ī́çānaḥ and⌋ (beginning with nā́ 'sya) as belonging only to verses 1 and 7; and the mss. set no avasāna-mark after tiṣṭhati, where alone it has reason, but, in vss. 1, 7, introduce it after ī́çānaḥ, in the middle of a sentence. Rather than put it in so out of place, we have omitted it in our text. One ms. (R.), it may be noticed, fills out to tiṣṭhati° : nā́ 'sya paçū́n ná sa-°, showing that it understands vss. 2–6 to be carried out in full, like 1 and 7; the other mss. stop at diçáḥ, ⌊but at anuṣṭhātā́ in vs. 6⌋.

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 132; Muir, iv.^{2} 338; Griffith, ii. 189.

1. ⌊1.⌋ For him, from the intermediate direction of the eastern quarter, they made the archer (iṣvāsá) Bhava attendant. ⌊2.⌋ The archer Bhava attends him [as] attendant from the intermediate direction of the eastern quarter; not Çarva, not Bhava, not Īçāna ('the lord') ⌊3.⌋ injures him nor his cattle nor his fellows who knoweth thus.

A resolution is needed in a to make 24 syllables (10 + 6 + 8), also in b to make the meter bhurij. ⌊This paragraph is reckoned to the rāudra gaṇa; see note to Kāuç. 50. 13.⌋ ⌊The word "him" after "injures" is part of the second avasāna.⌋

2. ⌊4.⌋ For him, from the intermediate direction of the southern quarter, they made the archer Çarva attendant. ⌊5.⌋ The archer Çarva attends him as attendant from the intermediate direction of the southern quarter; not Çarva etc. etc.

3. ⌊6.⌋ For him, from the intermediate direction of the western quarter, they made the archer Paçupati ('lord of cattle') attendant. ⌊7.⌋ The archer Paçupati attends him as attendant from the intermediate direction of the western quarter; not Çarva etc. etc.

4. ⌊8.⌋ For him, from the intermediate direction of the northern quarter, they made the archer, the formidable god, attendant. ⌊9.⌋ The archer, the formidable god, attends him as attendant from the intermediate direction of the northern quarter; not Çarva etc. etc.

At the beginning, read in our text tásmā for tásmāi.

5. ⌊10.⌋ For him, from the intermediate direction of the fixed quarter, they made the archer Rudra attendant. ⌊11.⌋ The archer Rudra attends him as attendant from the intermediate direction of the fixed quarter; not Çarva etc. etc.

6. ⌊12.⌋ For him, from the intermediate direction of the upward quarter, they made the archer Mahādeva ('great god') attendant. ⌊13.⌋ The archer Mahādeva attends him as attendant from the intermediate direction of the upward quarter; not Çarva etc. etc.

7. ⌊14.⌋ For him, from all the intermediate directions, they made the archer Īçāna attendant. ⌊15.⌋ The archer Īçāna as attendant attends him from all the intermediate directions; not Çarva, ⌊not Bhava, not Īçāna, 16. injures him nor his cattle nor his fellows who knoweth thus⌋.

The mss. vary in a and b between sárvebhyo ant- and -bhyo 'nt-; in a, only P.M.W.E. have -bhyo 'nt-; in b, ⌊at least two, E. and⌋ Bs. Probably our text ought to give in both places -bhyo ant-; ⌊so SPP. with all but two of his authorities⌋.

After the definition of the c of 1–7 the Anukr. adds: hinasti vyāghrādiṣv avagantavyaḥ; which apparently means that in 2–6 is to be understood the verb hinasti, which is expressed only in 1 c and 7 c; vyāghrādiṣu is probably a corruption.

⌊After its metrical definition of xi. 1. 36, the Anukr. inserts the words vyāghrādiṣv avagantavyā; and after that of xiv. 1. 60 occur the words (see p. 740) ity, or parāviny, edhiṣīmahīti vyāghrādiṣv avagantavyaḥ. — One ritual use of xiv. 1. 60 is as a prayer for the safety of the bride as she sets out for her new home. In that connection, a specification of the safety as "in respect of tigers and so forth" would be entirely appropriate. And it is also appropriate here, at xv. 5. — The verse xi. 1. 36 is used in the ritual (Kāuç. 63. 9) with iv. 14. 5 in the sava offering: the former, as a prayer for safety on the road to heaven (ágne patháḥ kalpaya devayā́nān); the latter, somewhat similarly (svàr yantu yájamānāḥ svastí). Although tigers more frequently accelerate than retard a Hindu's transit to heaven, the verses may nevertheless be conceived as used secondarily for safety on terrestrial paths. — Accordingly the remark of the Anukr is perhaps intended as exegetical, but it is at any rate most unexpected. — The vs. AV. xii. 1. 49 furnishes testimony (quite superfluous) to the familiarity of the ancient Hindus with "man-eaters."⌋

6. Paryāya the sixth.

In this paryāya, the division of the Anukr. and of the mss. suits (except in vs. 8, which see) the sense, and has therefore been retained unchanged in our text.

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 132; Griffith, ii. 190.

1. ⌊1.⌋ He moved out toward the fixed quarter; ⌊2.⌋ after him moved out both earth and fire and herbs and forest trees and they of forest trees and plants. ⌊3.⌋ Verily both of earth and of fire and of herbs and of forest trees and of them of forest trees and of plants doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

To make the metrical descriptions fit closely the subdivisions, we need to read ví-acal- in a and b, and só ag- in c: and so more or less throughout the hymn.

2. ⌊4.⌋ He moved out toward the upward quarter; ⌊5.⌋ after him moved out both right and truth and sun and moon and asterisms. ⌊6.⌋ Verily both of right and of truth and of sun and of moon and of asterisms doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

In c, ca is to be inserted after ṛtásya.

3. ⌊7.⌋ He moved out toward the highest quarter; ⌊8.⌋ after him moved out both the verses and the chants and the sacrificial formulas and the bráhman. ⌊9.⌋ Verily both of the verses and of the chants and of the sacrificial formulas and of the bráhman doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

4. ⌊10.⌋ He moved out toward the great quarter; ⌊11.⌋ after him moved out both the itihāsá ('narrative') and the purāṇá ('story of eld') and the gā́thās ('songs') and the nārāçaṅsī́s ('eulogies'). ⌊12.⌋ Verily both of the itihāsá and of the purāṇá and of the gā́thās and of the nārāçaṅsī́s doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

5. ⌊13.⌋ He moved out toward the most distant quarter; ⌊14.⌋ after him moved out both the fire of offering and the householder's fire and the southern fire and the sacrifice and the sacrificer and the cattle. ⌊15.⌋ Verily both of the fire of offering and of the householder's fire and of the southern fire and of the sacrifice and of the sacrificer and of the cattle doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

6. ⌊16.⌋ He moved out toward an unindicated quarter; ⌊17.⌋ after him moved out both the seasons and they of the seasons and the worlds and they of the worlds and the months and the half-months and day-and-night. ⌊18.⌋ Verily both of the seasons and of them of the seasons and of the worlds and of them of the worlds and of the months and of the half-months and of day-and-night doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

Most of the mss. accent lóka in both b and c (R.s.m.K.D. have lokā́s; only R.s.m. has lokā́nām); our text makes the needed correction. ⌊With the almost unanimous support of his authorities, SPP. prints lókās, lókānām, which accentuation (albeit so isolated) he takes in this case to be "the genuine Atharvan accent": see his notes, p. 330 f.⌋

7. ⌊19.⌋ He moved out toward an unreturned quarter; from it he thought not that he should return; ⌊20.⌋ after him moved out both Diti and Aditi and Iḍā and Indrāṇī. ⌊21.⌋ Verily both of Diti and of Aditi and of Iḍā and of Indrāṇī doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

Ánāvṛtta in a is obscure: the Pet. Lexx. render 'untrodden,' and Aufrecht, 'unvisited'; but both against the analogy of nā́ "vartsyán (also of ánāvṛt and anāvartin; perhaps the true reading is anāvṛtyā́m 'not to be returned from.' Bp. reads avartsyán, the other pada-mss. ā°vartsyán. I. accents indrāṇyā̀ç.

8. ⌊22.⌋ He moved out toward the quarters; ⌊no avasāna!⌋ after him moved out the virā́j and all the gods and all the deities. ⌊23.⌋ Verily both of virā́j and of all the gods and of all the deities doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

There seems to be no good reason why this verse should not be divided, like all the rest, into three parts; but the Anukr. does not so prescribe, nor do the mss. set an avasāna-mark after the first vy àcalat: ⌊compare above, p. 772, ¶ 2⌋. The mss. all agree in accenting the second ánu.

9. ⌊24.⌋ He moved out toward all the intermediate directions; ⌊25.⌋ after him moved out both Prajāpati and the most exalted one and the father and the grandfather. ⌊26.⌋ Verily both of Prajāpati and of the most exalted one and of the father and of the grandfather doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

1. That greatness, becoming sessile (?sádru), went to the end of the earth; it became ocean.

⌊Or, 'He, becoming a sessile greatness, went' etc.: so W. suggests in a pencilled note.⌋ Aufrecht and the Pet. Lexx. suspect a play of words between sádru and samudrá, but the likeness is too slight to make the matter certain. Aufrecht renders sádrur bhūtvā́ by "setting itself in motion," as if sa + dru, and the Pet. Lexx. seem to favor the same etymology as had in view by the writer, but it is hardly to be credited. Aufrecht reads in the third pāda sa samudro; I have noted sá only as inserted sec. manu in one ms. (O.); if read, it would make the verse answer better the metrical description. ⌊SPP. does in fact read sá samudró, with the support of all his authorities.⌋*

2. After it, turned out both Prajāpati and the most exalted one and the father and the grandfather and the waters and faith, becoming rain.

3. To him come waters, to him cometh faith, to him cometh rain, who knoweth thus.

All our mss. read gachati after ā́pas; ⌊and so all of SPP's authorities⌋.

4. Unto it turned about both faith and sacrifice and world and food and food-eating, coming into being (bhūtvā́).

5. To him cometh faith, to him cometh sacrifice, to him cometh a world, to him cometh food, to him cometh food-eating, who knoweth thus.

1. He became impassioned (raj); thence was born the noble (rājanyà).

Both elided initial a's need to be restored in order to fill out the metrical description of the Anukr.

2. He arose toward (abhi°) the tribes (viç), the kinsmen, food, food-eating.

Half the mss. (Bp.Bs.p.m.E.O.D.K.) omit ánnam; the metrical definition of the Anukr. implies its presence.

3. Verily both of the tribes and of the kinsmen and of food and of food-eating doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus.

*⌊Upon the margin of his ms., opposite this passage, Whitney has pencilled the memorandum "? Ask Weber and Rost and Roth." He evidently intended to ask them to examine upon this point the Berlin and London and Tübingen mss. respectively and to tell him whether any of them did in fact read sa samudro. In the brief interval since that query was noted, all those three distinguished men of learning have passed away, and likewise he who would have asked them. Meantime, the question has been cleared up (vyākṛta) by the edition of that admirable Hindu scholar, S. P. Pandit, and he too, alas, is no more here!

1. He moved out toward the tribes.

1. So then, to the houses of whatever king a thus-knowing Vrātya may come as guest, —

2. He should esteem him better than himself; so does he not offend (ā-vraçc) against dominion; so does he not offend against royalty.

⌊That is, 'he [the king] should esteem him [the Vrātya] better,' etc.⌋ The Berlin mss. read, as the sense requires, mānayet táthā, nor was any deviation from this noted in the mss. collated before publication; those compared later, however, all give mānaye táthā; ⌊and so do all of SPP's authorities, including his then living reciters, but excepting his ms. C^{p}, which has mānayet táthā, secunda manu, and mānaye t-, prima manu. — Compare the case of yame dīrgham, yamed dīrgham, at xviii. 2. 3.⌋

3. Thence verily arose both sanctity (bráhman) and dominion; they said: Whom shall we enter?

'Thence' (átas) Aufrecht understands to mean "out of him (the Vrātya)" — which is possible, but doubtful: compare átas in vs. 5.

4. Let sanctity enter Brihaspati [and] dominion Indra; thus verily: it was said (íti).

Or the iti means 'he (the Vrātya) said'; Aufrecht so understands it. The mss. make very bad work over the verb in this verse: Bp. reads pra∘viçatu, Bs.P.M.O.T.K. prāviçatu, all without accent; E. has prā́ viçatu, R. prāviçátu, D. pra∘viçátu. The true reading is doubtless praviçátu, and our text should be emended to this; the situation is one in which an accent on the verb-form is called for. There is no reason for understanding pra-ā, and the prolongation of simple pra to prā is wholly unsuited to this book. ⌊SPP's authorities show a fairly bewildering variety of differences, in respect to bráhma praviçátu: see his note, p. 334.⌋ The metrical definition of the Anukr. ⌊6 + 7 + 8: Ind. Stud. viii. 129⌋ does not fit at all.

5. Thence (átas) verily sanctity entered Brihaspati [and] dominion Indra.

For prā́viçat the pada-text has prá : aviçat; doubtless it should be pra∘áviçat.

6. This earth verily is Prajāpati, the sky is Indra.

7. This fire verily is sanctity, yonder Āditya is dominion.

8. To him comes sanctity, he becomes possessed of the splendor of sanctity (brahmavarcasín), —

9. Who knows earth as Brihaspati, fire as sanctity.

10. To him comes Indra's quality, he becomes possessed of Indra's quality, —

11. Who knows Āditya as dominion, the sky as Indra.

⌊As for the minor divisions of this paryāya, see page 772, ¶ 4, above.⌋

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 134; Griffith, ii. 193. — Griffith here cites most appositely the parallel passages of the Āpastambīya Dharma-sūtra; and I have thought it good to give them in the sequel.

⌊For convenience of comparison, the passage from Āp. Dharma-sūtra, ii. 3. 7, parallel to our vss. 1–2, may here be given: āhitāgniṁ ced atithir abhyāgacchet, svayam enam abhyudetya brūyāt: vrātya kvā 'vātsīr iti: vrātya udakam iti: vrātya tarpayantv (!) iti. 13. purā 'gnihotrasya homād upāñçu japet: vrātya yathā te manas tathā 'stv iti: vrātya yathā te vaças tathā 'stv iti: vrātya yathā te priyaṁ tathā 'stv iti: vrātya yathā te nikāmas tathā 'stv iti. 14.⌋

1. So then, to whosesoever houses a thus-knowing Vrātya may come as guest, —

All that the mss. give for this verse is the two words vrā́tyó 'tithiḥ. But this is obviously in virtue of their usual abbreviation in case of repeated matter; the verse is the same with 10. 1 except for the omission of rā́jñas between vrā́tyas and átithis. The abbreviation is continued in 12. 1 and in 13. 1–4, and then 13. 5 reads in full tád yásyāi 'váṁ vidvā́n vrā́tyaḥ, because it is the last case of occurrence of the phrase. All this admits of no real question, and the verses are all thus filled up by Aufrecht in his translation, although he leaves the Sanskrit text in its abbreviated form; it is worth so many words here only because the Anukr. commits the blunder of regarding vrā́tyó 'tithiḥ as the whole verse, and defines it as one of five syllables (restoring the elided a). He has never committed the same blunder in the numerous, but less striking, cases of the same kind that we have had hitherto.

2. Himself coming up toward him, he should say: Vrātya, where hast thou abode (vas)? Vrātya, [here is] water; Vrātya, let them gratify [thee]; Vrātya, be it so as is dear to thee; Vrātya, be it so as is thy will (váça); Vrātya, be it so as is thy desire (nikāmá).

3. In that he says to him: Vrātya, where hast thou abode? he thereby gains possession of the roads that the gods travel.

4. In that he says to him: Vrātya, [here is] water, he thereby gains possession of the waters.

R. is the only ms. that writes out at the beginning of this verse and the next yád enam ā́ha. It seems a blunder of the Anukr. to include this verse with 3, 5, 6, 8, 10 in one definition, as it is shorter than they by some six syllables; one of the mss. does in fact omit it here, but gives no definition of it elsewhere. ⌊At AB. viii. 24 is a passage bearing some similarity to this.⌋

5. In that he says to him: Vrātya, let them gratify [thee], he thereby makes his breath (prāṇá) longer.

⌊We had the last clause above at ix. 6. 19.⌋

6. In that he says to him: Vrātya, be it so as is dear to thee, he thereby gains possession of what is dear.

7. To him cometh what is dear, he becometh dear to his dear one (m.), who knoweth thus.

8. In that he says to him: Vrātya, be it so as is thy will, he thereby gains possession of [his] will.

Here again all the mss. save one (R.) omit the first four or five words, because they occur again in vs. 10. The majority of mss. (except E.D.R.s.m.K.) accent vaçám, though all have váças. ⌊Eight or nine of SPP's have vaçám.⌋

9. Unto him cometh [his] will, a will-possessor of will-possessors becometh he who knoweth thus.

Most of the mss. (except D.R.s.m.) again accent vaçás; ⌊and so twelve of SPP's, but not his çrotriyas⌋; O. has vaçínām. Read at the beginning in our text āí 'nam (an accent-sign slipped out of place).

10. In that he says to him: Vrātya, be it so as is thy desire, he thereby gains possession of [his] desire.

11. To him cometh [his] desire, he cometh to be (bhū) in the desire of desire, who knoweth thus.

One would like to emend nikāmé to -mí.

12. Paryāya the twelfth.

[ekādaçaka. 1. 3-p. gāyatrī; 2. prājāpatyā bṛhatī; 3, 4. bhurik prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh (4. sāmnī); 5, 6, 9, 10. āsurī gāyatrī; 8. virāḍ gāyatrī; 7, 11. 3-p. prājāpatyā triṣṭubh.]

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 135; Griffith, ii. 194.

⌊The passage from Āp. Dharma-sūtra, ii. 3. 7 (see introd. to paryāya 11), parallel to our vss. 1–3, may here be given: yasyo 'ddhṛteṣv ahuteṣv agniṣv atithir abhyāgacchet svayam enam abhyudetya brūyāt: vrātya atisṛja hoṣyāmi: ity atisṛṣṭena hotavyam: anatisṛṣṭaç cej juhuyād doṣam brāhmaṇam āha. 15.⌋

1. Now then, to whosesoever houses a thus-knowing Vrātya may come as guest when the fires are taken up and the fire-offering (agnihotrá) set on, —

Not one of the mss. writes the first four words of the verse, they being viewed as repeated from 10. 1; and here also (compare note to 11. 1) the Anukr. reckons them as not belonging to the verse. Bp.O.Kp. write údhṛteṣu (the compound being inseparable by Prāt. iv. 62). Bp. further has ádhi∘çṛte.

2. Himself coming up toward him, he should say: Vrātya, give permission; I am about to make oblation.

3. If he should permit, he may make oblation; if he should not permit, he may not make oblation.

4. He who, being permitted by a thus-knowing Vrātya, makes oblation,—

Prājāpatyā and sāmny anuṣṭubh are each of sixteen syllables; what the Anukr. means by its use of both terms in regard to this verse and not in regard to vs. 3 is difficult to see. ⌊His words are . . . iti dve prājāpatyānuṣṭubhāu; dvitīyā sāmnī; tatho 'bhe bhurijāu. He appears to set up a class of two vss. (3 and 4) of 17 syllables (16 + 1) each: from which he then proceeds to except one vs. (4) by saying that it is sāmnī or has only 16. He might have expressed himself much less awkwardly by writing (instead of the last two clauses) pūrvā bhurik.⌋

5. He foreknows the road that the Fathers go, the road that the gods go.

A couple of the mss. (D.R.) accent jānā́ti, which is better; ⌊and so do seven or eight of SPP's authorities⌋.

6. He does not offend against the gods; his oblation is [duly] made.

7. There is left over in this world a support (āyátana) for him who, being permitted by a thus-knowing Vrātya, makes oblation.

8. Now then, he who, being unpermitted by a thus-knowing Vrātya, makes oblation, —

9. He knows not the road that the Fathers go, nor the road that the gods go.

The same mss. accent jānā́ti here as in vs. 5.

10. He offends against the gods; his oblation is not [duly] made.

The majority of mss. (except Bs.E.) read vṛçcate ah-, which is therefore probably the true text; ⌊and so SPP. reads with all but two of his authorities⌋. The accent ahutám (for áhutam) is probably an error.

11. There is left in this world no support for him who, being unpermitted by a thus-knowing Vrātya, makes oblation.

13. Paryāya the thirteenth.

[caturdaça. 1 a. sāmny uṣṇih; 1 b, 3 b. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; a of 2–4. āsurī gāyatrī; 2 b, 4 b. sāmnī bṛhatī; 5 a. 3-p. nicṛd gāyatrī; 5 b. 2-p. virāḍ gāyatrī; 6. prājāpatyā pañkti; 7. āsurī jagatī; 8. satahpañkti; 9. akṣarapañkti.]

Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 135; Griffith, ii. 195.

⌊The passage from Āp. Dharma-sūtra, ii. 3. 7 (see introd. to paryāya 11), parallel to our vss. 1–5, may here be given: ekarātraṁ ced atithīn vāsayet pārthivāṅl lokān abhijayati, dvitīyayā 'ntarikṣyāṅs, tṛtīyayā divyāṅç, caturthyā parāvato lokān, aparimitābhir aparimitāṅl lokān abhijayatī 'ti vijñāyate. 16.⌋

1. ⌊1.⌋ Now in whosesoever house a thus-knowing Vrātya abides one night as guest, ⌊2.⌋ he thereby gains possession of those pure (púṇya) worlds that are on the earth.

Here again, and in the following verses through 4, the Anukr. fails to make any account of the first four words, tád yásyāi 'vám vidvā́n, omitted by the mss. on account of repetition (see note to 11. 1); they are restored in our text.

2. ⌊3.⌋ Now in whosesoever house a thus-knowing Vrātya abides a second night as guest, ⌊4.⌋ he thereby gains possession of those pure worlds that are in the atmosphere.

Part of the mss. (I.O.R.T.), ⌊with nine of SPP's authorities⌋, read yé ant- at beginning of b.

3. ⌊5.⌋ Now in whosesoever house a thus-knowing Vrātya abides a third night as guest, ⌊6.⌋ he thereby gains possession of those pure worlds that are in the sky.

4. ⌊7.⌋ Now in whosesoever house a thus-knowing Vrātya abides a fourth night as guest, ⌊8.⌋ he thereby gains possession of those worlds that are pure of the pure.

That is, doubtless, that are especially pure. In a, read vidvā́n (an accent-mark slipped out of place).

5. ⌊9.⌋ Now in whosesoever house a thus-knowing Vrātya abides unlimited nights as guest, ⌊10.⌋ he thereby gains possession of those pure worlds that are unlimited.

In a, read again vidvā́n (same error). ⌊Instead of the tripadā of our mss. of the Anukr. in the description of 5 a, SPP. prints dvipadā, Critical Notice, p. 22^{17}.⌋

6. ⌊11.⌋ Now to whosesoever houses may come as guest a non-Vrātya, calling himself a Vrātya, bearing the name [only], —

Nāma∘bibhratī́ (so in p.) is so anomalous a formation that we can hardly regard it as otherwise than corrupt, perhaps for nā́ma bíbhrat or nāmabibhrát.

7. ⌊12.⌋ He may draw him, and he may not draw him.

That is, apparently, whether he invite him urgently or not. But the Pet. Lex. takes the verb as meaning 'treat with violence, punish' — which is unacceptable, as the entertainer is not supposed to be certain whether his guest is a real Vrātya or not. Aufrecht leaves the verse untranslated. There is ⌊with this interpretation⌋ no perceptible reason why the second kárṣet should be accented. Another interpretation, however, may be suggested as possible: that kárṣed enam is apodosis to the preceding verse: 'he may tousle (maltreat) him'; and the rest, protasis to vs. 8: 'if he do not tousle him' (because he is not sufficiently certain of his real character), then he may pay him honors under protest, as stated in vs. 8. But then we should expect vs. 7 to be divided into two pādas, which is done neither by the pada-mss. nor by the Anukr.

8. ⌊13.⌋ For this deity I ask water; this deity I cause to abide; this, this deity I wait upon — with this thought he should wait upon him.

That is, my attentions are meant for the deity whom a Vrātya represents, and not for this particular individual. ⌊See above, p. 770, top.⌋ The repetition imā́m imā́m is very strange, and seems unmotived. The pada-text sets its avasāna-mark, as if denoting a pāda-division, both times between imā́m and devátām, in palpable violation of the sense.

9. ⌊14.⌋ In that deity doth that become [duly] offered of him who knoweth thus.

14. Paryāya the fourteenth.

⌊Respecting the subdivisions of the paryāya, see page 772, top.⌋
Translated: Aufrecht, Ind. Stud. i. 136; Griffith, ii. 195.

1. ⌊1.⌋ As he moved out toward the eastern quarter, the troop (çárdhas) of Maruts, coming into being (bhūtvā́), moved out after, making mind [their] food-eater; ⌊2.⌋ with mind as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

Aufrecht understands the meaning to be as just given, and takes it correspondingly in the verses below. But it would be admissible also to render thus: 'when he moved out toward the eastern quarter, he moved out toward [it] after becoming the troop of Maruts' — and correspondingly in all the other verses. It is possible, by due resolution, to read the first subdivision as 32 syllables and the second as 15 — and so in general in the other verses; no remark will be made upon them unless the cases are especially difficult.

2. ⌊3.⌋ As he moved out toward the southern quarter, Indra, coming into being, moved out after, making strength [his] food-eater; ⌊4.⌋ with strength as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

3. ⌊5.⌋ As he moved out toward the western quarter, king Varuṇa, coming into being, moved out after, making the waters [his] food-eaters; ⌊6.⌋ with the waters as food-eaters doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

Most of the mss. accent apó 'nnādī́ḥ (but Bs. has -ò). One or two (I.K.) combine -dī́ṣ kṛtvā́.

4. ⌊7.⌋ As he moved out toward the northern quarter, king Soma, coming into being, moved out after, making the offering (ā́huti) in what is offered by the seven seers [his] food-eater; ⌊8.⌋ with the offering as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

5. ⌊9.⌋ As he moved out toward the fixed quarter, Vishṇu, coming into being, moved out after, making virā́j [his] food-eater; ⌊10.⌋ with virā́j as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

6. ⌊11.⌋ As he moved out toward the cattle, Rudra, coming into being, moved out after, making the herbs [his] food-eaters; ⌊12.⌋ with the herbs as food-eaters doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

7. ⌊13.⌋ As he moved out toward the Fathers, king Yama, coming into being, moved out after, making the call svadhā́ [his] food-eater; ⌊14.⌋ with the call svadhā́ as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

8. ⌊15.⌋ As he moved out toward men (manuṣyà), Agni, coming into being, moved out after, making the cry svā́hā ('hail') [his] food-eater; ⌊16.⌋ with the cry svā́hā as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

9. ⌊17.⌋ As he moved out toward the upward quarter, Brihaspati, coming into being, moved out after, making the cry váṣaṭ [his] food-eater; ⌊18.⌋ with the cry váṣaṭ as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

The first pāda is not metrically defined by the Anukr.

10. ⌊19.⌋ As he moved out toward the gods, Īçāna ('the lord'), coming into being, moved out after, making fury [his] food-eater; ⌊20.⌋ with fury as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

If nāgī gāyatrī means 9 + 9 + 6 (Colebrooke, Miscellaneous Essays, ii. 136, as cited by BR.), the first subdivision here comes so near it as to be capable of being read as 9 + 9 + 7 (being bhurij).

11. ⌊21.⌋ As he moved out toward progeny, Prajāpati ('lord of progeny'), coming into being, moved out after, making breath [his] food-eater; ⌊22.⌋ with breath as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

12. ⌊23.⌋ As he moved out toward all the intermediate directions, the most exalted one, coming into being, moved out after, making the bráhman [his] food-eater; ⌊24.⌋ with the bráhman as food-eater doth he eat food who knoweth thus.

The metrical definition of the first subdivision is wanting in the Anukr.

1. Of that Vrātya —

3. His breath that is first, upward by name, that is this fire.

The pada-mss. accent, doubtless falsely, pra∘ū́ḍhaḥ (instead of prá∘ūḍhaḥ); Bs. and O.p.m. read próḍh-: see Prāt. iii. 45, note.

5. His breath that is third, inferred (?abhyū̀ḍha) by name, that is yon moon.

Some mss. ⌊of W's and of SPP's also⌋ accent 'bhyū́ḍho, and Bp. has accordingly abhi∘ū́ḍhaḥ (but D. abhí∘ū-); our text makes the necessary correction to abhyū̀-; ⌊and so SPP.⌋.

6. His breath that is fourth, mighty (vibhū́) by name, that is this cleansing one (pávamāna).

That is, doubtless, the wind, and not soma.

7. His breath that is fifth, womb (?yóni) by name, that is these waters.

In this hymn, the mss. in general omit at the beginning both yó and asya, while in 15 and 17 they omit only yó. Some, however, have asya here also (so K.; R. yó asya throughout).

⌊Unity of subject not apparent.⌋

⌊This is the fourth book of the third grand division (books xiii.–xviii.) of the Atharvan collection. The study of the ritual applications of the book distinctly fails, in my opinion, to reveal any pervading concinnity of purpose or of use.⌋

⌊In the Indische Studien, xiii. 185, Weber has suggested that parts of the book are evening prayers, to be recited before going to rest, and especially for the warding off of evil dreams (see 1. 11; 5; 6; 7. 8–11); and 9. 3–4, at the end of the book, may well be taken as the words of them "that watch [have watched] for the morning" and as expressing the "joy" that "cometh in the morning," and are accordingly placed, as is usual and appropriate, at the end of the mantras concerned, in order to indicate the successful accomplishment of the purpose of those mantras. One is half tempted to give to the book the title "Against the 'terror by night'?"⌋

⌊Laying apart book vi., which has received great attention from the translators (see p. 281), it may be noted that this is the first book of the Atharvan saṁhitā of which no translation has as yet been published by the translators of single books. The ⌊Major⌋ Anukr. calls the whole book prājāpatya: prājāpatyasya nava paryāyāḥ; and both of its two anuvākas are evidently called by the same name ⌊prājāpatyābhyām⌋ in xix. 23. 26; whether this means to ascribe the authorship of the book to Prajāpati is not certain.—⌊On the other hand, the Old Anukr. seems rather to imply by its prājāpatyo ha catuṣkaḥ; pañcaparyāya uttaraḥ

that the name prājāpatya pertains only to the first anuvāka, 'the one of four paryāyas.' It may, however, be added that the prājāpatyasya in the first line of the printed extract below may mean the whole book or else only the first anuvāka.⌋

⌊Quotations from the Old Anukr. are given piecemeal through the mss. of the book. They may here be given in connected form as printed by SPP. in his Critical Notice, p. 23.—Line 1 refers to the 'prior' and the 'last' (that is the 'latter') of the two anuvākas of the 'prājāpatyan' book: unless indeed the relation of the first two words is appositive ('of the prior, the prājāpatyan' [anuvāka]: see the preceding paragraph). — At the end of the first anuvāka, 8 of W's mss. say prājāpatyo ha catuṣkaḥ; and at the end of the second is read pañcaparyāya uttaraḥ: the two quotations make a half-çloka which we may expect to find in the text of the Old Anukr., standing between lines 1 and 2 of our extract. — Line 2 refers to the paryāyas of the first anuvāka; and lines 3–6 refer to those of the second. — The numbers in parentheses refer to the paryāyas as counted from the beginning of the anuvāka; and those in brackets refer to the paryāyas as counted from the beginning of the book.

The quoted bit of the Old Anukr. at the end of paryāya 6 (or ii. 2) is hyekādaçakam (or hyāu-): the fact that the verse is so divided by piecemeal quotation as to bring hi at the beginning of its fragment seems to oppugn the correctness of the reading hi; and the word, as noted below, is not incorporated into the Major Anukr., the Berlin ms. of which, moreover, boggles at this point. — A comparison of the text of the Old Anukr. (above) with that of the Major Anukr. shows that the later text has quoted every word of lines 2–6 of the older, excepting tasmāc ca param and aparaḥ and the questionable hi.⌋

⌊A conspectus of the divisions of the book in tabular form follows. The explanations given on page 771 (which see: in book xv.), apply for the most part also to this table.

Note that the "ten" (6 + 4) and the "thrice eleven" (8 + 25) assigned by the Old Anukr. to paryāyas 5 (or ii. 1) and 8 (or ii. 4) represent non-coördinate divisions, as noticed and explained above, p. 771, and p. 772, ¶ 4. — Some mss. sum up the avasānarcas of the first anuvāka as 32 (correctly). Those of the second are summed up as follows: paryāya-avasānarcas, 53 (correctly); gaṇa-avasānarcas, 14 (correctly); avasānarcas "of both kinds," 68 (! but by D. correctly as 67). The 67 with the 4 vacanas make 71 (so Bs. correctly). And 71 + 32 make 103 for the whole book, and so one ms. at least sums them up.⌋

⌊Since the book consists wholly of paryāya-sūktas, there is no difference between the two editions in respect to the hymn-numbers: compare pages 611 and 770. — The division into decads is wanting.⌋ ⌊See pp. clxi, cxxx end, cxxxvii top, clx.⌋

⌊Differences between the two editions in the division of the paryāyas. The differences occur (as above, p. 771) only in the gaṇa-paryāyas 5 (or ii. 1) and 8 (or ii. 4). In these, SPP. has, as the Old Anukr. requires, 10 and 33 divisions respectively (as against 6 and 27 of the Berlin edition). The explanation is as on pages 628–629 and on page 772: namely, that, in a sequence of refrains, the refrain is given in full and counted as a separate avasāna only for its first and last occurrence in that sequence. — In paryāya 5 there are properly 6 gaṇas, each with 3 subdivisions: therefore we have 2 gaṇas (the first and last), each with 3 subdivisions, making 6; while in each of the remaining 4, the refrains (b, c) are counted as one with a (thus a–b–c), making 4; and so, in all, we have 10. — In like manner, in paryāya 8, there are properly 27 gaṇas, each with 4 subdivisions: therefore we have 2 gaṇas (the first and last), each with 4 subdivisions, making 8; and (27—2=) 25, each counted as one (a–b–c–d), making 25; and so, in all, we have 33.⌋

⌊The book is mainly prose: Whitney, Index, p. 5, excepts verses 1. 10, 12, 13; 4. 2, 6; 6. 1–4, 11; 9. 1, 2.⌋

In Pāipp. (xviii.) are found only fragments of the book, namely 1. 1–3; 4. 7 (beginning with mo 'pa), the first words of 5. 1, then 8. 1, and finally 9. 4, the concluding verse. This looks as if the whole book were acknowledged as part of the text, but its complete presentation deliberately declined for some reason. ⌊The fragments in question follow immediately the fragment of book xv. cited in the note to xv. 2. 1.⌋ ⌊☞ See pages 1015–6.⌋

⌊In the Vāit., the book is noticed only twice: see under 2. 6 and 9. 3. And in the Kāuç., it is noticed only about a dozen times: see under 1. 1; 2. 1, 6; 3. 1; 4. 1; 5. 1; 6. 1; 9. 3, 4.⌋

Translated: Griffith, ii. 201.

1. Let go [is] the bull of the waters; let go [are] the heavenly fires.

The verse, or the hymn (paryāya), is quoted in Kāuç. 9. 9, in the process of preparing holy water (çāntyudaka); with it one "lets go the waters," and then follow question and answer respecting the preparation. In Ppp. the initial a of atisṛṣṭās is not elided.

2. Breaking, breaking about, killing, slaughtering; —

3. Dimming ⌊mroká⌋, mind-slaying, digging, out-burning, self-spoiling, body-spoiling.

All these epithets are nom. sing. masc.; as mroká and nirdāhá are found together in v. 31. 9 as epithets of the flesh-eating fire, they are probably names of the fires mentioned in vs. 1: cf. also vs. 7, below; Ppp. combines -dāhā "tma-. ⌊Weber (Ind. Stud. xiii. 185), discussing mroká as it occurs above at ii. 24. 3 in the long string of epithets, takes our paryāya here as an evening prayer (see p. 792), and notes the names of the ten Agnis here rehearsed in vss. 2, 3.⌋

4. That one now I let go; that one let me not wash down against myself; —

5. That one do we let go against him who hates us, whom we hate.

These two verses form a part of vss. 15–21 in the water-thunderbolt (udavajra) hymn, above, x. 5 ⌊see my note⌋; and fragments of the same hymn are found further on in this paryāya and in 7. 6, 13, indicating some connection of application with that hymn, though Kāuç. suggests such connection only for xvi. 2. 1.

6. Thou art tip (ágra) of the waters; I let you go down unto the ocean.

With the second part compare the opening words of x. 5. 23.

7. The fire that is in the waters, it do I let go, the dimming, digging, body-spoiling one.

With this verse compare PGS. ii. 6. 10, used in the ceremonies commemorating the end of Vedic study. ⌊The definition of the Anukr. seems to be wide of the mark.⌋

8. The fire that entered into you, O waters, this is that; what of you is terrible, this is that.

9. May [it] pour upon you with Indra's Indra-power (indriyá).

10. Free from defilement (-riprá) [are] the waters; let them [carry] away from us defilement; —

11. Let them carry forth from us sin; let them carry forth evil-dreaming.

With the last two verses compare parts of x. 5. 24.

12. With propitious eye look at me, O waters; with propitious body touch my skin.

We had this verse above as i. 33. 4 a, b.

13. We call the propitious fires that sit in the waters. Put in me dominion [and] splendor, O divine [waters].

Translated: Griffith, ii. 202.

1. Out of evil-eating (?) with refreshment [comes] speech rich in honey.

The translation implies the change of durarmaṇyàs to duradmanyàs, as proposed by the Pet. Lexx. (add TB. iii. 3. 9^9 as a reference for duradmaní). The reading of the mss. is, however, assured by its quotation in the Prāt. (4. II. 16 ⌊i.e. Add'l Note, p. 592⌋), and three times in the Kāuç.: namely, in 49. 27, at the very end of the chapter of witchcraft ceremonies, after use of x. 5. 6, 7 and xiii. 1. 56, with the direction iti saṁdhāvyā 'bhimṛçati; and again, twice (58. 6, 12) in the ceremony for long life after initiation to Vedic study, once with the direction iti saṁdhāvya, and once with a smearing with fragrant powders. The word ūrjá in our text might also be nominative, and 'comes' is of course doubtful. The metrical definition implies the resolution -ṇl-a.

2. Rich in honey are ye; may I speak speech rich in honey.

'Ye': i.e., the waters, the adjective being feminine. ⌊We had a phrase like to our second clause at iii. 20. 10: cf. Gram. § 738 a.⌋

3. Invoked of me [is] the guardian (gopā́); invoked [is] guardianship.

The different metrical designation of these two 14-syllabled verses is apparently wholly arbitrary.

4. Well-hearing ears, ears hearing what is excellent; may I hear excellent encomium (çlóka).

'Ears' is both times dual; we might fill out to 'well-hearing are my ears' etc.

5. Let both well-hearing and listening (úpaçruti) not desert me — eagle-like sight, unfailing light.

6. Spread (prastará) of the seers art thou; homage be to the spread of the divine ones (dāíva).

The verse is used twice in Kāuç. (2. 18; 137. 33), and once in Vāit. (2. 9). In the former, it accompanies the taking up of part of the darbha-grass provided, and making a seat for the brahman-priest south of the fire, once at the parvan sacrifice and once in the ājyatantra ceremony. In the latter, it accompanies the making of such a spread in the parvan ceremonies. In all the three cases, it is evidently taken because of its specific meaning, and not because of any connection of those ceremonies with the one implied here.

3. Paryāya the third.

Translated: Griffith, ii. 202.

1. May I be the head (mūrdhán) of riches, the head of my equals.

Or, perhaps, 'I am the head of the one, may I be so of the other.' The verse (or the paryāya) is quoted twice in Kāuç., once (18. 25) in the citrā ceremony, together with a whole series of other hymns or verses, in partaking of a milk-rice-dish; and once (58. 22), in the ceremony of giving food to a young child (annaprāçana), with a part of the same hymns.

2. Let both breaking (?rujá) and longing (vená) not desert me; let both the head (mūrdhán) and the distributer (?vídharman) not desert me.

The nouns in this and the following verses are in part of obscure meaning and reference.

3. Let both the kettle (?) and the cup (camasá) not desert me; let both the maintainer (dhartṛ́) and the supporter (dharúṇa) not desert me.

The translation follows the suggestion of the Pet. Lexx., to emend urvá at the beginning to ukhá.

4. Let both the releaser (vimoká) and the wet-rimmed one not desert me; let both him of wet drops (-dā́nu) and Mātariçvan not desert me.

5. Brihaspati my soul, manly-minded by name, hearty (hṛ́dya).

6. Free from torment my heart, a wide pasture, an ocean am I by extent (vídharman).

4. Paryāya the fourth.

[Brahman. — saptaka. ādityadevatya. 1, 3. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 2. sāmny uṣṇih; 4. 3-p. anuṣṭubh; 5. āsurī gāyatrī; 6. ārcy uṣṇih; 7. 3-p. virāḍgarbhā 'nuṣṭubh.]

Translated: Griffith, ii. 203.

1. May I be the navel of riches, the navel of my equals.

The scholiast (pariçiṣṭa) adds this verse (or paryāya) to 3. 1 under Kāuç. 18. 25. ⌊Cf. note to 3. 1.⌋

2. Of good seat (?svāsát) art thou, of good dawns, an immortal among mortals.

The adjectives are sing. masculine. The pada-text reads su○āsát and su○uṣā́ḥ.

3. Let not breath quit me; nor let expiration, deserting me, go away.

⌊For 'deserting me' one might perhaps say 'leaving me low.' For the combination with párā gā, cf. TS. v. 7. 9^1.⌋ Most of our mss. (all except D.R.) leave mā́m unaccented; ⌊the curious blunder is made also by nine of SPP's mss., as against five mss. and two reciters that gave mā́m⌋. All our mss. save one (R.) combine apānó 'va- ⌊instead of -nò⌋. The verse is ⌊almost⌋ identical with vii. 53. 4 a, b ⌊which has me 'mā́m for mā́ mā́m⌋.

4. Let the sun protect me from the sky, Agni from the earth, Vāyu from the atmosphere, Yama from men (manuṣyà), Sarasvatī from them of the earth.

The verse can be read into 32 syllables, but the metrical definition of the Anukr. is altogether absurd. ⌊Griffith gives ahnás its usual meaning: possibly W's "sky" is not intentional, but a mere slip. Cf., however, 7. 6, below.⌋

5. O breath-and-expiration, do not desert me; let me not perish (pra-mī) among the people (jána).

6. With well-being today, O waters, may I, whole [and] with my whole train (-gaṇá), attain dawns and evenings.

The verse is really composed of two triṣṭubh pādas.

7. Puissant (çákvarī) are ye; may cattle approach me; let Mitra-and-Varuṇa [assign] me breath-and-expiration; let Agni assign me dexterity.

Nearly all our mss. (not T.s.m.R.) give stheṣu instead of stheṣus; ⌊and so do three of SPP's⌋. ⌊For the form, see Gram. § 894 c.⌋

5. Paryāya the fifth.

[Yama.—daçaka. duḥsvapnanāçanadevatya. a of 1–6. virāḍ gāyatrī (5 a. bhurij; 6 a. svarāj); 1 b, 6 b. prājāpatyā gāyatrī; 1 c, 6 c. 2-p. sāmnī bṛhatī.]

⌊Both the Anukramaṇīs reckon the paryāya as of 10 avasānas: that is, they count the anuṣañgas (b–c) only in their first and last occurrences, as explained at p. 793, end (cf. pages 628–9, 772).⌋ One or two of the mss. (W.R.) indicate by fragments of b and c given also with verses 2–5 that they regard all the six verses ⌊or gaṇas, rather⌋ as of equal length. ⌊It is true that the summations (see p. 793 and table) number the gaṇas as 2 and call the avasānarcas of the remaining 4 by the name of paryāya-avasānarcas; but it is not apparent why the gaṇas should not be counted as 6, just as those of the second paryāya of xi. 3 are counted as 18 (p. 632, top, p. 628, ¶ 10).—The numbers of the avasānas as given by SPP. in accord with the Anukr. are added by me in ell-brackets.⌋

Translated: Ludwig, p. 468; Griffith, ii. 203.

1. ⌊1.⌋ We know thy place of birth (janítra), O sleep; thou art son of seizure (gráhi), agent of Yama; ⌊2.⌋ ender art thou, death art thou; ⌊3.⌋ so, O sleep, do we comprehend thee here; do thou, O sleep, protect us from evil-dreaming.

The verses of this hymn are nearly ⌊vs. 6 exactly⌋ identical with vi. 46. 2; and whether they or it are quoted in Kāuç. 46. 9, 13, it is impossible, and wholly unimportant, to determine ⌊cf. introd. to vi. 46⌋.

2. ⌊4.⌋ We know thy place of birth, O sleep; thou art son of perdition, agent etc. etc.

3. ⌊5.⌋ We know thy place of birth, O sleep; thou art son of ill-success (ábhūti), agent etc. etc.

4. ⌊6.⌋ We know thy place of birth, O sleep; thou art son of extermination (nírbhūti), agent etc. etc.

5. ⌊7.⌋ We know thy place of birth, O sleep; thou art son of calamity (párābhūti), agent etc. etc.

6. ⌊8.⌋ We know thy place of birth, O sleep; thou art son of the wives (-jāmí) of the gods, agent of Yama; ⌊9.⌋ ender art thou, death art thou; ⌊10.⌋ so, O sleep, do we comprehend thee here; do thou, O sleep, protect us from evil-dreaming.

This verse agrees ⌊precisely⌋ with vi. 46. 2, and the ⌊words dévānām patnīnām garbha yámasya kara (the readings are not quite certain)⌋ appear in xix. 57. 3; the other verses are therefore most probably varied repetitions of this one.

6. Paryāya the sixth.

[Yama.—ekādaça. duḥsvapnanāçanadevatya; uṣodevatya. 1–4. prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; 5. sāmnī pañkti; 6. nicṛd ārcī bṛhatī; 7. 2-p. sāmnī bṛhatī; 8. āsurī jagatī; 9. āsurī bṛhatī; 10. ārcy uṣṇih; 11. 3-p. yavamadhyā gāyatrī vā "rcy anuṣṭubh (see under vs. 11).]

Translated: Griffith, ii. 204.

1. We have conquered today, we have won today; we have become guiltless.

The verse corresponds to the first two pādas of RV. viii. 47. 18, which differ only by reading ca in place of the second adyá. It and its two successors (or also vs. 4) are really metrical, half anuṣṭubhs. The verse, or the paryāya, is used in Kāuç. 49. 19, nearly at the end of the abhicāra or witchcraft chapter, with xiii. 1. 28 and 3. 1, to accompany the putting on of adhipāças (conjectured 'gag' in the minor Pet. Lex.).

2. O dawn, of what evil-dreaming we have been afraid, let that fade away (apa-vas).

The verse ⌊cf. note to vs. 1⌋ is, without variant, RV. viii. 47. 18 c, d.

3. Carry that away to him that hates; carry that away to him that curses.

4. Whom we hate, and who hates us, to him we make it go.

Our yás (in yáç ca no) is an emendation for yát, which all the mss. read. ⌊SPP. reads yát with all his authorities.⌋

5. Heavenly dawn, in concord with speech; heavenly speech, in concord with dawn; —

Part of the mss. read in b devy ū̀ṣásā.

6. The lord of dawn, in concord with the lord of speech; the lord of speech, in concord with the lord of dawn :—

The Anukr. mss. read ārṣī instead of ārcī in their definition of the meter of this verse.

7. Let them carry away for yon man the niggards (arā́ya), the ill-named ones, the sadā́nvās, —

8. The kumbhīkās, the spoilers (dūṣīkā), the revilers (pī́yaka), —

9. Waking evil-dreaming, sleeping evil-dreaming.

Literally 'of one waking' and 'in sleep.' The pada-text reads ∘dusvapnyám both times. The Anukr. twice resolves -ni-am.

10. Boons that will not come, plans of non-acquisition, fetters of hatred that does not release : —

That is, probably, plans or desires that issue in failure. ⌊Griffith takes drúh here and at ii. 10 as a female fiend.⌋

11. That, O Agni, let the gods carry away for yon man, that he may be impotent (vádhri), faltering, not good (sādhú).

'For him,' here and in vs. 7, is plainly equivalent to 'to him,' or that they may be his. All the mss. accent vī́thuras; ⌊so SPP. reads with all his authorities⌋. As gāyatrī and ārcy anuṣṭubh both imply 24 syllables, the Anukr. seems willing to give us our choice between them.

⌊Perhaps we should understand the definition 3-p. yavamadhyā gāyatrīvārcy anuṣṭup as an 'anuṣṭubh of 24 syllables, like (iva: not vā) a 3-p. yavamadhyā gāyatrī'

(7 + 10 + 7 : Ind. Stud. viii. 129) : only this one divides rather as 8 + 10 + 6. — One is tempted to deem agne an intrusion and to regard the verse as a couple of simple triṣṭubh pādas: and the temptation is strengthened by the fact that the sole mark of pāda-division in W's Collation Book comes after vahantu.⌋

7. Paryāya the seventh.

[Yama. — dvyadhikaṁ vihitam. duḥsvapnanāçanadevatya. 1. pañkti; 2. sāmny anuṣṭubh; 3. āsury uṣṇih; 4. prājāpatyā gāyatrī; 5. ārcy uṣṇih; 6, 9, 11. sāmnī bṛhatī; 7. yājuṣī gāyatrī; 8. prājāpatyā bṛhatī; 10. sāmnī gāyatrī; 12. bhurik prājāpatyā 'nuṣṭubh; 13. āsurī triṣṭubh.]

The definition of number of verses in the paryāya is taken by the Anukr. verbatim from the Old Anukr. (cf. p. 793, line 12), and appears to mean that the number of verses exceeds by two that of the preceding paryāya.

Translated: Griffith, ii. 205.

1. With that I pierce him; with ill-success I pierce him; with extermination I pierce him; with calamity I pierce him; with seizure I pierce him; with darkness I pierce him.

The 'that' of the first clause doubtless refers to 6. 11.

2. I demand against him with the terrible, cruel demands (prāiṣá) of the gods.

The word prāiṣá seems here to be used, not in its ritual sense which is common later, but rather in a sense suggested by its etymology.

3. I set him in the two tusks of Vāiçvānara.

⌊This seems to be an unmetrical version of iv. 36. 2 c, d.⌋

4. So, not so, may she swallow down.

The pada-text reads evá : áneva : áva, and the translation follows it. The text is probably corrupt; the 'she' (sā́) seems unmotived. Neither Pet. Lex. contains áneva ⌊in its main part; but the word is given in a supplement to the minor Lex., iii. 250 c⌋.

5. Whoso hates us, him let [his] self (ātmán) hate; whomso we hate, let him hate [his] self.

6. Let us disportion our hater from heaven, from earth, from atmosphere.

Compare x. 5. 25 etc.; we should expect bhajāmas here as there.

7. O thou of good ways (suyāman), of sight (cākṣuṣá).

Both the words may be proper names. Our P.M. read cākṣuṣaḥ, accentless.

8. Now (idám) do I wipe off evil-dreaming on him of such-and-such lineage, son of such-and-such a mother.

9. What I went at on such-and-such an occasion, what at evening, what in early night; —

The translation follows our emendation, abhyágacham; all the mss. read -chan (one or two in pada perhaps -chat); the true sense is very doubtful. ⌊SPP. reads -chan with all his authorities: see his note, vol. iii., p. 352.⌋

10. What when awake, what when asleep, what by day, what by night; —

11. What day by day I go at, from that do I cut him off (ava-day).

12. Him do thou smite, with him amuse thyself (?mand), his ribs do thou crush in.

13. Let him not live; him let breath quit.

This verse also forms a part of x. 5. 25 etc.

8. Paryāya the eighth.

⌊The discrepancy in the numeration of the subdivisions of the paryāya, as between the Bombay edition (which follows the Old Anukr.) and the Berlin edition, is of the same kind as in paryāya 5, above, and the explanation given above (p. 794, top) may be consulted. The numbers of the avasānas as given by SPP. are added by me in ell-brackets.⌋

Translated: Griffith, ii. 206.

1. ⌊1.⌋ Ours [is] what is conquered, ours what has shot up, ours right (ṛtá), ours brilliancy, ours bráhman, ours heaven (svàr), ours the sacrifice, ours cattle, ours progeny, ours heroes. ⌊2.⌋ From that we disportion him yonder: so-and-so, of such-and-such lineage, son of such-and-such mother, who is yonder; ⌊3.⌋ let him not be released from the fetter of seizure. ⌊4.⌋ Of him now (idám) I involve the splendor, brilliancy, breath, life-time; now I make him fall downward.

Here is again a partial correspondence with x. 5. 36. Compare also Āpast. iv. 15. 3. The addition yajus to the name brāhmy anuṣṭubh (48 syllables) in the Anukr. seems, ⌊in the light of the corresponding expression at xvii. 1. 22, 23, intended to inform us that subdivision a is a yajus; but it is not apparent why the author should give this bit of information, which is (of its kind) so isolated: cf. third note to xv. 5. 7⌋.

2. ⌊5.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of perdition. Of him now etc. etc.

3. ⌊6.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of ill-success. Of him now etc. etc.

4. ⌊7.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of extermination. Of him now etc. etc.

5. ⌊8.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of calamity. Of him now etc. etc.

8. ⌊11.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of Prajāpati. Of him now etc. etc.

9. ⌊12.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of the seers. Of him now etc. etc.

All our mss. except one (D.) accent ṛṣīṇā́m; our text emends to ṛ́ṣīṇām. ⌊In like manner, SPP. reads ṛ́ṣīṇām with four or three of his authorities, against twelve or thirteen that have ṛṣīṇā́m.⌋

10. ⌊13.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of them of the seers. Of him now etc. etc.

11. ⌊14.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of the Angirases. Of him now etc. etc.

17. ⌊20.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of the seasons. Of him now etc. etc.

18. ⌊21.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of them of the seasons. Of him now etc. etc.

19. ⌊22.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of the months. Of him now etc. etc.

20. ⌊23.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of the half-months. Of him now etc. etc.

21. ⌊24.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of day-and-night. Of him now etc. etc.

22. ⌊25.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of the two congruent (sam-yánt) days. Of him now etc. etc.

There is nothing elsewhere in the text to show what these two days are. Perhaps they are day and night over again, viewed as each a form or aspect of a day. ⌊The use of the obscure saṁyánt (with ṛtú and çrī́) at ix. 5. 33 should here be noted.⌋

23. ⌊26.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of heaven-and-earth. Of him now etc. etc.

24. ⌊27.⌋ Ours is etc. etc.; let him not be released from the fetter of Indra-and-Agni. Of him now etc. etc.

Some of the mss. read páḍviṅçāt or páḍvīṅçāt. ⌊There should be an avasāna-mark in vs. 26 of the Berlin ed. after the second circle indicating omission.⌋

9. Paryāya the ninth.

[catvāri vāi vacanāni. 1. prājāpatyā; 2. mantroktabahudevatyā; 3, 4. sāurye. 1. ārcy anuṣṭubh; 2. ārcy uṣṇih; 3. sāmnī pañkti; 4. paroṣṇih.]

Translated: Griffith, ii. 208.

1. Ours [is] what is conquered, ours what has shot up; I have withstood all fighters, niggards.

The verse is identical with the first part of x. 5. 36; and its second part, with vs. 2, is found in MS. i. 5. 3 (reading abhy àsthām).

2. That Agni says; that, too, Soma says: may Pūshan set me in the world of the well-done.

The two pādas are second and fourth pādas of a verse in MS. i. 5. 3 (which rectifies the meter by reading na ā́ dhāt in place of mā dhāt: our own text probably ought to read mā́, i.e. mā ā́). With either of these readings, we have two faultless triṣṭubh pādas; but the Anukr. sanctions only 21 syllables. The first pāda is also found as viii. 5. 5 a and xix. 24. 8 c.

3. We have gone to heaven (svàr); to heaven have we gone; we have united (sam-gam) with the sun's light; —

The first half is the beginning also of TS. i. 6. 6. In Kāuç. 6. 16, the verse is used in the parvan ceremonies, while one looks at the sun; but according to Dārila, this verse with the next is to be so used: ⌊and his view is accepted by SPP. (iii. 350^{16}) and is supported by the suspension of the sense (see note to vs. 4)⌋. In Vāit. 24. 5, it is used, together with a RV. verse, to accompany the coming up from the bath in the agniṣṭoma ceremony. ⌊For the general import of this vs., see p. 792, ¶ 2.⌋

4. In order to becoming better (vásyas-). Rich in good (vásu-) [is] the sacrifice; good may I win (van); rich in good may I be; good put thou in me.

The first word seems to belong in sense rather to the preceding verse; ⌊see note thereon⌋. All the mss. read vañçiṣīya, and the edition follows them; but we ought unquestionably to have emended to vañsiṣīya. There is even probably a play on words intended between vásu and vañs-. ⌊Yet SPP. reads vañçiṣīya without note of variant: as to the form, see Gram. § 914 b.⌋ ⌊For use by Kāuç., see under vs. 3.⌋

⌊Here ends the thirty-first prapāṭhaka.⌋

Book XVII.

⌊Prayer to the Sun, identified with Indra and with Vishṇu.⌋

⌊This is the fifth book of the third grand division (books xiii.–xviii.) of the Atharvan collection, and its unity of subject (as indicated by the title, above, which is slightly modified from Whitney's, p. 806) is sufficiently apparent. It is the only book of the entire collection that consists of a single anuvāka. At xix. 23. 27, it is called the Viṣāsahi (viṣāsahyāí svā́hā: note the singular number); and the Old Anukr., as noted below at page 812, gives it the same designation. As was true of the preceding book (see page 792), no translation of this book has been published by the translators of single books; but from here on to the end of xx. 37 we have the bhāṣya.⌋

⌊The Atharvaṇīya-paddhati, in a chapter on veda-vratas (note to Kāuç. 57. 32), nominates a viṣāsahi-vrata; and the same vrata is mentioned by Keçava, in his note to Kāuç. 42. 12, p. 344^{24}, together with the çiro-vrata, which latter is known as a necessary preliminary to the study of the "Shaveling Upanishad" (see Muṇḍaka, iii. 2. 10). "Doubtless this hymn figured prominently in it" [the viṣāsahi-vrata], says Bloomfield, in his part of the Grundriss, p. 95.⌋

⌊The hymn consists of just 30 verses: and so again we find the decad-division, — here into three precise decads. This, however, is a mechanical division. Structurally, the hymn is composed of five parts, as follows.⌋

⌊Part I., verses 1–5. — This is a sequence of 5 verses of 6 pādas each and of the scheme 8 + 8 : 8 + 12 : 8 + 8 = 52. All 5 verses are identical in the first 5 pādas, which are made up mostly of words containing the roots sah 'overpower' and ji 'win by conquest'; and they differ only in the sixth pāda, which is characterized by the phrase 'may I be' (bhūyāsam), with an ūha which makes vs. 1 fall short of the full tale of syllables and makes an overplus for vs. 5.⌋

⌊Part II., verses 6–19. — This is a sequence of 14 verses characterized by the refrain 'Thine, O Vishṇu' (távéd viṣṇo). It is a curious fact that the mss. do not separate this refrain from the stock of the verse by an avasāna-mark; and herein they are supported by the Anukr. (see below), which describes verses [1–8: that is, 1–5 of Part I. and] 6–8, 10–13, 16, 18–19, and 24 as try-avasāna. In all the taved viṣṇo verses (6–19, and 24), the Bombay ed. follows the mss.: the Berlin ed., on the other hand, inserts an avasāna-mark before the taved; and, so far as the sense and structure go, it is imperatively demanded. — All the vss. of this part are of 7 pādas except 9, 14–15, and 17, which are of 5 each, and except 10, which is of 8.⌋

⌊Part III., verses 20–23. — This consists of 4 bits of prose. The verses contain: praise and prayer to the Sun (20–21: 'brilliant art thou; may I be brilliant'); and homage to the Sun, rising, setting, etc. (22–23: namas).⌋

⌊Part IV., verses 24–26. — These are 3 perfectly regular anuṣṭubh verses, to the first of which is added the anuṣañga that is characteristic of Part II. The 3 verses are closely related and are addressed to the Sun as Āditya or Sūrya, the first and last being appropriate for use at sunrise, and the second for use at sundown. — It may be noted that of the Pāli paritta verses (Jātaka, ii. p. 33–35) cited in the introduction to iii. 26, one set is used at sunrise and the other at sundown.⌋

⌊Part V., verses 27–30. — These (if we disregard the palpably intrusive bráhmaṇā of 27 a) are 4 perfectly regular stanzas, of which all the pādas are triṣṭubh except 30 a and 30 c, which are jagatī in count and cadence. We might call them paritta-verses, charms for defense and protection; they show various derivatives of the roots vṛ and gup, and references to Kaçyapa (see note to iv. 20. 7).⌋

1. Prayer and praise to Indra and the Sun.

[Brahman. — ṛcas triñçat.[1] ādityadevatyās. 1. jagatī; 1–8. try-avasāna;[4] 1–4 ⌊intending 2–5?⌋. atijagatī;[2] 6, 7, 19. atyaṣṭi;[3] 8, 11, 16. atidhṛti; 9. 5-p. çakvarī; 10–13, 16, 18–19, 24. try-avasāna;[4] 10. 8-p. dhṛti; 12. kṛti; 13. prakṛti; 14–15. 5-p. çakvarī; 17. 5-p. virāḍ atiçakvarī; 18. bhurig aṣṭi; 24. virāḍ atyaṣṭi; 1–8 ⌊intending 1–5?⌋. 6-p.; ⌊6–8,⌋ 11–13, 16, 18–19, 24. 7-p.[5] 20. kakubh; 21. 4-p. upariṣṭādbṛhatī; 22. anuṣṭubh; 23. nicṛd bṛhatī (22–23. yajuṣī dve;[6] 2-p.); 25, 26. anuṣṭubh; 27, 30. jagatī; 28, 29. triṣṭubh.]

The Anukr. has some bad readings and confusions in its account of the book, but they do not concern things of much consequence. ⌊So Whitney, in a note to vs. 5, which note I have transposed hither. He had altered (as often, for brevity) the order of his excerpts from the Anukr.: but I have restored them in this case to the order of the original. Moreover, there are several trifling items which he has omitted or misapprehended: and these I have added or tried to set right without marking them with the usual ell-brackets.⌋

The hymn, or anuvāka, or book, occurs (except vss. 13, 14, 24) also in Pāipp. xviii., following immediately upon what represents our xvi.

A few of the later verses (18, 21–23) are used in Vāit. The hymn (or the first verses of it) is reckoned to the salila gaṇa, according to Kāuç. (18. 25); and the Pariçiṣṭa ⌊given under Kāuç. 54. 11⌋ reckons it also to an āyuṣya gaṇa. It is used (with i. 30; iii. 8; etc.) in the ceremony of reception of a Vedic student (Kāuç. 55. 17); and (with iii. 31; iv. 13; etc.) in the following ceremony for long life (58. 3, 11); and in the annaprāçana rite (58. 22); further, in a solar eclipse (the whole hymn or sūkta: 99. 3; and Keçava, in his note to 100. 3, p. 372^5, adds it also for use in a lunar eclipse). ⌊Vss. 1–5 are quoted by the schol. to Kāuç. 7. 21. As to the use of the hymn in the viṣāsahivrata, see above, p. 805, ¶ 2.⌋

Translated: Griffith, ii. 209. — Perhaps the Sun is elsewhere variously identified: thus at xiii. 4. 46 (see note) with Indra; and at xiii. 2. 31 with Viṣṇu.

1. Indra of mighty power, overpowering, having overpowered, very powerful, overpowering, power-winning (saho-jít), heaven-winning, kine-winning, booty-winning, to be praised (īḍ), by name, do I call: may I be long-lived.

2. Indra of mighty power etc. etc. do I call: may I be dear to the gods.

3. Indra of mighty power etc. etc. do I call: may I be dear to living beings (prajā́).

4. Indra of mighty power etc. etc. do I call: may I be dear to cattle.

5. Indra of mighty power etc. etc. do I call: may I be dear to my equals (samānā́).

Ppp. reads ⌊in the above 5 verses⌋ every time viṣāsahyam; and, for c–f, s. s. viçvajitaṁ svarjitam abhijitaṁ vasujitaṁ gojitaṁ saṁjitaṁ saṁdhanājitam: īḍyaṁ nāma bhūyā indram āyuṣmān priyā bhūyāsam; in the repetitions, hūya (in place of its previous bhūyā), and indra devānāṁ priyo bhūyāsam. Here, and everywhere else in the hymn, the comm. insists that by indra is intended the sun, and not Indra, quoting in proof of it TS. i. 7. 6^3: asāú vā ādityá índraḥ. ⌊For the structure and count of the vss., see above, p. 805, ¶ 4.⌋

6. Arise, arise, O sun; arise upon me with splendor; both let my hater be subject to me, and let not me be subject to my hater. — Thine, O Vishṇu, are heroisms manifold; do thou fill us with cattle of all forms; set me in comfort in the highest firmament (vyòman).

Ppp. reads in the concluding pāda of the refrain svadhāyāṁ no dh-; the comm. also has svadhāyām. The mss. commit the absurdity throughout of setting no avasāna between the verse proper and the refrain; we have, as required by the sense, introduced it in our text; ⌊the matter is further discussed above, p. 805, ¶ 5⌋. The refrain is, as usual, represented in vss. 7–18 only by the word táva in the mss. (except in R., which fills it out a little further). ⌊With reference to the main stock of the verse, the comm. cites most appositely TB. iii. 7. 6^{23}, úd agād ayám ādityó víçvena sáhasā sahá: dviṣántam máma randháyan mó ahám dviṣató radham, although it does not appear why he did not cite rather our verse 24 a–d, below, which see.⌋

⌊The refrain seems to count as 11 : 12 + 11 = 34 syllables with the Anukr.; but the true triṣṭubh cadences (viçvárūpāiḥ, víoman) of its second and third pādas suggest the suspicion of metrical disorder in the prior part of each of those pādas. One is tempted to think of pṛṇīhi as an ill-considered modernization of pūrdhi; and to wish that mā (before dhehi) might be excised, as superfluous in meter and in sense and as making a harsh change from plural (nas) to singular. — The change from singular to plural as between the main stock and the refrain, considering the looseness of their connection, is not to be called harsh.⌋

7. Arise, arise, O sun; arise upon me with splendor; both those whom I see and those whom I do not — among them make thou favor for me. Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

We should expect me for mā in d; and the comm., on account of mā, takes sumatím as an adjective (= çobhanabuddhiyuktam) — which is not grammatically impossible, but against all Vedic usage. Verses 6 and 7, ⌊if the main stock of each verse be read rhythmically,⌋ are undoubtedly to be counted as 66 syllables, two less than a true atyaṣṭi (68), ⌊but also, on the other hand, two more than a true aṣṭi (64); but the a and the b of each can be read as 7 so as to make totals of just 64: see above, page 806, ¶ 6, note 3⌋. ⌊Concerning the refrain, see notes to vs. 6.⌋

8. Let them not damage thee in the sea, within the waters — they who approach there having fetters; quitting imprecation, thou hast ascended that sky; be thou then gracious to us; may we be in thy favor. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in b pāçinam, and in c ā ruha etān. The verse counts most naturally 78 syllables (11 × 4: 34); a proper atidhṛti has 76. Bp. reads in d ā́ : rukṣaḥ; D.Kp. and all SPP's authorities have ā́ : ar-, which is doubtless the true pada-text.

9. Do thou, O Indra, in order to great good-fortune, protect us about with unharmed rays. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

The comm. takes aktúbhis in its sense of 'night.' Ppp. reads adabdhāiṣ pari in b.

10. Do thou, O Indra, with propitious aids, be most wealful to us — ascending to the triple heaven of the heaven (dív), besung unto soma-drinking, having a dear abode (-dhā́man) unto well-being. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in a indro adbhiç (ç-). The comm. gives us our choice between -sthāna and -tejas as meanings of -dhāman in e. The verse has two syllables too many for a regular dhṛti (72); ⌊it reads properly as 5 × 8 and 34; but pāda a may be read as 6⌋.

11. Thou, O Indra, art all-conquering, all-gaining (sarva-víd); much invoked [art] thou, O Indra; do thou, O Indra, send onward this well-invoking praise; be thou gracious to us; may we be in thy favor. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

Ppp. reads in a viçvavit; and instead of our d (= 8 d) it has çivābhis tanubhir abhi nas sajasva. The verse is a true atidhṛti by number of syllables, but very irregular in structure (8 + 10 : 13 + 11 : 34 = 76).

12. Unharmed in the heaven (dív), also on earth, art thou; they have not attained thy greatness in the atmosphere; increasing with unharmed worship (bráhman), do thou there, O Indra, being in the heaven (dív), bestow protection (çárman) on us. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

Ppp. reads divaṣ p- in a. ⌊In d, all of SPP's authorities give ṣáṅ or sáṅ : and W's Collation Book notes nothing to the contrary; but⌋ the comm. omits the word, as the meter plainly requires. The verse (11 + 12 : 11 + 12 : 34 = 80) is by number of syllables an exact kṛti.

13. What body of thine, O Indra, is in the waters, what on the earth, what within the fire; what of thine, O Indra, is in the heaven-gaining (svarvíd) purifying one (pávamāna); with what body, O Indra, thou didst permeate (vi-āp) the atmosphere — with that body, O Indra, bestow thou protection upon us. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

In nearly all our mss. (all save D. and R.p.m.) vyāpitha (p. vi°āpitha) is most strangely left unaccented, and the reading was in our text emended to vyā́pitha, in accordance with the invariable accentuation of such forms in RV. and AV. elsewhere. But a minority of SPP's authorities are reported by him as accenting vyāpithá, and he accordingly prints vyāpithá in his edition (our D.R.p.m. have the same). The 'purifying one' is doubtless here the wind (vāyu : so comm.). The verse (12 + 16 : 12 + 12 : 34 = 86) counts two more syllables than a proper prakṛti.

14. Increasing thee, O Indra, with worship (bráhman), the imploring seers have sat down [for] the session (sattrá). — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

The verse (11 + 12 : 34 = 57) has one more syllable than a regular çakvarī. ⌊Verses 13 and 14, as was noted above, are wanting in Ppp.⌋

15. Thou goest about Tṛita (?), thou about the fountain of a thousand streams, the heaven-gaining council. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

All the mss., and hence both editions, read tṛtám in a; but the ms. of the comm. has tritam, and we cannot well believe that the latter is not the true reading; though the sense of the whole verse is extremely obscure. The comm. explains tritam mysteriously, as either vistīrṇam antarikṣam or meghāir āvṛtam udakam. Vidatha, he says, = yajña. The verse is capable of being read as 56 syllables. Ppp. puts it after our verse 17.

16. Thou defendest the four directions; thou shinest abroad with brightness (çocís) unto the two firmaments (nábhas); thou pursuest (anu-sthā) all these beings; thou, knowing, followest (anu-i) the way of righteousness. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

The saṁhitā-mss. read vidvā́ṅs távé 'd between verse and refrain. The whole (11 + 11 : 12 + 11 : 34 = 79) reads naturally as three more syllables than belong to an atidhṛti.

17. With five thou heatest upward (párāṅ), with one hitherward; thou goest driving off the imprecation in good weather (sudína). — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

The comm. supplies, as is natural, dīdhiti or marīci 'ray' for the missing noun, and explains the five as required in order to illuminate so many worlds beyond the sun.

But Ppp. reads instead saptabhiṣ p- 'with seven.' ⌊With reference to the rays, Griffith (note to xi. 1. 36) cites Mahīdhara as quoted by Eggeling on ÇB. i. 9. 3^{16}.⌋ The comm. has the bad reading nādhamānas for bādh-. We have to resolve a saṁdhi in a in order to make 58 syllables in the verse.

18. Thou art Indra, thou great Indra, thou the world, thou Prajāpati; for thee the sacrifice is extended; to thee the offerers make oblation.— Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

Ppp. reads viṣṇus for lokas in b, and, in c, yajāyate for vi tāyate. Our Bp.P.M.W. T.R.p.m. also have jāyate for tāyate. To make the verse only bhurig aṣṭi (65 syll.), we have to read the first pāda as seven syllables, though it easily makes eight. In Vāit. 3. 3 the verse, with vi. 5. 2, is made to accompany a sāṁnāyya offering to Indra, in the darçapūrṇamāsa ceremony. In our edition, the ṁ of tváṁ before lokás is lost in printing.

19. In the non-existent is the existent made firm; in the existent is being (bhūtá) made firm; being is set in what is to be; what is to be is made firm in being. Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

Ppp. combines bhavyā "hitam ⌊double sandhi after -e as at ix. 1. 14⌋ in c, and has samāhitam for pratiṣṭhitam in d. The verse, like 6 and 7, lacks two syllables of a full atyaṣṭi; ⌊but see note to vs. 7 and p. 806, ¶ 6, note 3, above⌋.

20. Brilliant (çukrá) art thou; shiny art thou; as thou art shiny by the shining one (bhrā́jant), so may I by the shining one shine.

The Ppp. text of this verse is in confusion. Our P.M.I.T. combine (second time) bhrājò 'si, as if we had here, as the first time, asi (instead of ási). The first pāda is the same with the beginning of ii. 11. 5. MS. iv. 9. 5 has passages resembling this verse and the next. This prose bit is a queer kakubh: ⌊the kakubh calls for 8 + 12 + 8 = 28; and this may be read as 8 + 11 + 9⌋.

21. Brightness art thou, bright art thou; as thou by brightness art bright, so may I by both cattle and Brahman-splendor be bright (ruc).

Our P.M.T. have again (second time) rocò 'si; ⌊and one of SPP's pada-mss. has correspondingly asi without accent⌋. The MS. version is in some respects better: rucír asi rucò (or rocyò) 'si sá yáthā tváṁ rucyā́ rócasa evám ahám rucyā́ rociṣīya. Ppp. also gives rociṣīya. ⌊For ruciṣīya or roc-, see Gram. § 907.⌋ The metrical definition of the Anukr. is absurd, the "verse" being prose, and having only three possible divisions; it can be made 36 syllables by reading roco asi either in a or in b. It is used in Vāit. 14. 2, in the agniṣṭoma ceremony.

22. To the rising one be obeisance; to the one coming up be obeisance; to the arisen one be obeisance; to the wide ruler (virā́j) be obeisance; to the self-ruler (svarā́j) be obeisance; to the universal ruler (samrā́j) be obeisance.

We should expect, by the analogy of the next verse, udeṣyaté for udāyaté. The comm. explains the latter by ūrdhvam īṣad gacchate. In Vāit. 11. 16, the verse accompanies worship of the rising sun in the agniṣṭoma ceremony. It is so far an anuṣṭubh that it contains 32 syllables. ⌊The Anukr. informs us that this verse is a yajus; and so of the next. A similarly isolated bit of information we had concerning xvi. 8. 1 a.⌋

23. To the setting one be obeisance; to the one about to set be obeisance; to the one that has set be obeisance; to the wide ruler be obeisance; to the self-ruler be obeisance; to the universal ruler be obeisance.

In Vāit. 11. 13, the verse accompanies worship of the setting sun in the agniṣṭoma ceremony. The Anukr. restores both the elided initial a's in the first half-verse, thus counting 35 syllables.

24. This Āditya hath arisen, together with all ardor (tápas), making subject to me my rivals; and let me not be subject to my hater. — Thine, O Vishṇu etc. etc.

We have repeated here once more the refrain of vss. 6–19. The verse is wanting in Ppp. Pādas c, d are nearly identical with our 6 c, d above. ⌊The main stock of the vs., without the refrain, corresponds to⌋ RV. i. 50. 13, which reads sáhasā in b, and dviṣántam (for sapátnān) in c; also mó for mā́ ca in d; ⌊and it is also TB. iii. 7. 6^{23}, quoted above in full under vs. 6, which reads like RV., save that it has máma for máhyam in c, and dviṣató for dviṣaté in d.—In the Calcutta ed. of TB., sáhasā is misprinted máhasā in the text, but is given aright in the comm. (p. 504), and aright in the Poona ed., p. 1105.⌋

25. O Āditya, thou hast ascended a boat of a hundred oars in order to well-being; thou hast made me to pass over the day, make thou me likewise (satrā́) to pass over the night.

The comm. explains satrā́ by sahāi 'va, ahnā saha; he gives also as admissible alternative explanation " I have ascended thee as a boat" etc., understanding the second person to be used as a first! Ppp. reads, in fact, ā 'ruham; and, in c, ahar ṇo 'ty.

26. O sun, thou hast ascended a boat of a hundred oars in order to well-being; thou hast made me to pass over the night, make thou me likewise to pass over the day.

Passages analogous and in part accordant with the two preceding verses are found in MB. ii. 5. 13, 14. Ppp. reads in a ā 'rikṣam; and, in c, rātrī ṇo 'ty.

27. With Prajāpati's worship (bráhman) [as] defense am I covered, with Kaçyapa's light and splendor; long-lived, of finished heroism, vigorous (? víhāyas), having a thousand life-times, well-made, may I go about.

⌊Or, to bring out the connection between varman and āvṛta, one may render, 'with P's defense am I defended,' 'with P's covering am I covered.'⌋ It is plain that bráhmaṇā, which is metrically redundant, has slipped in here out of 28 a; but it appears to be found also in Ppp., as in the text of the comm. The latter explains víhāyās by vividhagamanaḥ, sarvatrā 'pratibaddhagatiḥ; ⌊cf. Bergaigne, Rel. Véd. iii. 287⌋. The verse (14 + 11 : 11 + 10[or 11?] = 46) has nothing of a jagatī character; ⌊but, if we excise bráhmaṇā, it is a perfectly good triṣṭubh⌋.

28. Encompassed with worship [as] defense am I, with Kaçyapa's light and splendor; let not the arrows that are the gods' attain me, nor those of men, let loose in order to slay (vadhā́ya).

SPP. reports his pada-mss. as reading yā́ instead of yā́ḥ at end of c; I have not observed the blunder in ours. All, both his and ours, give áva°sṛṣṭā instead of -ṭāḥ in d. The comm. adds the visarga in both words. A part of the verse is wanting in Ppp.

29. Guarded by righteousness and by all the seasons, guarded by what is and by what is to be am I; let not evil attain me, nor death; I interpose with a sea of speech.

That is, I set my uttered charms like a sea between me and them.

30. Let Agni [as] guardian protect me all about; let the sun, rising, thrust [away] the fetters of death; out-shining dawns, firm mountains — let a thousand breaths abide (ā-yat) in me.

Ppp. reads in a gopaṣ pari, transposes pādas b and c (corrupting to vicchantīr, and combining uṣasaṣ p-), and ends d with mayu te ramantām; and it then adds our xviii. 4. 49. The connection of our c is obscure; the comm. understands mṛtyupāçān nudantām or else mām anugṛhṇantu: the former is possible. ⌊The verse is to be read as 12 + 11 : 12 + 11.⌋

⌊Here ends the first and sole anuvāka, with 1 hymn and 30 verses. The words prathamo 'nuvākaḥ are not printed here in either edition, but are found in several of W's mss. The quotation from the Old Anukr. is ity etat samanukrāntam ṛcas triṅçad "viṣāsahiḥ."⌋

⌊Here ends also the thirty-second prapāṭhaka.⌋

Book XVIII.

⌊Funeral verses.⌋

⌊Funeral ceremonies. — This eighteenth book is the sixth and last book of the third grand division (books xiii.–xviii.) of the Atharvan collection, and shows very clearly that general unity of subject which is the distinguishing characteristic of the books of that division. In particular, however, the verses of the book do not show an orderliness of arrangement corresponding with that unity of subject. In large part, the verses of this book appear also in the Rigveda and in book vi. of the Tāittirīya Āraṇyaka, and the readings of these two texts are wont to agree together rather than with those of the Atharvaveda. As appears from the excerpts below, p. 814, the Pañcapaṭalikā seems to have a special name for this book, 'The Yamas' or 'Yama-hymns.' The book has been translated by Weber in the Sitzungsberichte der königlich Preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin (cited below as "Sb.") for 1895 and 1896. The bhāṣya is not wanting.⌋

⌊The funeral ceremonies of the ancient Hindus (like their nuptial ceremonies — see p. 738) have been often treated: thus, as early as 1801, by Colebrooke, in vol. vii. of the Asiatic Researches (the paper is reprinted by Cowell in his edition of H. T. Colebrooke's Essays, vol. i.: see pages 172–206); by H. H. Wilson, Works, ii. 270 f.; by R. Roth, ZDMG. viii. 467–475; by Max Müller, ZDMG. ix., appendix, pages i–lxxxii; by Monier-Williams in his Religious Thought and Life in India, chapter xi.; and by H. Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pages 570–591. Closely akin in subject is Whitney's essay on The Vedic doctrine of a future life, reprinted in his Oriental and Linguistic Studies, i. 46–63. — See also my notes upon the customs and ritual of cremation and burial (AGS. iv. 1–6) in my Sanskrit Reader, pages 401–405, and my notes on RV. x. 18 etc., Reader, pages 382–386: in both places I have given many pertinent bibliographical references. — The sixth prapāṭhaka of the Tāittirīya Āraṇyaka is devoted to the funeral rites, and contains much of the material of this book of the AV. Rājendralāla Mitra's analysis of the prapāṭhaka (pages 41–48 of the "Contents" prefixed to his text-edition) may well be consulted, and also pages 33–58 of his Introduction. — The most comprehensive treatment of the subject has been given by Dr. W. Caland, under the title Die Altindischen Todten- und Bestattungsgebräuche mit Benutzung handschriftlicher Quellen dargestellt, Verhandelingen der Koninklijke Akademie van Wetenschappen te Amsterdam, Afdeeling Letterkunde, Deel I. N° 6, Amsterdam, 1896, pages xiv + 193.⌋

⌊Hymns (or anuvākas) 1 and 2 are treated by Weber (as above) in the Sitzungsberichte for 1895, pages 815–866; and hymns (or anuvākas) 3 and 4, in the Sitzungsberichte for 1896, pages 253–294. — Weber's essays give first a general introduction for the whole book (Sb., 1895, pages 815–819); and then, for each anuvāka, a special introduction followed by a translation with running comment. Each special introduction treats of the ritual uses of the anuvāka concerned and of the provenience of the various verses or groups of verses which enter into its composition and also of some general matters relating to that anuvāka.⌋

⌊Divisions of the book. — The material of this book is divided by our text into 4 anuvākas and this division coincides with the division into 4 hymns. (Compare the anuvāka-division of books xii. and xiii. and xiv.) A conspectus for book xviii. follows:

Anuvākas	1	2	3	4
Hymns	1	2	3	4
Verses	61	60	73	89
Decad-division	5 tens + 11	6 tens	6 tens + 13	8 tens + 9

Of the "decads," anuvākas 1, 2, 3, and 4 contain respectively 6, 6, 7, and 9. The sum is 28 "decad"-sūktas. These 4 anuvākas and 28 sūktas are recognized by the Major Anukr., as noted below, next ¶. The sum of verses is 283, as is also stated by the same treatise, if we disregard an apparent misreading, ibidem.⌋

⌊The Major Anukr. begins its treatment of the book thus: o cit sakhāyam (xviii. 1. 1) iti caturanuvākam aṣṭāviṅçatisūktakaṁ tryaçītidviçatanavatyarcaṁ (? read -dviçatarcam) yamadevatyaṁ trāiṣṭubhaṁ kāṇḍam atharvā mantroktabahudevatyaṁ ca.⌋

⌊That is to say: 'The book that begins with o cit sakhāyam has four anuvākas and twenty-eight sūktas and two-hundred-and-eighty-three verses and is in triṣṭubh meter; the seer is Atharvan; and the deities are Yama and many others mentioned in its mantras.'⌋

⌊The Pañcapaṭalikā. — The excerpts from the Old Anukr. are given piecemeal at the end of each anuvāka and may here be reconstructed into a metrical couplet:

ekaṣaṣṭiç ca ṣaṣṭiç ca saptatis tryadhikā paraḥ:
ekonanavatiç cāi 'va yameṣu vihitā ṛcaḥ.

That is to say: 'Sixty-one; and sixty; the next [anuvāka] three-over-seventy; and ninety-less-one: are the verses disposed among the Yama-hymns.' These excerpts are quoted in part and verbatim by the Major Anukr.⌋

⌊It would thus appear from the Old Anukr. that the division into anuvākas is indeed of considerable antiquity. On the other hand, we cannot claim much intrinsic significance for the coincident division into hymns: at all events, the fact that a ritual sequence runs over the division-line between hymns 1 and 2 (see my note to 1. 49) makes against such significance; and my suggestion (p. 848) as to a possible misdivision between hymns 3 and 4 points the same way.⌋ ⌊See p. clx, near end.⌋

The whole book is wanting in Pāipp., although a very few of the verses (namely, 1. 46; 2. 13, 17; 3. 56; 4. 49) are found here and there in its text. In the Vāit., which has no chapter devoted to funeral rites, only fifteen scattered passages ⌊covering about a score of verses⌋ are used; but in the Kāuç., most of the verses from 1. 40 on to the end of the book are quoted, solely in the chapter (adhyāya xi.: sections or kaṇḍikās 80–89) which deals with funeral rites and rites to the Fathers or Manes. ⌊See p. 1016.⌋

[Atharvan.—ekaṣaṣṭi. yamadevatyam mantroktabahudevatyaṁ ca (41–43. sarasvatīdevatyās; 40. rāudrī; 44–46. mantroktapitṛdevatyās; 51, 52. pitrye). trāiṣṭubham: 8, 15. ārṣī pañkti; 14, 49, 50. bhurij; 18–20, 21–23. jagatī; 37, 38. paroṣṇih; 56, 57, 61. anuṣṭubh; 59. purābṛhatī.]

⌊Only one verse (46) is found in Pāipp., and that in book ii. Only four sūtras of the Vāit. cite verses from this hymn, and those verses are 44–46, 51, and 55. In the Kāuç., as already noted by Whitney, p. 814, nearly all the verses from 1.40 to the end of the book have their uses in the ritual. That Parts I. and II. and III. of the hymn as divided below are utterly impertinent to the proper subject of the book and therefore without ritual application, is a fact on which Weber, Sb. 1895, p. 819, has already animadverted.⌋

⌊A clear synoptic statement of the provenience of the different groups of verses, or of the single verses, that enter into the composition of this hymn appears so desirable for the critical study thereof, that I subjoin the following:

Part I., verses 1–16.—This is the hymn of Yama and Yamī, RV. x. 10, of 14 vss., but covering 16 in our text by reason of the strange insertion of RV. i. 84. 16 between the RV. vss. 5 and 6 (our 5 and 7) and the expansion of the RV. vs. 12 to two (our 13 and 14).—See Weber, Sb. 1895, p. 819.

Part II., verses 17–26.—This is the Agni-hymn, RV. x. 11, of 9 vss. The order of the last two is inverted, and to the whole part is prefixed a vs. (our 17) not found in other texts.—See Weber, Sb. 1895, p. 828.

Part III., verses 27–36.—This is the Agni-hymn, RV. x. 12, of 9 vss., with the order of vss. 3 and 4 inverted and with its last vs., 9, which we had above as our vs. 25, not repeated. To the whole is prefixed (as our 27, 28) a repetition of the Agni-vss., AV. vii. 82. 4, 5: perhaps vs. 5 (our 28: of which all four pādas begin with práti) is put here as a parallel to our 29 (on account of its pratyáñ); in that case, vs. 4 (our 27) might be regarded as a mere variation of vs. 5, with ánu four times for práti, etc.—See Weber, Sb. 1895, p. 830.

Part IV., verses 37, 38.—To Indra, RV. viii. 24. 1, 2. See Weber, l.c., p. 819 n.

Part V., verse 39.—Corresponds to RV. x. 31. 9.

Part VI., verse 40.—Here begin the vss. used in the ritual.—To Rudra, RV. ii. 33. 11.

Part VII., verses 41–43.—To Sarasvatī with the Fathers, RV. x. 17. 7–9.

Part VIII., verses 44–46.—To the Fathers, RV. x. 15. 1, 3, 2.

Part IX., verse 47.—To the Fathers, RV. x. 14. 3.

Part X., verse 48.—To Soma, RV. vi. 47. 1.

Part XI., verses 49, 50.—To Yama, RV. x. 14. 1, 2.

Part XII., verses 51, 52.—To the Fathers, RV. x. 15. 4, 6.

Part XIII., verse 53.—Tvaṣṭā duhitre etc., RV. x. 17. 1.

Part XIV. a, verse 54.—To the dead man, RV. x. 14. 7.

Part XIV. b, verse 55.—Averruncatio, RV. x. 14. 9.

Part XV., verses 56, 57.—Fire-kindling, RV. x. 16. 12 and variation.

Part XVI., verses 58–60.—To Yama and the Fathers, RV. x. 14. 6, 5, 4.

Part XVII., verse 61.—To the Fathers (?), SV. i. 92.⌋

⌊It thus appears that every verse of our hymn has its correspondent in the RV. save four (or five, if one wishes to count vs. 57): to wit, vs. 17, which is not found to my knowledge in any other text; vss. 27, 28, repeated from AV. vii. (see above); and vs. 61, found in SV.⌋

Translated: as AV. hymn, by Weber, as already noted, Sb. 1895, pages 825–842; Griffith, ii. 215. — Translated, furthermore, in so far as it corresponds to RV. material (see above), by the RV. translators, Wilson, Ludwig, Grassmann; 8 of the 14 verses 47 to 60 are from RV. x. 14, which has been translated by Geldner, Siebenzig Lieder des Rigveda, p. 146. In particular, Part I. (RV. x. 10), "Yama and Yamī," has been rendered by Muir, v. 288–291; Geldner, l.c., p. 142; Ludwig, in his Rigveda, vol. ii., no. 989, with comment in vol. v., p. 510. With reference to this same Part I., J. Ehni, Die ursprüngliche Gottheit des vedischen Yama, Leipzig, 1896, pages 139–141, may be consulted. Most important is Geldner's article in the Gurupūjākaumudī, pages 19–22, in which he subjects his older views concerning RV. x. 10 to a critical revision in the light of Sāyaṇa's interpretation.

1. Unto a friend would I turn with friendship; having gone through much ocean, may the pious one take a grandson of [his] father, considering further onward upon the earth (kṣám).

That is, 'making thoughtful provision for the future.' The verse is, without variant, RV. x. 10. 1. Our Bs.E. have purú in saṁhitā. The verse is also SV. i. 340, which has a considerably different text: for a, ā́ tvā sákhāyaḥ sakhyā́ vavṛtyus; in b, arṇavā́ṅ jagamyāḥ; for d, asmín kṣáye pratarā́ṁ dī́dyānaḥ. The comm. takes vavṛtyām as of causative value, = vartayāmi: dīdhyānas he explains first (as if it were dīdyānas) by dīpyamānas, 'becoming illustrious over the whole earth'; but also, alternatively, by "thinking [upon a means of impregnating me]." — The word sakhyā́ he takes as instr. of sakhyá 'friendship' ⌊so Lanman, Noun-Inflection, JAOS. x. 336⌋, and renders by sakhitvena; but also alternatively as instr. of sakhī, 'by means of a female friend,' a go-between!

⌊An oxytone feminine stem sakhī́ corresponding (cf. JAOS. x. 368) to a barytone masculine sákhi should accent its instr. sakhyā̀ (JAOS. x. 368, top, 381), not sakhyā́.⌋ ⌊Aufrecht, Festgruss an Böhtlingk, 1888, page 1, took sakhyā́ as a dative of sakhyá; and Pischel, Ved. Stud. i. 65 (title-page dated 1889), made a cogent and interesting argument against my view and came (independently, without doubt) to the same conclusion as Aufrecht. — For Geldner's interpretation of the whole verse, see Gurupūjākaumudī, p. 19–20.⌋

2. Thy friend wants (vaç) not that friendship of thine, that she of like sign should become of diverse form; the sons of the great Asura, heroes, sustainers of the sky (dív), look widely about.

That is, Varuṇa's spies are on the watch against such unpermitted acts. Our Bp.Bs. read in b sálakṣmyā. The comm. understands salakṣmā as ekodaratvalakṣaṇaṁ yasyāḥ 'marked as from the same womb,' and viṣurūpā as "changing from sister to wife." The same expression occurs below in 1. 34, and variations of it in TS. i. 3. 10^1 (quoted further at vi. 3. 11^2) and MS. i. 2. 17 (a passage corresponding to, but different from, that in TS.); also VS. vi. 20 b (do.). It seems to have a kind of proverbial currency, as applied to things that change from one character to another. The comm. renders pari khyan by pari vadanti or nirākariṣyanti. The verse is RV. x. 10. 2.

3. Truly those immortals want that — posterity (?tyajás) of the one mortal; may thy mind be set in our mind; mayest thou enter [as] husband a wife's body.

The verse shows no variant from RV. x. 10. 3. Bs.E. read in d tanvàm. The comm. explains tyajásam by tyāgam, garbhān nirgamanam, utpattim. ⌊Cf. Weber, Sb., p. 824.⌋

4. What we (pl.) did not do formerly, why [do that] now? speaking righteousness, should we prate unrighteousness? The Gandharva in the waters and the watery woman (yóṣā) — that is our (du.) union (nā́bhi), that our ⌊du.⌋ highest relation (jāmí).

RV. x. 10. 4 reads ṛtā́ in b, and sā́ no n- in d, but nāu at the end. ⌊The inconcinnity of number as between no and nāu tempts one to think that here at least the text of the AV. has scored a point against that of the RV.⌋ Ánṛta seems to be used hère, as hardly elsewhere, in the directly opposed sense to ṛtá. The comm. explains rapema by spaṣṭam brūmaḥ. ⌊Cf. Weber, Sb., p. 825.⌋

5. Verily, the generator made us (du.) in the womb man and spouse — god Tvashṭar, Savitar of all forms; none overthrow (pra-mī) his ordinances (vratá); earth knows us ⌊two⌋ as such, also heaven.

RV. x. 10. 5 has no variants. The treatment of pṛthivī́ in d as pragṛhya is noticed in Prāt. iii. 34 c. ⌊Presumably, W's literal version of d would be 'earth is cognizant of that [fact] of us two, also heaven.'⌋

6. Who yokes to the pole today the kine of righteousness, the diligent, the bright, the slow to wrath (?durhṛṇāyú), that have arrows in the mouth, that shoot at the heart, amiable ones? whoso shall prosper their burden, he shall live.

This strangely intruded verse ⌊cf. Weber, Sb. 1895, p. 819 n.⌋ is RV. i. 84. 16 (also found in TS. iv. 2. 11³; MS. iii. 16. 4), without variant ⌊save that TS. accents dúrhṛṇāyūn⌋. SV. has it at i. 341 (next after our verse 1), with the bad variants āsánn eṣām apsuvā́haḥ in c. ⌊Cf. Aufrecht's *Rigveda*², vol. i., preface, p. xliv.⌋ The comm. understands bhṛtyā́m ṛṇádhat in d as here translated; also durhṛṇāyū́n ⌊alternatively⌋ in b.

7. Who knows of that first day? who saw it? who shall proclaim it here? Great is the ordinance (dhā́man) of Mitra, of Varuṇa; why, O lustful one, wilt thou speak to men with deceit (?vī́ci)?

RV. x. 10. 6 has no variants. The comm. blunderingly attributes the verse to Yamī; he also takes vī́cyā ⌊p. vī́cyā⌋ as for vī́cyās, an adj. meaning vividham añcanto gacchantaḥ saṁcarantaḥ, and qualifying nṝ́n, which is used as nominative, = narās! ⌊See Geldner, Gurupūjākaumudī, p. 21–22.⌋

8. Desire of Yama hath come unto me Yamī, in order to lying together in the same lair (yóni); I would fain yield (ric) my body, as wife to husband; may we whirl off, like two chariot wheels.

That is, probably, like the wheels of two chariots interlocked with each other in battle. RV. x. 10. 7 has no variants from our text. The comm. makes ví vṛheva mean saṁçleṣaṁ karavāva, adding itaretarayoḥ saṁçleṣo vivarhā; and his first explanation of rathyā is as = rathyayā 'on the carriage road'! Our P.M.I. accent vṛhéva. The metrical definition of the Anukr. as pañkti is very strange, though the verse can be reduced to 40 syllables by refusing to make ordinary resolutions.

9. They stand not, they wink not, those spies of the gods who go about here; with another than me, O lustful one, go quickly; with him whirl off like two chariot wheels.
